Board For Service Men To Be Erected

On Town Lot—Sponsored By The Walton Woman's Club.

Responding to a general sentiment, the Walton Woman's Club has sponsored and contracted for a metal display outdoor signboard to be erected on the "Town Lot", near Main and Church Streets, approximately opposite the fire engine house, on which board the names of all members of the United States Armed Forces from the two Walton voting precints will be painted.

The board will contain ninety square feet, with display border in the National colors. The sign will be constructed by the Rouse Sign Service and when completed will cost something over $75.00. Between $30.00 and $40.00 was pledged immediately upon announcement, and the remainder should be collected without personal solicitation. Lusby's Grocery, Conrad Hardware Store, and Mann's Grocery are designated as places at which donations will be received. Whatever you feel that you can give, take it to one of these three places this week, as the sign is now in the course of construction and we hope to have it up next week.

The committee in charge is anxious to have the name of every member of the United States Armed Forces from the two Walton voting precints and does not want to omit any name, and so the committee requests that the parents or other interested parties related to any member of th Armed Forces of these two precints contact either Mrs. John L. Vest, Mrs. C. Chambers or Mrs. John C. Bedinger so that no name will be omitted.

Verona Boy Selected As Specialist

Great Lakes, Illiniois, Harold Griffith Vest, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Vest, Rt. 2, Verona, Kentucky, has been selected to become a specialist in the Navy and is enrolled in the school for Fire Controlmen, at the Service School of the U. S. Naval Training Station here. Upon completing the 16-week course he will be eligible for advancement to a petty officer rating.

He was assigned to the school after displaying an aptitude for this type of work in a series of tests taken during his recruit training. Upon graduation he will serve under veteran petty officers in his specialized field, receiving more practical instruction and experience.

Nineteen of the 49 specialist trades used in the Navy are taught in the Service School here at Great Lakes.

Farm Bureau Elects Officers.

The Boone County Farm Bureau completed its permanent organization on last Thursday with 25 members and the election of officers for 1943. Lloyd Sieckman, temporary chairman and John E. Crigler, temporary secretary-treasurer were elected permanent chairman and secretary-treasurer respectively for 1943. S. D. S. Ranson of Walton was elected vice-chairman.

The local Farm Bureau plans to lend its support to the State and National Farm Bureau organizations that have been doing a splendid job toward getting parity prices for farm commodities. Two dollars and a half of the five dollar annual membership fee goes to the state and national organizations.

Charter members of the new organizations are H. E. White, Wilton Stephens, B. W. Southgate Chas. Beall, Joel Gray, Lloyd D. McGlasson, Lloyd Sieckman, J. C. Bedinger, Beckam Shields, John E. Crigler, O. W. Chinn, Ben F. Bedinger, W. A. Martin, J. C. Acree, T. H. McCaffrey, H. R. Forkner, O. R. Russ, W. W. King, S. D. S. Ranson, C. Liston Hempfling, Chas. L. Hempfling, Shirley Ferguson, L. H. Thomas, John J. Klopp, E. Y. Randall and W. L. Pressor.

C. Liston Hempfling was elected delegate and Lloyd Sieckman alternate delegate to the State Farm Bureau convention at Louisville beginning next Wednesday, January 13.

A County Board of directors will be elected at the next meeting to be held in February.

Organ Dedicated By Rev. R. R. Rose

Sunday, December 27th at The First Methodist Church, Paintsville, Ky.

The new Hammond Organ, just purchased by the First Methodist Church, Paintsville, Ky was dedicated Sunday, Dec. 27th at the 10:45 a. m. hour of worship. The Rev. R. R. Rose, pastor, preached the dedicatory sermon and preformed the rites with the assistance of the Official Board and the Congregation. Rev. Rose was formerly pastor of the Taylor Street Methodist Church, Newport, Ky., but was assigned to the Paintsville First Methodist Church in September, 1942, about four months ago.

The organ was purchased on December 21, installed two days later and dedicated on December 27, free on indebtedness. The installation consists of a two manual console, and two, tone-cabinets one of which is used as an echo organ in the rear of the church overhead.

The members of the Official Board are, Judge Fred Howes, Chmn., Paul C. Hager, Secy-Treas., Garland Rice, D. H. Dorton, V. S. Williams, Mrs. Beulah Meade, Howes Meade, Joe Radcliffe, Howard Frall, Sr., O. N. Evans, J. W. Turner, W. H. Salyer, and Abe Barber.

Not only has the entire amount of money needed for the organ been raised in full but also there is a surplus left in the treasury for the music fund of the church. Other improvements have also been made including the heating system which is now adequate.

Important Notice To Truck Operators

Cleveland, I., Jan 2—Sighting a possible breakdown of trucking operations in Ohio, Kentucky, and West Virginia, after January 31st, R. D. Thomas, regional manager of the Motor Transport Division, Office of Defense Transportation, today, again urged truck operators who have not received Certificates of War Necessity, or who have not been allotted sufficient mileage and fuel ration to immediately contact the nearest ODT office.

"After January 31st," said Mr. Thompas, "fuel, tires and parts will be alloted only on the basis of conditions set forth on the Certificate of War Necessity, and no more temporary rations, under which many vehicles are now being operated, will be issued.

"If truck operators feel their mileage allotment is insufficient to take care of their needs, I urge him to make an immediate appeal for increased rations.

"Both appeals and applications for Certificates of War Necessity must go through a procedure which requires time in handling. If a truck operator wishes to be assured his appeal or application will be processed in time, he should act now."

Farmers, whose Certificate allotments are inadequate for their necessary operations, should apply for corrections through the County Farm Transportation Committees of the U. S. D. A. County War Boards, unless it is more convenient for them to deal directly with an ODT field office, Thomas said.

ODT has, for convenience of vehicle-owners, who do not live near regular ODT offices, established 60 temporary field offices in Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia, staffed by ODT representatives throughout the country. These representatives will make their headquarters in local Chambers of Commerce and other civic centers.

Mr. Thomas emphasized that as long as the fuel and equipment is available, no necessary commercial vehicles—including farm vehicles—will be crippled by the Certificate of War Necessity program.

"Appeals and applications must be made promptly by truck operators so that the requests may be disposed of before January 31st, otherwise temporary suspension of operations may result," Mr. Thompson warned.

McDONALD—HEITZ

The friends of Mr. J. L. McDonald who is field manager for Beatrice Cream Company of Cincinnati, Ohio will be surprised to hear of his marriage to Miss Flora Heitz of Louisville. The wedding took place at the home of Rev. O. Steger in Latonia on December 24th. The couple will make their home in Louisville, Ky. His many friends will join in wishing him a happy and successful future.

Navy Enlistment To Be Open Again For Men In The 18 to 37 Year Old Age Group.

Announcement that men in the 18 to 37 year-old age group will be accepted for enlistment in the U. S. Navy beginning Monday, January 11, was made today by Lieutenant Commander L. E. Oeharing, officer in charge of the Cincinnati Recruiting District.

Commander Oehring stated that men in this age group must apply at their local draft board for a "Navy induction notice" before reporting to the Navy recruiting station for enlistment.

Seventeen-year old youths and men in the 38 to 50 year-old age group are free to volunteer for the Navy without a Navy induction notice. Enlistment of men in the latter two age groups never has been suspended.

Andrew Jackson Littrell

Andrew Jackson Littrell was born July 9, 1851, in Wayne Co., Ky. He was the youngest child of a family of six children born to Henson and Rachel Pridemore Littrell.

With his passing closes the history of this immediate family, as he was the last surving member.

He was married Feb. 6, 1873 to Julia Frances Morris of Verona, Ky. To this union were born 10 children, 5 of whom died in enfancy. The others: Robert, who passed away April 18, 1918; William, with whom Mr. Littrell spent his last days; Conner of Crittenden, Ky.; Mrs. Mande Walton who passed away July 23, 1937 and Claude of Newport, Ky.

He united with the Bethel Baptist church of Verona, Ky. in early manhood and was a faithful member as long as health permitted. The last six years of his life, he was bereft of his eye sight thus taking away many of life's pleasures.

Mr. Littrell passed away Dec 20, 1942 at the ripe age of 91 years, 5 months an d11 days.

He leaves to mourn his passing, his devoted companion, with whom he has passed nearly 70 years of his life, his three sons, William, Conner and Claude, twenty-four grandchildren, twenty eight great grandchildren and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted at the Methodist church at Whitcomb, Ind. in the presents of a very large crowd of sorring relatives and friends with Rev. Hunter assisted by Rev. Thompson, Baptist ministers, also the Methodist minister. Songs were sung by Rev. Thompson and Mrs. Hunter with no music accompianist, one song "Precious Memories" was sung at the grave. As the custom is in the state of Indiana as the funeral possession was nearing the church the church bell started ringing never ceasing until the possission interred the church. The remains were layed to rest in the beautiful Maple Grove cemetary at Brooksville, Indiana.

Wm. Moster and Sons had charge of funeral arrangements.

I cannot say, and I will not say
That he is dead. He is just away.

Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love of here.

Think of him still as the same I say,
He is not dead. He is just away.

K. F. L.

Rev. and Mrs. Geo. S. Caroland spent the holidays at Glascow, Ky., with Mrs. Carlond's parents.

Carrollton Market Averages $44.63

During The Eleven Selling Days Before Christmas, Establishing A New Record Of Sales.

The more than nine million pounds of burley sold over the floors of the Carrollton market during the eleven selling days before Christmas established a new record of sales for the Carrollton market, it was announced today by John C. Bond, supervisor of sales. The hughe amount of burley was gobbled up by the buyers in just 55 hours of selling time, but the average price paid on the Carrollton market was $44.63 or 82 cents above the general average for all the markets in the state. Tennessee markets averaged $41.57 and all other markets combined averaged $41.83.

In line with the record-breaking gross sales and the new record average price paid, it is estimated that sales for the season will establish the third new record this year. Those acquainted with the prospects state that gross sales on the market this year will be between sixteen and eighteen million pounds.

Post holiday opening of the state's markets has been delayed a week in order to allow OPA time in which to make plans for apportioning the tobacco to the different buyers. The new plan will allow all companies to purchase a fair share of the crop at ceiling prices. OPA anounced Saturday that the markets would be allowed to resume auctions on Monday, January 11.

Victory Fund Drive Successful

Showing a Total of $370,927.75 In Bond Sales, For Boone County.

The Victory Fund Drive closed on December 31st showing a total of $370,927.75 in bond sales, for Boone County. This is short of our $490,000.00 quota but reflects a splendid effort on the part of the Precinct Chairmen and their co-workers, when it must be considered that Boone County is strictly an agricultural county. Many people work outside of our State and subscribed for bonds in other states through their employers, for which Boone County did not receive credit. Another matter that retarded subscriptions is the fact that farmers have sold only a portion of their tobacco crops in December and were not prepared to subscribe for bonds. Several large subscriptions have been reported since the drive ended but can not be counted in the December drive.

It is not possible to give the sales by Precincts at this time but as all sales were handled by the banks and Post Offices of the county, we are listing the sales as made by each bank and the Post-office in its town, regardless of precincts;

Peoples Deposit Bank and Post Office	$103,313.75
Dixie State Bank and Post Office	58,356.25
Hebron Deposit Bank	57,558.25
Union Deposit Bank--	50,002.75
Florence Deposit Bank and Post Office	39,487.50
Farmers Bank	22,891.75
Citizens Deposit Bank	21,950.00
Verona Bank	17,337.50
Total	370,927.75

It is known that at least four precincts oversold their quotas and had it been a little later in the season all precincts would have reached their goal.

Information has reached us that another drive will be made in April and the County Chairman, Mr. Renaker, is requesting that the county organization remain intact and be ready to work when the April drive is announced.

The Precinct Chairmen and their co-workers deserve much credit for the time and personal expense incurred in securing this large subscription for bonds in such a short time, even though the County quota was not reached. The nation's quota of nine billion dollars was exceeded by approximately three billion dollars.

Christmas holiday guest of Mr. and Mrs. Powers Conrad were Mrs. Powers sisters, Miss Etta Mae Lawrence of New York, Mrs. Walter Zulager and Mr. Zulager of Covington and friend Miss Sara Ellen Peak of Louisville, Mrs. Florman Link, Mr. Link and family of Williamstown joined the other members of their family for the Christmas dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad. Miss Lawrence made the trip by plane from New York.

Mrs. Daisy Kemper

Mrs. Daisy Kemper, eldest daughter of the late Russell and Lucy Ann (Wilson) Grimsley was born September 17th, 1879 near Eagle Tunnel. Departed this life Dec. 17th, 1942 age 63 yr. 3 mo.

Early in life she united with the Baptist church and continued through life a faithful member. On September 8th, 1904 she was married to Wm. H. Kemper who passed to the great beyond eight years ago. Three children were born to this union, William dying in infancy, Alfred and Mrs. Zereida Lowe who survive, also two grandchildren, Hardin and Joe Lowe, a stepson, Lloyd Kemper, a step granddaughter, Evelyn Kemper, three sisters, Mrs. Emma Noddler of Erlanger, Mrs. Pearl Brock of Crittenden, Mrs. Nora Roberts of Glencoe, two nephews, Russell and Raymond Brock, two neices, Lucy Anne Kemper and Mrs. Woodrow Poland and one great neice, Betty Jean Poland survive.

Funeral services were held Sunday, December 20th at Oakland Baptist by Rev. Smith, Warsaw. Burial in Oakland Cemetery with J. Vernon Kemper, Undertaker in charge.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Wallace Urges Post-War Federation; Giraud's Choice for North Africa Post Bolsters French Unity Against Axis; Russ Continue Ground-Gaining Drives

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Col. Merian C. Cooper (left) points to map of China and Burma as he makes report to Robert Lovett, assistant secretary of war for air, in Washington. Colonel Cooper returned to the United States after serving as chief of staff of Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of the China Air Task Force.

WORLD FEDERATION:
Asked by Wallace

Ever since his "quart of milk a day" speech forecasting bettered conditions for the world's underprivileged, Vice President Henry A. Wallace has been regarded as a No. 1 administration spokesman on post-war reconstruction.

Thus his latest address proposing a world council to preserve peace and promote the general welfare after the war received close inspection in world chancelleries, for it was taken as a major administration statement of future plans.

Wallace's recipe for international organization after the war: "The maximum of home rule that can be maintained along with the minimum of centralized authority that must come into existence to give the necessary protection."

The vice president outlined a four-fold objective for future peace: "To preserve the liberty, equality, security and unity of the United Nations—liberty in the political sense; equality of opportunity in international trade; security against war and business depression due to international causes; and unity of purpose in promoting the general welfare of the world."

Concerning the treatment of defeated nations he advocated not only military but "psychological disarmament."

For the American people, Wallace said, "the war is entering its grimmest phase" where we will learn for the first time the meaning of war privations. But, he added, Hitler's "desperate bid for a Nazi world order has reached and passed its highest point."

4-WAY OFFENSIVE:
By Russ Armies

The Russians continued to prove that while the summer might have belonged to the invading Nazi hosts, the winter was the season for Red revival.

Four strong Soviet armies were proving this in four separate drives against the cold and weary Germans. These offensives sprung with the purpose of destroying Nazi manpower and equipment and weakening Hitler's hold on the Eastern front were centered on the Rzhev sector, in the Stalingrad area, in the reaches of the Middle Don and in the central Caucasus.

The central Caucasus drive was the newest on the Red schedule and was started south of Nalchik, where Nazi armored mountain units had been trying unsuccessfully for weeks to break through to the Georgian military highway in Transcaucasia.

Most significant news came from the Stalingrad area, however, for Russian communiques reported the capture of Koteinikovski, key transportation town anchoring a 200-mile stretch of the Stalingrad-Caucasus railroad and a supply depot for the Nazis' eastern operations. Here big stores of Axis supplies were taken over by the Reds. From Kotelnikovski the Russians began a spearhead drive toward Rostov.

Meanwhile the Red encirclement of 22 German divisions trapped before Stalingrad was tightened by Russ advances of from 37 to 58 miles from the southwest.

GIRAUD:
Assures Unity

Gen. Henri Giraud had been the Allies' original choice for the post of high commissioner of North Africa. Then the bullet of the 20-year-old assassin that killed Adm. Jean Darlan made Giraud's selection inevitable by the French imperial council.

That the elevation of Giraud to the slain Darlan's post had a unifying effect was immediately manifest. Not only did the French North African civil and military forces rally behind the new commissioner, but Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, quickly pledged his support of Giraud's regime and urged the formation of a temporary government to unite all French elements.

While the murder of Darlan undeniably settled the controversy raging through the United Nations over the North African alliance of the Allies and the ex-Vichy collaborationist, observers believed that before his death Darlan had honestly recanted his former views and was wholeheartedly leading his forces for the liberation of France. And that defended the wisdom of General Eisenhower's first alliance with Darlan.

Tunisia Battlefront

Although tropical sunshine bad dried the surface of Tunisia's boggy roads, the gumbo mud continued to hamper free movement of either the Allied or Axis forces. Principal strategic key was the town of Medjez-el-Bab, where General Dwight Eisenhower's army was endeavoring to anchor its positions for the coming all-out offensive against strongly held Tunis and Bizerte. That these positions could not be won without fierce struggles was indicated by reports that the Allied forces had withdrawn from an advanced hill six miles northeast of Medjez-el-Bab.

Air offensives continued against Axis bases in Tunisia and Axis supply lines from Sicily and Italy with Flying Fortresses battering Sousse, Tunis and Bizerte.

French forces under General Giraud bad carried out aggressive action along the "waist" of Tunisia, taking the town of Pichon and advancing in a drive to prevent the effective junction of Marshal Rommel's Libyan forces with those of General Walther Nehring in Tunisia.

DRAFT:
250,000 Monthly

With fgbting forces of 9,000,000 forecast for the United States by the end of 1943, draft officials estimated that between 250,000 and 300,000 men 18 througb 37 years old will be called to the colors monthly this year.

Approximately half of the 1943 draftees will represent the 18 and 19-year-olds. The remainder will come from the ranks of childless married men, since the pool of unmarried men available for military service has been virtually exhausted.

Included in the 9,000,000 fighting forces will be an army of 7,500,000; a navy of 1,500,000; a marine corps of 400,000 and coast guard enrollments of 300,000.

CANNED RATIONING:
Little Panic Buying

Fears that a nation-wide scramble of housewives to buy canned foodstuffs would develop following official disclosure that a point rationing system would be inaugurated in February failed to materialize as reports from retail grocers indicated only isolated instances of panic buying.

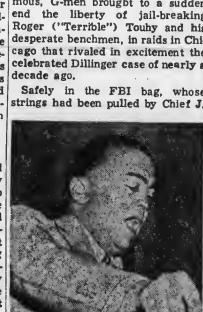
Announcement of the ration plan which covers more than 200 canned food items made by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard had been attacked by trade representatives as "premature" and almost certain to result in public hoarding and unfair distribution of available supplies.

Federal authorities defended the advance announcement on the ground that complicated controls were necessary to administer the program. They contended, too, that if the public were not notified, rumors might circulate and cause hysterical purchasing.

Grocers attributed the absence of panic buying to two major reasons. One was the government's requirement that before a rationing book could be issued, any hoarded goods had to be declared and the equivalent number of rationing coupons surrendered at the time of registration. The other was that any case of boarding where false representation was made, might be punishable by a maximum fine of $10,000 or one year in prison or both.

CASUALTY LISTS:
Full Publicity Ahead

Confident that the American public can "take bad news," government officials revealed that the ban on nation-wide publication of war casualty and prisoner lists had been lifted.



The new policy, officials said, would permit publication anywhere and in their entirety, lists of men killed, wounded, missing or taken prisoner. Previously newspapers had been restricted to publishing the names of men whose next of kin lived in their particular circulation area.

Explaining the new ruling, one spokesman declared it had been determined that the publication of casualty lists would not jeopardize national security and moreover, "the public has enough stamina and fortitude to take the bad news of long casualty lists if the papers care to publish them."

G-MEN:
Spring Neat Trap

Acting with all the detective-thriller technique for which they are famous, G-men brought to a sudden end the liberty of jail-breaking Roger ("Terrible") Touhy and his desperate benchmen, in raids in Chicago that rivaled in excitement the celebrated Dillinger case of nearly a decade ago.

Safely in the FBI bag, whose strings had been pulled by Chief J. Edgar Hoover, were Roger Touhy, Basil ("The Owl") Banghart and three minor criminal members of the band of seven that bad escaped from the Joliet, Ill., penitentiary last October. Dead from G-man gunfire were James O'Connor and St. Clair McInerney, bank bandits and safe crackers.

J. EDGAR HOOVER

The capture and killing of the desperadoes climaxed one of the most neatly laid traps in FBI history. The gang, living in separate hideouts on Chicago's North side, had been shadowed for weeks. Hoover's men moved swiftly when they spring the trap.

TOJO:
'Real War Starts'

Blend-visaged Gen. Hideki Tojo, war minister, had no bland words for the Japanese people when he appeared before the Nipponese diet to report on the state of the war. Instead, he warned grimly that the Allies were preparing to deliver "counter - blows of great importance" and added that signs indicated "the real war is starting from now."

Tojo admitted that Jap forces in Burma, New Guinea and the Solomons were on the defensive and pointed out that the phase of surprise Jap attacks and lightning success was over. He said, however, that his armies in these areas were "successfully frustrating enemy attacks by counter-blows."

Before ending on a somber note that "Japan is engaged day and night in providing against air raids," Tojo listed some of the plunders of war his forces have acquired, adding that transports had brought home 1,800,000 tons of material.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

WASHINGTON: The navy department announced that dive bombers from Guadalcanal had sunk a 3,000-ton Japanese vessel near Wickham island in the central Solomons. The destruction of the ship raised the number of Japanese vessels sunk in the Solomons to 54. Wickham island is within 120 nautical miles of Guadalcanal. There is an anchorage nearby where Japs have been active.

MOSCOW: As a reward for leading the recent successful break through the German lines on the Middle Don, Vassily Mikhailovich Badanov was elevated to the rank of lieutenant general of tank forces and awarded the highest Russian military decoration, the order of Suvorov. General Badanov's feat was described as "unprecedented in scope."

'INSIDE' HERO STORY

Behind the award of the Congressional Medal of Honor to 31-year-old Lieut. Com. Bruce McCandless of the U. S. Cruiser San Francisco is a story almost without parallel in the annals of naval warfare.

Inside fact is that shortly before he was cited for heroism "above and beyond the call of duty," in the smashing November 13 Solomons naval victory, McCandless wasn't sure whether he would be decorated or hauled on the carpet for insubordination.

His citation was one of glittering generalities, but here is the whole story of what happened:

McCandless was on the bridge of the San Francisco when it led a spectacular assault between two columns of Jap vessels, firing point-blank at both. In the roaring 35-minute engagement, Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan, commander of the task force, and Capt. Cassin Young, skipper of the San Francisco, were killed, as well as other officers outranking McCandless.

The young lieutenant commander did not notify superior officers on other vessels in the task force of Callaghan's death, but immediately took command and began giving orders to the other vessels in Callaghan's name. Ordinarily, this would constitute a rank breach of discipline. However, McCandless acted as he did for two reasons:

(1) He was thoroughly familiar with the plan of attack, having been present at liffategy powwows of Callaghan and Young when it was mapped out, and he feared there might be a slipup in carrying out the daring task maneuver if the command passed to another ship after Callaghan's death.

(2) It was vital to keep the news of Callaghan's death from the Japs, and they undoubtedly would have intercepted the radio communication.

After the engagement, when a friend suggested that he might be decorated for his brilliant "incognito" leadership, McCandless is quoted as replying that he would be lucky to get off without a "court martial." However, the navy was only too glad to give praise where praise was due.

MARCHING INTO TOKYO

Mel Maas of Minnesota, who is both marine corps colonel and congressman, has two mementos from the Solomons—a 50-yen Jap note and a 10-shilling note of Jap invasion money.

Maas got the money off dead Jap soldiers.

The other day he was displaying it to Representative Gordon Canfield of New Jersey and two British WRENS, comparable to our WAVES, who were having lunch with Canfield in the house restaurant. The WRENS, Third Officers Dorothy Taite and Elizabeth Gibson, were especially interested in the yen note, which was covered with bright-colored designs and pictures.

"Be sure to give that money back to me," said Maas. "I have big plans for it."

"Yes, these notes will make a wonderful souvenir to show your grandchildren," commented one of the WRENS.

"Souvenir — nothing," exclaimed Maas. "I'm keeping that money to spend in Tokyo."

GUARDING THE WHITE HOUSE

The White House called Speaker Sam Rayburn the other day, asked him to come in to see the President, bringing with him a group of congressmen of his own choosing.

When they arrived at the front gate of the White House, in the speaker's car, the chauffeur said to the Secret Service men: "This is the speaker, and members of congress."

The guards were skeptical. "The speaker is all right, but how about these other men?" Whereupon they insisted upon a personal examination of the other members of congress.

When Rayburn got inside the White House, he was as mad as that good-natured Texan ever becomes. He found a senior officer of Secret Service and said: "Look here, when I am asked to bring members of congress to the White House, I want them to be admitted without any third degree examination. You ought to know I wouldn't bring any bomb throwers!"

Note: The White House has been more closely guarded in this war than at any other time in history; including World War I. Streets on three sides are blocked off, and no one can get near without a pass, even a member of congress.

Importance of World Trade Turns Spotlight on Sec. Hull

Post-War Rebuilding of International Structure Will Get Consideration Before Armistice.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Hints to the effect that the President will make a discussion of post-war conditions a part of his forthcoming message to the 78th congress foreshadows the re-entry on the diplomatic stage in a prominent role of the figure of Secretary of State Cordell Hull. In wartime, diplomacy plays its part chiefly behind the scenes—the brass hats have their day in public. But there are now several indications that Secretary Hull is about to take the spotlight again in an old familiar role, namely, as spokesman for the economic platform which he made a part of our foreign policy before the war.

To understand Secretary Hull's importance today it is well to recall the words spoken to me not long ago by a very keen diplomatist:

"Secretary Hull," he said, "was probably chosen as secretary of state for four reasons: One, because of the President's political debt to him and because they were friends; two, because he had a diplomatic gift; three, because there was vital need for liaison between the state department and congress; and four, because of Hull's deep knowledge of international trade relations."

Reason No. 3 is more important than ever, and although reason No. 4 may have been a pure coincidence at the time, it is turning out to be one of the most important factors.

Today "reason No. 4" is coming to the front. There are those in the administration who believe that America must play a vital part in the building of the post-war world if freedom of enterprise is to be maintained. They realize, too, that unless conditions of peace are outlined before the armistice, isolationist sentiment may break out again and force America back into extreme nationalism when the war is over, as it did in 1918.

Turning Point Toward Depression?

America's withdrawal from world affairs in 1918 is considered by the people who believe in Hull's international trade policy as the turning point that led straight to the depression of the twenties. Then it was that America began building up her tariff walls, which many economists consider one of the causes of World War II.

Throughout this period the foreign war debts were festering. America continued to demand payment of those debts and at the same time to raise trade barriers that curtailed international commerce and thus made the debt payments impossible.

Then came the New Deal and the introduction of many measures, some of which tended further toward nationalism. Secretary Hull, who had been fighting an uphill fight for free trade relations without much success, especially after the sabotaging of the London Economic conference in 1933, finally launched his reciprocal trade agreements plan.

Hull's progress was retarded for many natural reasons. In the first place, it was too slow and undramatic a procedure to engage the President's active support. The President leans to the dramatic, does not pretend to understand fiscal matters.

In the second place, the traditional state department attitude was one of aristocratic disdain of all matters involving trade.

Lend-Lease Policy Fitted Into Picture

Then came that new and strange device, the lend-lease policy. It was inaugurated, first in the hope that we could fight the war in absentia by furnishing Britain the tools, and secondly, to avoid the recurrence of that painful phenomenon, the war debts. And then, just when, it is not known, or exactly how, Secretary Hull was able to revive his policy of unhampered trade by introducing Article VII into the lend-lease agreements.

Briefly, Article VII provides:

"In the final determination of the benefits to be provided to the United States of America by the Government of.....in return for aid furnished under the Act of Congress of March 11, 1941, the terms and conditions thereof shall be such as not to burden commerce between the two countries, but to promote mutually advantageous economic relations between them and the betterment of world-wide economic relations. To that end, they shall include provision for agreed action by the United States of America and....., open to participation by all other countries of like mind, directed to the expansion, by appropriate international and domestic measures, of production, employment, and the exchange and consumption of goods, which are the material foundations of the liberty and welfare of all peoples; to the elimination of all forms of discriminatory treatment in international commerce; to the reduction of tariffs and other trade barriers; and, in general, to the attainment of economic objectives identical with those set forth in the Joint Declaration made on August 14, 1941, by the President of the United States of America and the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom.

"At an early convenient date, conversations shall be begun between the two governments with a view to determining, in the light of governing economic conditions, the best means of attaining the above-stated objectives by their own agreed action and of seeking the agreed action of other like-minded governments."

The chronology of America's approach to a peace founded on the principles of free economic intercourse is:

Autumn of 1940: The Atlantic Charter.

March, 1941: Lend-Lease law.

June, 1942: President's clarification of Article VII.

Secretary Hull believes that a sound and equitable international economic policy must be laid down before we can hope for international political stability. He will be, as he always has been, the champion of that view.

That is the internationalist view.

Washington's 'Second City' —The Pentagon

"This ain't a building—this is a city with a roof over it, that's what I calls it."

This was the remark of my dusky-skinned guide between bites of a ham sandwich which one of his colleagues had offered him as we made our journey through the maze of corridors in that amazing building, the Pentagon, in Washington, which houses the war department.

It is a city, for it houses no less than 40,000 workers. When they leave, they begin at 4:30 p. m., one group after another every ten minutes. Otherwise, all the busses and cabs and private cars that jam the labyrinth of highways, which cost $150,000 a mile to build, would never be able to take care of them.

Recently I took a cab with an inexperienced driver.

I'm afraid I took the hard way. There were four policemen at the door and a huge receptionist desk. I found my proper stall, labeled "Press," and showed my pass to the girl. She had never heard of me or the Western Newspaper Union or the Blue Network, and she spelled my name wrong three times. However, I was eventually moved up to a waiting bench and finally a guide appeared and escorted me to the officer I wished to see.

We passed two beverage rooms on the way and as I was somewhat exhausted, I dropped into one for a soft drink and a cigar.

It took me 30 minutes from the time I got in the building to the time I reached my destination, and some of the people there told me they had already been waiting longer than that.

The officer whom I was visiting had an inside office. He told me that if the lights ever went out, they would be in pitch blackness at noon, for, of course, there were no windows. I asked what would happen if the ventilating system broke down. He said he had not thought of that. I had—and I imagine the air would get pretty bad before very many minutes if the air conditioner ceased to work.

This huge institution is only a fraction of the expansion of Washington which has been caused by the war, but it is a concrete symbol of the tremendous clerical effort required to beat the Axis.

Little Lunches Flatter Wartime Menus.
(See Recipes Below)

Victory Lunches

Mid-day meals with that go-and-get-it spirit are those that are properly balanced, and have plenty of eye-appeal. The days are gone when you can make a quick dash to the corner grocery and bring home lamb chops to broil quickly. Gone, too, are days when you had loads of leftovers from yesterday's roast.

But, homemakers, you need not be foiled, rather let your ingenuity devise new ways of getting nutrition requirements into your menus. Use protein foods like peas, beans, eggs, and vitamin B1 foods like cereals as extenders to make up for meat. Your New Year victory menu parade starts off with a meat loaf "stretched" with oatmeal.

Savory Meat Loaf.
(Serves 8)

1 pound ground beef
½ pound ground pork
¾ cup oatmeal
1 egg, beaten
½ onion, grated
¾ cup milk
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
3 tablespoons catsup
1½ teaspoons salt

Combine ingredients in order given. Mix lightly until well blended. Place in a greased loaf pan, patting smooth. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees) about 1 hour. Makes approximately 2½-pound meat loaf.

Little Luncheons.
(Serves 6)

2 cups sifted enriched flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 to 4 tablespoons shortening
⅔ to ¾ cup milk
¾ cup ground ham
6 poached eggs
Creamy Cheese Sauce

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cut or rub in shortening. Add milk to form a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead ½ minute. Roll dough out into a long rectangle 8 inches wide and ⅛ inch thick. Cut in half lengthwise and spread each half with ham and roll jelly-roll fashion, sealing edges well. Cut rolls into 8-inch pieces. Form each piece into rings on baking sheet. Pinch ends together. With scissors, cut through rings almost to center, in slices about 1 inch thick. Turn each slice slightly on its side. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees) 10 to 12 minutes. Place a poached egg in the center of each ring and serve with Creamy Cheese Sauce.

Creamy Cheese Sauce.
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ cup grated cheese

Melt butter and stir in flour. Gradually add milk, stirring constantly. Boil sauce until it thickens. Cook 3 minutes. Add seasonings. Add cheese and stir over low heat until cheese is melted.

Baked Corn and Sausage.
(Serves 6 to 8)

¾ pound link or bulk sausage
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2½ cups whole kernel corn and juice
2½ cups canned tomatoes and juice
1 cup oven-popped rice

If bulk sausage is used, form into shape of link sausages. Brown sausage in heavy frying pan. Remove sausage and brown onions and pepper in fat remaining in pan. Add flour and seasonings and blend. Add corn and tomatoes and simmer until juice has partially evaporated (about ½ hour). Pour into casserole; arrange browned sausages on top like the spokes of a wheel. Sprinkle oven-popped rice on top. Cook in moderate oven (400 degrees) about 15 minutes until oven-popped rice is golden brown.

As golden as sunshine and as welcome is this luncheon souffle. Rich in vitamin A carrots and cheese, this dish will boost your resistance to colds and infection this winter.

Rice-Carrot Souffle.
(Serves 6)

1½ cups of cold cooked rice
2 beaten eggs
2 cups of milk
1 teaspoon of sugar
1 cup of grated cheese
½ teaspoon of salt
1 cup of cooked and riced carrots

Make a thin custard of eggs, milk and salt. Add the cheese and, when melted, add the rice which has been boiled in salted water, drained and shaken dry. Pour into a buttered baking dish, cover with the riced carrots, a fine sprinkling of sugar, and grated cheese. Bake over a pan of water about three-quarters of an hour in a slow oven.

Date-Pecan Pie.
(Makes 1 9-inch pie)

Pastry for 1 9-inch pie
1 cup unbroken pecan meats
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup sugar
½ cup dates, cut
1 cup dark corn syrup
2 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
⅛ teaspoon salt

Line pie plate with pastry. Arrange pecan meats over the pastry. Cream butter and sugar together thoroughly, then add remaining ingredients, beating well. Pour into unbaked pastry shell over the pecans and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) 10 minutes, then reduce to moderate (350 degrees) and bake 30 to 35 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Cool. May be served with whipped cream.

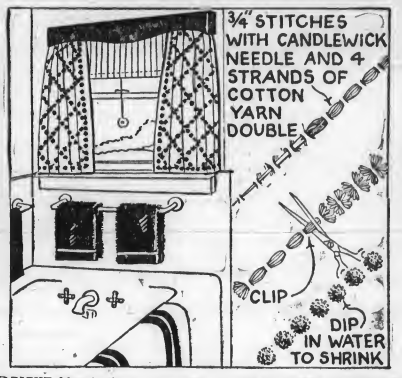
Cans and Jars: You will have noticed that your grocery shelves present a different picture than in the past. Instead of all food being put up in cans, some food has been preserved in glass.

In those foods placed in cans, the government has decreed three different sized cans.



A number two sized can, one of the standard sizes yields 2½ cups and will serve four to five people. The number 2½ sized can averages 3½ cups and feeds six people.

Largest food can is number 10, usually used by institutions and restaurants. This large size is not usually practical for a family of less than eight since it yields 12 cups and would last for at least two meals.

A few additional sized cans are allowed in the case of canned meats, fish, baby food, and citrus juices.

BRIGHT blue is the color keynote in this bathroom. Blue is used for towels and bath mat stripes and for a painted box cornice. The curtains are of coarse white muslin tufted with old-fashioned candlewicking in bright blue. It is difficult to find appropriate curtains that will stand steam and moisture so you may want to copy these in your favorite color.

Cut the curtains the length and width desired with ample allowance for shrinkage and baste the hems in. Next place the material flat on a table and mark diagonal lines on the goods with a yardstick and pencil, spacing the lines four inches apart to form the plaid pattern. Now, thread a tufting needle with four strands of candlewick yarn, and work along these ruled lines using the thread double, as at the upper right. Also, sew the hem in this manner; then clip the stitches, as shown at lower right and dip in water. Spread out smooth to dry but do not iron. Finish the tops with a rod casing.

9. "Frankie and Johnnie" was the most popular ballad ever composed here. During the latter part of the Nineteenth century, more than 300 variations of it were sung from coast to coast.
10. Can-can is a dance with plenty of kick in it. Beri-beri is a disease, chiefly in the Orient. Paw-paw is a tree bearing an edible, pulpy fruit.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The average car owner drove 9,000 miles in 1941, clicked off at the rate of about 6,700 miles a year in 1942 before gasoline rationing was nationalized. Essential driving is now pegged at an average of 5,000 miles annually and the "A" rationing book allows for 2,880 miles of driving a year.

Don't always be content with an "on the wheel" inspection. Have your tires removed from the wheels, spread and closely checked. You'll be surprised what this inspection sometimes shows in the way of internal carcass injuries. Catch them in time and save mileage.

In 1941 a total new supply of rubber amounting to 1,441,000 tons, 310,000 or 21% consisted of reclaimed rubber.

IN MEMORY OF A. J. LITTRELL

A. J. Littrell, I heard tonight
Has pierced the great beyond.
Left his dear faithful wife behind
Who soon will follow on.

And no doubt she does wonder why,
In this old lonesome world below
To ponder and to pine.

Seventy years ago they wed
They loved each other dear
Together they shared all their joys,
Their sorrows and their tears.

She'll miss him, yes she'll miss him,
He was so true and brave
And no doubt she is wishing now
They both slept in one grave.

Oh he's not dead, He is not dead
He's only gone before
And while his friends bemoan his death,
He walks the golden shore.

No doubt his spirit lingers still
About the old home place
Knows everything that's going on
Though they can't see his face.

But if they live a life for God,
From sinful things stay free
When Gabriel gives that final call
His face again they'll see.

He'll meet you Mrs. Littrell dear
With a smile upon his face
For I know God, he loved him dear
He saved him by his grace.

So cheer up dear, have faith in God
Don't be so sad and blue
Just know that he has gone above
And there he waits for you.

In Loving Memory Of My Dear Husband
MR. G. R. FISCHER

One year has passed since that sad day,
The evening star shines on the grave,
Of one we loved, but could not save,
God took him home
and left us alone,
How sweet to sleep, where all is peace,
Where sorrow cannot reach the brest,
Where all life's idle throbbings cease,
And pain is lulled to rest
We think of him still as the same, we say:
He is not dead, he is just away.
Sadly missed by his Wife and Daughter.

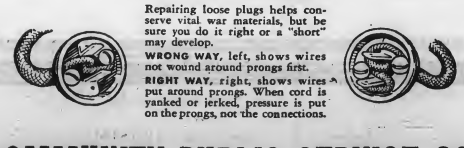
MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR LIGHTING



(No. 7 of a Series)

Place Lamps to Utilize Light Most Efficiently

The amount of useful light you get from a lamp decreases rapidly as the lamp is moved away from the working area to be lighted. Conversely, the useful light increases greatly as the light source is moved toward the working area. In the above example, merely by moving the end table lamp eight inches from the far to the near side of the table, the amount of useful light for reading or sewing was more than doubled. Remember this important point and always place chairs close to lamps. You'll not only get more light for your money, but you'll prevent needless eyestrain.

There's a Right and Wrong Way to Wire a plug

Repairing loose plugs helps conserve vital war materials, but be sure you do it right or a "short" may develop.

RIGHT WAY, right, shows wires put around prongs. When cord is yanked or jerked, pressure is put on the prongs, not the connections.

THIS WEEK ON THE HOME FRONT

The big news on the Home Front is still the expanded rationing program set up by the Office of Price Administration. It is a part of the democratic process of assuring that our food is fairly apportioned, and that a sufficient supply is kept available.

It is worked out as a balance of our own domestic needs, the needs of our armed forces, who must have the very best, and the needs of our Allies who are helping us in the fight to keep Axis oppression from our common door. The OPA was directed by the Department of Agriculture to undertake the rationing of virtually all commercially processed vegetables and fruits—canned, bottled, and frozen vegetables, fruits, juices, dried fruits, and all soups. It is expected that this food rationing program will begin in February when the mechanics of the system will be ready to roll.

The reasons for announcing the program this far in advance may be found in the magnitude of the job to be done before rationing can begin. War Ration Book 2 must be distributed to every family and 1,500,000 OPA volunteers must be recruited and trained to handle registration. Food wholesalers and retailers must be instructed in the plan, and trade meetings must be held from coast to coast.

The consuming public itself must be adequately informed on the use of War Ration Book 2, so that they will know how to use it when the program starts.

To register for Book 2, it will be necessary to make a declatation of all the commercially processed fruits and vegetables in the individual's possession, and stamps will be deducted accordingly before the book is issued. The national acceptance of the program has been highly gratifying, for in only a few isolated instances, has there been any unpatriotic rush of hoarders who buy extra stocks of canned goods.

This far-reaching step may be taken by consumers as a sign that the OPA and the Department of Agriculture will keep the food situation under firm control, and that adequate diets will be assured to everyone.

Jury members, who need additional mileage when they are on court duty, will be eligible for special gasoline rations.

Inter-city buses must henceforth be loaded to capacity, where passengers are available, to eliminate, waste of tires, fuel and equipment. The order is designed to fill empty seats with passengers who, otherwise, would require a second bus.

Have your tires inspected at once, if you wish to be eligible for a recap, or a new tire. Now that mileage rationing is in effect, it's possible for every car owner, whether he holds an A, B, or C book, to secure tires for his automobile, but only after a qualified enspector has looked over his car. This must be done before January 31st.

ACE IN THE HOLE

by JACKSON GREGORY

©GREGORY W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Old Bill Cole, having been fatally shot by an unknown assailant, made two identical wills, leaving all his money and the King Cole Ranch to Ann Lee and to Cole Cody, children of his two old cronies, Rusty Lee and Buck Cody. Rance Waldron, who claimed relationship, appeared at the Ranch just prior to Old Bill's death. Meanwhile, Ann and Cole were on their way to the Ranch by stage coach. Long Peters, the stage driver, was shot through the arm during a hold-up, so Cole Cody took his place on the driver's seat where he was joined by Ann. Finally they arrived at Bald Eagle, where Cody met Porfirio Lopez.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VI

Porfirio snatched up his glass.

"We drink together, you and me, Senor Codito! To one gr-reat gentleman! To one of the soldiers of the good God Himself! To Don Senor Early Bill Cole! To him, forever and ever, 'Salud y pesetas!' To Don Senor Early Bill Cole!"

Then Cole Cody, forgetting other things, gripped him by the thin shoulders.

"What are you talking about?" he demanded sharply. "Early Bill Cole? Of the King Cole Ranch? You say he is dead?"

"Only two days ago, Don Codito."

"But I had a letter from him, Porfirio, only a few days ago! And dead now!"

Here was news! Cole Cody stood frowning at nothing, telling himself that all along this had been a funny howdy-do: First the letter from old Early Bill, which he had been utterly unable to explain; now the violent removal of the only man who could tell him. Well, he'd go to the hotel over night, then in the morning turn tail and leave Bald Eagle and a lot of unanswered questions behind him. Along with a girl he never wanted to see again.

He lifted his glass.

"We drink together to Don Senor Early Bill Cole!" cried little Porfirio, and snatched off his hat. "The two of us together."

It was far too early for bed, so Cody and Porfirio Lopez dawdled over their supper in one of Bald Eagle's little restaurants for the better part of an hour, and thereafter set out to see the town. Cody was about to call it a night and go off to bed when he was accosted by a lean and wiry old man with a mane of snowy hair and a mammoth, unpruned white mustache, with a broad and battered old black hat and sleek high-heeled boots and a long-tailed black coat. None other, in fact, than Mr. Arthur Henry Pope —the Judge.

"Mr. William Cole Cody, I believe?" he said sonorously.

"That's my name, sir," he said.

"And I, sir, am Arthur Henry Pope. I know something about you; not much, but something. I'd like a few words with you, Mr. Cody," said the Judge. "In private."

"What is it?" asked Cody.

"I have taken a room for you at the hotel where you'll want to stay overnight. Will you step over with me?"

"I'm with a friend—"

"The matter is of importance. Also of an entirely private nature—"

"Go 'long with him, Don Codito," said Porfirio, and began a discreet withdrawal. "He is a man they call the Judge here. He is all right, you will see, because they tell me he was a very good friend of Don Senor Early Bill Cole!" Then Porfirio bolted, headed for the bar, again flourishing his colorful bandana.

"Certainly," agreed Cody, his curiosity now riding high, and the two went out together.

A bit earlier in the evening, the Judge and Doc Joe having a few moments together on their porch after Doc Joe had tinkered with his new patients as best he could and got them off to their beds, the Judge had been led to remark with a snort,

"Old Early Bill, confound his ornery hide, having sworn by all that was good and holy he'd get him his fun after he was dead, ought to be laughing his fool head off now!"

In his turn Doc Joe had snorted. "The fools were you and me, Judge," he growled. "Two softies, a couple of mush-hearted sissies. We ought to have stood up on our hind legs and told him to go to the devil."

All this was because before his demise old Early Bill had instructed this precious duo, laying down the law to them and exacting their promises to carry out his bidding. If he died before his "heirs" arrived, the Judge and Doc Joe were to look out for the two, and were to tell them just as much as Early Bill wanted told, not a single syllable more. Doc Joe was to explain matters to the girl, the Judge was to do likewise for young Cody. And they were not unduly to stick their noses into subsequent happenings. "Let nature take its course!" old King Cole had chuckled.

And now the Judge and Doc Joe, having in due course learned that both Cole Cody and Ann Lee were on the stage, were faithfully if irreverently carrying out orders.

Thus, while Doc Joe was expounding to a round-eyed, breathless girl and her quietly attentive Aunt Jenifer in one room of the Bald Eagle Hotel, the Judge was letting head and ears of the cat out of the bag for the astounding of William Cole Cody in another room.

"And that's the way of it," concluded Doc Joe, glad to be at the end of the crazy business, and opened a carpet-bag at his feet, took from it an old iron box from which long ago the black paint had scaled, and set it down on Miss Ann Lee's knees.

"But—but—" the girl sputtered. "I can't understand it! This Mr. Early Bill Cole you are talking about—Why, I don't know him! I never saw him even, in my life! I never heard of him! Of course, Doctor, there is some mistake. It must be some other girl—some other girl, maybe, named Lee. Maybe even named—"

"There may be a lot of mistakes in this whole deal," the old doctor grunted, "but that's not one of them. You're the girl all right — Say, haven't you got the key!"

"The key! Why, of course I have!" She jumped up, the box in her hands, and ran to the walnut bureau; she pulled and tugged until she got the lop-sided top drawer open and extracted her purse. "Here is the key! He sent it to me with a letter that made me terribly curious, saying some things, half-saying some, leaving out the things I was dying to know!"

"That would be old Early Bill for you," said Doc Joe tartly. "And I reckon that's the key all right. You might try it."

She got the key in one of the locks. It fitted! It turned easily.

"It is the right key!" she exclaimed, and tried it in the other lock. She withdrew the key, looked at it, stooped over the box again, tossing her head impatiently to throw the hair back from falling over her eyes. "Something's the matter with the crazy thing," she said, baffled. "Will you try it, Doctor?"

"You take mighty good care of that box, Miss Ann," he said hurriedly.

He shook his head. "No use, Miss Ann. One thing I didn't tell you. Your key fits only one of the two locks. There's another key. It—ahem!—it's being kept by someone else. A man that old Early Bill trusted it to. You can't open your box until he shows up."

"Why, isn't that funny! Who is this man? Is he here in Bald Eagle? When will he give me the other key?"

Doc Joe was already edging toward the door.

"You take mighty good care of that box, Miss Ann," he said hurriedly. "Just you remember that it's worth a power of money! The whole King Cole Ranch is in there—and a heap of gold and greenbacks besides! Just you take mighty good care of it, Miss Ann. And now, good night to you, Miss. And to you also, Miss Jenifer," he said, and ducked out and fled.

And in that other room under the same roof the Judge had finished imparting to young Cody all the facts in the case which he had been authorized to make fairly clear. Cody had heard him out in silence, his eyes dark between narrowed lids, his face stilled to expressionlessness. And when the Judge, too, grew silent Cody still sat on a moment or two, pondering.

"Thanks, Judge," he said. "I guess that's all you've got to tell me? Wouldn't do much good to start asking questions?"

The Judge rather liked him for that.

He shook his head, ready to go.

"Come to me later, if you want to," he said. "I'm hoping that things will work out all right for you. Maybe they will. That's what that infernal old devil wanted."

Upon its gentle knoll, its white-washed adobe walls a snowy, gleaming white in the distance under the eastern sun, the old Casa of the Estradas, the home for many a year of Bill Cole of King Cole Ranch, was like an alabaster palace out of a fairy tale.

The low, massive building was surrounded by a wall akin in construction to itself, a wall of adobe, white-washed, topped with warm red tiles. Ann Lee, leading the way, her carpet-bag containing the precious iron box caught tight under her arm, threw open a gate and hurried along one of the paths radiating from the old home. And Aunt Jenifer, her cheeks almost as pink as her niece's, her eyes almost as bright, came hurrying after her.

The place seemed deserted. The two women came to the patio and stood very still; it was as though they found in the silence a gentle command for like silence on their part.

Aunt Jenifer reached for the bell cord and gave it an emphatic yank setting the bell echoing through the house. A man's voice—they were sure they had brought him rudely out of sound sleep—called out,

"Hello, who's there?" And then, without awaiting an answer, "Wait a shake: I'll be right out."

They had to wait more than a minute.

At long last they heard a heavy bar let down, and the door opened slowly only a dozen inches or so. A tall young man looked out at them.

"Good morning, ladies! This is a surprise! You're twice as welcome as the birds in spring. Come in, won't you?"

They entered just a trifle hesitantly, the house was so dark and, at the moment, somehow sinister and forbidding. But that was only because all the shades had been drawn down and it was dark in here after the sunshine outside. He said pleasantly, "Just a second and we'll have some light in," and went to one window after another flipping up the shades. The sunlight streamed in joyously; of a sudden, with the dark put to flight, it became a genial and friendly room.

And now they could see Rance Waldron clearly.

"I am Ann Lee and this is my Aunt, Miss Jenifer Edwards. We had an invitation from—from Mr. William Cole to visit him here. We got to Bald Eagle only last night and now—Well," and she too smiled faintly, "here we are!"

"I am taking care of things right now," he said. "I was lucky to get here just before my uncle died."

"Your uncle?" spoke up Aunt Jenifer. "Old Bill Cole was your uncle?"

Rance made a little deprecatory gesture.

"I've always called him that," he said easily. "Not an uncle exactly, but related. I am, I believe, his next of kin; his only kinsman, in fact. I am Rance Waldron; my mother and the old man were cousins. It's because of that," and he lifted his broad shoulders in the hint of a shrug, "that I am staying on here. Unless there is a will, and I don't believe he ever made a will, I suppose I am the next owner here."

At the mention of a will, Ann's lips were parted to speak up, but by the time he had added a final clause she had become conscious of Aunt Jenifer's eyes stabbing warningly at her.

Aunt Jenifer said, "It's a mighty nice place out here. He wanted us to visit him for a while. We've come a long way, too, over a hundred miles. We got to town last night on the stage."

What she was driving at was obvious enough, and there didn't seem very much he could do about it. Had it just been the older woman alone, Rance Waldron might have been the man for putting her out bodily; his eyes, however, quitted her face while she was still speaking and drifted, openly admiring, to Ann's. He said with a semblance of heartiness,

"Well, the thing that counts is that you're here now! And I am glad that I happened to be on hand to welcome you in my uncle's place. And I'll bet you haven't even had breakfast yet. I know I haven't."

"Will you show me the way to the kitchen?" asked Aunt Jenifer. "I'll be glad to get breakfast for you."

"Say, that's great!" said Rance.

He showed them the kitchen, a room big enough for a barn, with an enormous cook stove which Early Bill had had installed here many a year ago and which had had scant use for a dozen years, and there were ample provisions.

"Now," said Aunt Jenifer, sleeves rolled back on a pair of pretty, white arms and a clean sugar sack pinned about her waist, "you can skedaddle and I'll call you when things are ready."

"Fair enough," said Rance. "I'll go clean up a speck; haven't even washed my face or combed my hair yet!" And he hurried away; they heard his boots echoing through the big rooms with their bare floors and few scatter rugs; they heard a door close, then, from some farther room, another door.

THE WORKING LIVER

For a number of years I found myself writing about the liver almost once every month. I pointed out the various jobs done by the liver such as manufacturing bile and then the various jobs done by the bile; the storing of sugar in the liver for future needs of the body; the importance of the liver in filtering out the harmful substances from the blood and the effects these harmful substances would have on the body tissues and body processes if they were not filtered out; the coloring and other materials in the liver used to help form the blood; that the liver was the largest organ in the body and had within it about one-quarter of all the blood of the body.

Dr. Barton

There was one point I mentioned once or twice but did not emphasize as I should have done and that was the advisability of having the liver tested for its working ability just as the heart, kidneys, stomach, blood vessels and other organs are tested. A test can be made showing the working ability of the liver by the use of substances taken by mouth or injected into a vein. The liver should remove these substances from the blood within a definite time if it is doing its work properly. One of these substances is hippuric acid.

In the Medical Journal of Australia, Drs. Margaret Henderson and B. Splatt report their results in 89 patients with liver disease, 86 with various other disorders, and 25 normal adults or patients recovering from minor ailments. Not only did the results show the extent to which the liver was damaged or unable to do its work, and the extent of heart damage, but it showed also how the damaged condition of the liver was allowing poisons to aggravate other conditions present in the body, such as pernicious anemia, tuberculosis and rheumatic arthritis.

In the treatment of a sluggish liver or a liver that is not doing its work properly, the physician prescribes special diets and various drugs.

However, we can keep the liver in good working condition by taking long deep breaths or by bending exercises, keeping the knees straight (both exercises squeeze the liver) and by avoiding overeating.

Mental Clinics Doing Good Work

A few years ago the statement was made that at the present rate of increase in the number of mental cases in any and all communities within 50 years it would mean that at least one-half the population would require mental care. Naturally health departments everywhere are trying to prevent this condition by various means.

Today mental institutions by regular and special forms of treatment, by the help of visiting or resident specialists — throat, teeth, heart, lungs, and others—are able to send back to home and business about 6 in every 10 patients admitted.

Where the greatest progress is being made, however, is the recognition of the "early" symptoms and signs of mental ailments by the family and general physician, and the sending of these early cases to a mental or psychiatric clinic.

If the average taxpayer stopped to think of what it costs to keep just one patient in a mental institution, he would gladly pay a few cents extra yearly to prevent it.

Dr. Victor H. Vogel of the U. S. Health Service, as recorded by Science Service, states:

"It would not cost taxpayers a cent if their local health services added mental hygiene clinics to their child health clinics and other services. Such clinics would prevent mental breakdowns and so reduce the number of patients cared for in mental hospitals. Mental illness is the most expensive kind because of its long duration. If only three people a year are saved from becoming public charges in a mental institution, that means enough money saved to support a mental hygiene clinic for an entire year."

The saving of money is but the least of the benefits of a mental clinic. It cannot be compared with the saving of life and happiness.

Mental hygiene clinics help people whose lives are threatened by other dangers, too. A divorce can sometimes be prevented, a home kept intact or a suicide prevented.

JESUS INSTRUCTS A GREAT TEACHER

LESSON TEXT—John 3:1-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

Nicodemus came to our Lord when He was in Jerusalem for the Passover. Jesus had chosen six of His disciples, had performed His first miracle at Cana, and had made a brief visit to Capernaum, after which He came to Jerusalem for the feast.

In high and holy indignation He had driven the money changers out of the temple. The Pharisees who looked for the coming of the Messiah as a secular conqueror wondered at this new spiritual leader. It was probably as much on their behalf as his own that Nicodemus came to inquire of Jesus.

In answering his questions Jesus reveals the necessity, the nature, and the method of regeneration. The only entrance into the Christian life is by the door of the new birth. Regeneration is the act of God whereby the divine nature is imparted to the believing sinner and he becomes the child of God. He who has not entered by this way has not entered at all. He is still dead in trespasses and sins, without God and without hope (Eph. 2:1, 12).

Men seek to enter the household of God by almost any other means—culture, reform, character building—and neglect or reject God's way.

I. The Necessity of Regeneration (vv. 1-7):

Jesus was not unduly impressed by the dignity and high station of his visitor, nor by the visitor's courteous acknowledgment of His own position as a great teacher. With incisive boldness Jesus declared that this man, a cultured and distinguished ruler of the Jews, must be born again if he is to see the kingdom of God.

God is no respecter of persons. This "doctor of divinity" must be born again, just as was the illiterate fisherman. The requirements are the same for all, and the necessity as great in one level of society as in another.

The surprising thing is that this teacher of theology could be so ignorant of the one essential element of a real spiritual experience. He evidently thought he could bring his soul to eternal life by his own works, when in fact he was not able to give himself physical—let alone spiritual—life.

Two reasons are given by our Lord for the "must" of verse 7: (1) The kingdom of God is a spiritual kingdom, and cannot be entered by way of our human nature; and (2) "that which is born of the flesh is flesh" and is radically and essentially bad. To learn why the flesh is bad read Jeremiah 13:23 and Galatians 5:19-21. Scripture on this point is diametrically opposed to the teaching of unbelieving men. When such a difference arises be sure of this—God's Word is right. Follow it!

II. The Nature of Regeneration (vv. 8-13).

The new birth is a divine mystery, not fathomable by human reason. Those who insist that all spiritual truth be put through the little mesh of their intelligence will never understand it or receive its blessing.

The striking illustration of the life-giving and energizing wind used by our Lord is most illuminating. Wind is unseen, but the results of its movement are evident. Even so the spiritual rebirth of men is an enigma to the worldly man, but even he can see its results in godly living.

Observe the clarity and simplicity of our Lord's teaching on what is undoubtedly the most profound subject in all the world. Let us follow His example and always "make the message clear and plain, Christ receiveth sinful men!"

III. The Method of Regeneration (vv. 14-16).

Many there are who ask Nicodemus' question, "How can these things be?" (v. 9). The answer is clear—"Only by faith in the Son of God, our Saviour."

Just as there was healing and life in a look at the uplifted serpent (Num. 21:8), so there is life for a look at the Crucified One. Faith receives God's perfect provision for sin.

John 3:16 may well be regarded as the greatest sentence in the greatest Book in the world. It presents the whole plan of salvation—its source, its ground, its recipients, its condition, and its result. It also reveals God's love—its "object, character, manifestation, purpose, and the result" (John W. Bradbury).

This glorious salvation is for all men—"whosoever"—but some reject it. Notice that God does not condemn them. Their own evil works and desires condemn them (vv. 17-20). God in His grace is ready and willing to save, but men love "darkness rather than light," for their works are evil.

Nicodemus came to Jesus by night — but he came. Have you come? Will you come now?

Buyers Will Pay More For Your Clean Eggs

Frequent Gathering Also Aids in Reducing Soilage

Consumers willing to pay high prices will not readily accept eggs that are soiled.

The poultryman who markets dirty eggs must sell to less discriminating buyers at lower prices. Records show that soiled eggs bring from 7 to 12 cents less per dozen than clean eggs of the same quality.

Soilage of eggs can be reduced with only a little care in addition to that usually exercised by good poultrymen. A few simple practices, generally applied, would make every egg produced this year clean and attractive in appearance.

A deep litter on the floor of the laying house and roost poles screened with poultry wire to keep them from walking on the soiled dropping boards, will prevent eggs from being soiled by dirty feet.

At least one large nest is needed for every five hens to prevent excessive "traffic" per nest. If the nests are made of good clean material, such as excelsior, shavings, or straw, breakage of eggs will be reduced and clean whole eggs will not be stained by broken ones.

Gathering the eggs frequently—at least three times a day—will reduce the time of their exposure to soilage.

If an egg becomes soiled, it can be cleaned by applying baking soda with a damp cloth, and allowed to dry thoroughly before casing.

When the eggs are ready for crating, pack them in clean containers. It will be found the appearance of eggs makes a great deal of difference in their value on the market.

Agriculture in Industry

By FLORENCE C. WEED

Fiber Plants

A half dozen fiber plants, growing mostly in the southern states seem to offer some possibilities for industrial use as stuffings, mattings and brushes. The drawback is in competing with wild grasses growing on other continents which can be harvested by cheap labor and imported here at low cost.

Kapok will grow in the extreme southern part of Florida. It is much liked for upholstery and pillow stuffing. Palmetto, from this section, will produce a useable fiber. A few thousand tons of Spanish moss, growing on southern trees, are collected each year and sold as a substitute for curled horse hair in upholstery.

The cabbage palmetto is used in the manufacture of brushes. Some alough grass is cut along the Mississippi river, dried and used in matting manufacture. Jute will also grow in the southern states and Esparto will grow in southern California, but these can not compete in price with the cheap jute from India and the wild Esparto from northern Africa.

Eventually, all these less important plants as well as our important agriculture products will be thoroughly investigated at the new regional laboratories which have been established by the government to search for new and wider industrial uses for farm products.

Farm Notes

The U. S. crop of soybeans in 1942 is estimated at 14,241,000 acres, as compared with 9,996,000 acres in 1941.

One way of meeting the farm labor shortage is to determine to produce high crop yields. Good seed beds, fertilizer, adapted seed, and excellent cultural practices will permit higher production on fewer acres.

Sportlight

By GRANTLAND RICE

ONE of my favorite athletes for some 20 years has been a fellow by the name of Heartley Anderson—better known as Hunk.

With George Halas, former coach and owner of the Chicago Bears, now in war service, Hunk is one of the head co-coaches.

Grantland Rice

Pound for pound, Hunk is the toughest physical specimen I've ever known, and that includes Joe Louis and Strangler Lewis. As a guard under Knute Rockne, weighing 170 pounds, Hunk made 240 pounders surrender and leave the field. They wanted no part of Hunk, who, in addition to amazing quickness and unusual strength, always has had outstanding fighting spirit.

He was the type they might kill—but never whip.

An Anderson Angle

This takes us back to the time Notre Dame decided to try out field hockey. A big squad had assembled—then Hunk appeared. His presence scattered most of the hockey squad.

"Do you mean," one of them asked, "that I'm to play in a game in which they are giving Hunk Anderson a stick? I don't want any part of it."

As a coach in the old days, Hunk may have been a better top sergeant than a general of the Rockne type, but that still goes as a tribute. He certainly never has had a superior as a line coach.

He was given the impossible job at Notre Dame of following Knute Rockne. At the time this was an impossible assignment.

His Toughest Job

Hunk's toughest coaching job came at North Carolina State some years ago. Hunk had assembled a strong Southern line and a Northern backfield.

"I made one big mistake," Hunk told me later. "I thought the Civil war was over. I soon found that my Southern line was tackling and stopping my Northern backfield before it got started. I'd just forgotten to brush up on my history. I discovered down South you conidn't mix up Stonewall Jacksons and Robert E. Lees with U. S. Grants and William Tecumseh Shermans and Philip Sheridans."

The Strong Man

I doubt that football has ever produced a stronger man than Eddie Hart, Princeton's old football captain, now installed as a major in the marines. His strong man rival was Eddie Glass of Yale. The new marine is no kid. He was Princeton's leader back in 1910 and 1911, when he played with a broken neck protected by a special leather harness.

Now over 50, he is still in fine physical shape and still one of the strongest men I know. Something after the manner of Pudge Heffelfinger, who was still a football star at 53 and not so bad at 65 when he played a full period in a charity game.

Two Eddie Hart examples—the night he won a bet that three All-Americans in the room couldn't bowl him over as he stood on one foot—the day in Paris during the last war when a 195-pound football pal called from the second floor of a Paris hotel—"I'm jumping, Eddie, catch me." Hart caught him.

The marines get a true marine in Eddie Hart.

Eddie Hart coached the Army football team that played in Paris after the Armistice. Eddie Mahan was on that Army squad. "It was after this game," Hart told me, "that Marshal Foch said, 'Any army that plays this game is already well trained for war. It is a game that belongs to the strong and the fast and to those who must think under pressure. It is the type of competitive sport an army needs.' "

Efficiency

Col. Bob Neyland remarked a short while back that when you can get a team up to 80 per cent efficiency in blocking and tackling you have about reached the summit of human expectancy.

This is true, with a few exceptions.

Holy Cross passed 90 per cent in this respect against Boston College, and Washington's Redskins were close to 100 per cent against the beaten Bears.

I've never seen a team that tackled harder, blocked harder or ran harder, going all out, than the Redskins did against the Bears.

They had a record wound to cure that had been festering for two years, 73 to 0, and you could see on practically every play they meant to effect the cure.

Here was full proof of what a football team can do when it becomes emotionally aroused.

Here was the answer to many of the season's upsets—do the way Auburn felt about Georgia and Holy Cross felt about Boston College.

Tell me a Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

OLD MAN COYOTE IS VERY CRAFTY

Coyote has a crafty brain;
His wits are sharp his ends to gain.

THERE is nothing in the world more true than this. Old Man Coyote has the craftiest brain of all the little people of the Green Forest or the Green Meadows. Sharp as are the wits of old Granny Fox, they are not quite as sharp as the wits of Old Man Coyote. If you want to fool him you will have to get up very early in the morning and then it is more than likely that you will be the one fooled, not he. There is very little going on around him that he doesn't know about. But once in a while something escapes him. The coming of Paddy the Beaver to the Green Forest was one of these things. He didn't know a thing about Paddy until Paddy had finished his dam and his house and was cutting his supply of food for the winter.

You see, it was this way: When the Merry Little Breezes of Old Mother West Wind first heard the news of what was going on in the Green Forest and hurried around over the Green Meadows and through the Green Forest to spread the news, as is their way, they took the greatest pains not to even hint it to Old Man Coyote, because they were afraid that he would make trouble and perhaps drive Paddy away.

But after a while Old Man Coyote noticed that the little people of the Green Meadows were not about as much as usual. They seemed to have a secret of some kind. He mentioned the matter to his friend Digger the Badger. Digger had been so intent on his own affairs that he hadn't noticed anything unusual, but when Old Man Coyote mentioned the matter he remembered that Blacky the Crow headed straight for the Green Forest every morning, and several times he had seen Sammy Jay flying in the same direction as if in a great hurry to get somewhere.

Old Man Coyote grinned. "That's all I need to know, friend Digger."

With that off Old Man Coyote started. But he was too sly and crafty to go straight to the Green Forest. He pretended to hunt around over the Green Meadows, just as he usually did, all the time working nearer and nearer to the Green Forest. When he reached the edge of it he slipped in among the trees and when he felt sure that no one was likely to see him he began to run this way and that way with his nose to the ground.

"Ha!" he exclaimed presently. "Reddy Fox has been this way lately."

Pretty soon he found another trail. "So," said he, "Peter Rabbit has been over here a good deal of late."

So Old Man Coyote followed Peter's trail and so presently came to the pond of Paddy the Beaver. "Ha!" said he as he looked out and saw Paddy's new house. "So there is a newcomer to the Green Forest! I have always heard that Beaver is very good eating. My stomach begins to feel empty this very minute." His mouth began to water and a fierce hungry look shone in his yellow eyes.

It was just then that Sammy Jay saw him and began to scream at the top of his lungs, so that Paddy the Beaver over in his house heard him. Old Man Coyote knew that it was of no use to stay with Sammy Jay about, so he took a hasty look about and found where Paddy came ashore to cut his food. Then, shaking his fist at Sammy Jay he started straight back for the Green Meadows. "I'll just pay a visit here in the night," said he, "and give Mr. Beaver a surprise while he is at work."

But with all his craft Old Man Coyote didn't notice that he had left a footprint in the mud.

Best Sheltered Port

Port Lyautey: This modern city of 20,000 people lies 12 miles up the Sebou river from the Atlantic, about 100 miles south of Gibraltar. Now the second-busiest and best-sheltered port of Morocco, Port Lyautey did not exist before 1913. Marshal Lyautey founded it, calling it Kenitra, and shortly before his death it was renamed in his honor. In addition to regular service from its airport, the port has electric railway and highway connections with Casablanca, Fez, and Meknes.

A little salt added to the last rinse water will prevent clothes from freezing on the line.

If a fruit pie runs out in the oven, sprinkle salt over the spilled juice and the oven will not become filled with smoke.

Dip the knot on the end of that new halter rope in glue and let it dry a few days before you use it, and you won't have any trouble keeping the knot in it. Better use waterproof glue if you can get it.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too-frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

C. SCOTT CHAMBERS, WALTON UNDERTAKER PASSES

A Public Spirited Citizen, and a Staunch Friend, Who Will Be Greatly Missed Throughout Northern Ky.

The citizens of Walton and community were saddened Tuesday afternoon, when they learned of the passing of one of our most prominent citizens, at his home about 4 P. M.

Mr. Chambers, 72 years of age, had been in failing health for several months, but attended church Sunday and was able to walk up in town every day, even Monday. Tuesday morning he dressed, ate his breakfast as usual, shortly afterwards he complained of not feeling so well. Dr. Ryle and Dr. Daughtery came and everything was done that was humanly possible. He was resting more comfortbly and knew everything until the last.

His last hours were as he would have had them, as he had often remarked, he would like to pass away "with his shoes on", he was fully dressed and resting on his couch at his home when the final time came, with his loving wife and daughters near.

He was a devout member of the Christian church, an Elder and for many years Superintendent of the Sunday School. A Past Master of the Walton Masonic Lodge and Past Patron of the Eastern Star. He was a member of the Kentucky Board of Embalming.

Mr. Chambers had lived in Boone County all his life, moving from Petersburg to Walton in 1906, where he has been engaged in the undertaking business every since; a senior partner of Chambers & Grubbs Funeral Directors.

He is survived by his devoted wife, and daughters, Mrs. Aleen Chambers Conner, Mrs. Wallace Grubbs and Ella Mae Chambers, two granddaughters and three grandsons, a brother, Dr. W. K. Chambers and a sister, Mrs. Milo Atkinson of Los Angles, Calif. and a brother, Mr. Lawrence Chambers and sister, Mrs. Herma Mathews of Petersburg, Ky., several nieces and nephews and a legion of friends.

Short services will be held at the Chambers & Grubbs Funeral Home Friday at 2 P. M., with burial in Highland Cemetary.

Rev. R. F. DeMolsey will have charge of the services, assisted by Rev. Geo. Carolan, pastor of the Christian church, Rev. Bedinger and Rev. Alford.

Mr. Chambers nephew, Mr. Harry Mathews of Covington, assisted Mr. Grubbs with the funeral arrangements.

NOTICE—

The Women's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist will hold their all-day meeting Saturday, Jan. 16 at the home of Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Dearing. All members and friends are expected to attend as the new officers will be installed.

Ryland Homemakers

Members of the Ryland Homemakers Club met for their Jan. meeting at the home of Mrs. J. C. Brown on upper Scott Boulevard in Covington.

Mrs. Wm. Damon, president presided over the business meeting after the opening song and prayer.

"A preview of life for 1943" was the major lesson given by Miss Zelma Byerly and gave a word picture of home life in our world at war.

Members discussed wartime foods and clothing and the proposed rationing system.

Mrs. John Murchison conducted the sewing lesson on "Italian hem-stitching."

Mrs. J. C. Brown will represent the club at the Farm and Home Convention at Lexington the latter part of the month.

Two new members were welcomed into the club, Mrs. John Whitlock and Mrs. Gerald Bromback, daughters of the hostess.

Members present were: Mrs. Wm. Damon, Mrs. J. C. Brown, Mrs. Harry Rubbe, Mrs. Oliver Gee, Mrs. Wm. Mendenhall Mrs. Mary Thuelkeld, Mrs. John Murchison, Mrs. J. A. Rich, Miss Zelma Byerly and a guest, Mrs. Walter Colvin.

The next meeting will be at Ryland Heights at the home of Mrs. Clarence Armstrong.

Rev. C. G. Dearing and wife called on Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Jockey Sunday afternoon.

Southern Railroad Selected To Train Another Battalion for U. S. Military Railway Service.

Because of the highly successful manner in whih the Southern Railway System trained its own 727th Engineer Battalion, the first of several railroads battalions organized to operate military rialroads, the War Department has selected the Southern for the training of another Battalion, it has been announced by Brigadier General Carl R. Gray, Jr., General Manager of the United States Military Railway Service.

"We have selected the 715th Operating Battalion (affiliated with, officered by, and with a great many of the enlisted men from the Illinios Central Railway) as the battalion that we would like to train on the rails of the Southern Railway in exactly the same manner as we have just satisfactorily completed the training of the 727th," stated General Gray. "The spirit has been so fine; the character and excellence of the instruction and demonby the Southern Railway System employees has been so wonderful, that I have every belief that they will gladly accept this greater responsibility which they are now asked to assume."

The 715th Operating Battalion will receive basic training in all phases of railway operation, on the Southern's line between Meridian, Miss., and New Orleans, La., where the 727th underwent training during the latter part of 1942. Headquarters will be located at Hattiesburg, Miss.

In a commendatory letter to Harry A. DeButts, vice president in charge of operation of the Southern Railway System, General Gray said:

"I am taking this means of addressing you, with the hope that you will find a way to indicate to each individual employee their Government's and my personal gratitude and appreciation for their successful cooperation, coordination and assistance in the training of the 727th Battalion. They truly have been soldiers; they truly have been Americans; and they are entitled to and do hereby receive from me the highest praise that I know how to give."

Mrs. S. S. Moore of Cynthiana came Tuesday to visit with her niece, Mrs. Claude Norman and family for a few days.

Mr. Edward Tolbert of Ft. Mitchell and Miss Olive Soden of Newport were visiting friends in Walton the past week-end.

Local Sailor Taking Advanced Aircraft Mechanical Training.

Virgil (Bud) Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Young, enlisted in the Navy in May 1942, and after taking the prescribed basic training was selected to take Aviation Mechanist's instructions. Bud completed this course in the prescribed 6 months period. After completeing this course he was again selected to take an advanced schooling, which requires three months.

Bud's being mechanically minded is another of our local youths who is using his talents to defeat the Axis.

Pvt. Kircher M. Johnson of Camp Shelby, who was recently promoted to the Intellegence unit of the Headquarters Co. at this camp is visiting with his mother, Mrs. Bessie Johnson and many friends here in Walton.

THE NOTICE STATED BELOW HAS BEEN RELEASED BY THE OFFICE OF WAR AND IS POSTED FOR THE PUBLIC'S CONSUMPTION.

American fighting men taken prisoner by Germany or Italy and interned American civilians receive regular American Red Cross standard food parcels and necessary clothing as soon as the International Red Cross Committee in Geneva is notified of their capture and camp location. A total of 5,931 food parcels were reported dispatched to camps in Europe during November to United States prisoners of war and internees. Prisoners receive a package a week and internees one every 2 weeks.

In addition to the standard Red Cross parcels, which have been carefully prepared by nutrition experts to counteract any vitamin deficiencies in the regular prison diet, a prisoner may also receive one supplementary parcel every 60 days his family or friends as soon as they have been officially notified by the Provost Marshal General's Office of his capture and whereabouts. Full directions for sending these parcels are sent to the next of kin at the time of notification. Information may also be obtained from any post office on what may be included in these parcels to prisoners of war, for which, under regulations recently issued by the Board of Economic Warfare, no individual export license is now required.

The American Red Cross food parcels contains evaporated milk, biscuit, cheese, coco, sardines, pork, beef, chocolate bars, sugar, coffee, powered orange concentrate, prunes, cigarettes and smoking tobacco. The contents of each package weigh 8½ lbs. The shipping weight is 11 lbs.

Large numbers of these standard food parcels have been shipped through the neutral port of Lisbon. They are carried from Lisbon on a vessel chartered by the International Red Cross Committee, under a safe [redacted] guarantee from the belligerent nations to Marseilles, or Genoa, and from there are sent by rail to Geneva. The International Committee arranges for their transport to the camps, where they are handed out by the "man of confidence," the camp leader chosen by the prisoners from among themselves. A system of receipts in triplicate, and constant checks by the International Red Cross Committee delegates who make periodic inspections of the camps, assure that all parcels are received by those for whom they are intended.

Twenty thousand American Red Cross parcels were sent last June to the Far East on the neutral diplomatic exchange ship, the Gripsholm, for distribution by International Red Cross Committee delegates to American prisoners in Japan, Occupied Chaina, and the Phillippines. The Gripsholm also carried 1,000,000 cigarettes, 10,000 tins of smoking tobacco, $50,000 worth of medical supplies, and quantities of clothing and other necessities furnished by the Army and Navy.

Much larger quantities of supplies have been loaded on the Gripsholm in anticipation of his second sailing, for which final clearance with the Japanese still awaited.

Even since the entry of the United States into the war, negotiations have been carried on vigorously throug Red Cross and diplomatic channels to establish a regular shipment of food parcels and other comforts for American prisoners in the Far East. Delay in completing such arrangements for prisoners of war is not unusual. It took almost a year before the British could make satisfactory arrangements for sending regular supplies of food parcels from England for British prisoners held in Germany in spite of the short distance to the Continent and other obviously more favorable factors.

In addition to the distribution of materials aid, all information about prisoners of war is cleared through the International Red Cross Committee's Central Agency for Prisoners of War at Geneva, which the belligerent nations during under the terms of the Geneva Convention of 1929, send lists of those captured, and the location of their prison camps, for transmission to the country interested.

Up to December 9, 1942, Germany had reported 228 United States prisoners of war and 1,491 interned United States civilians of whom 788 were men and 703 women. Itly had reported 17 United States prisoners of war and 21 United States internees of whom 13 were men and 8 women. Japan had reported 1,442 United States prisoners of war, 310 Army, 728 Marine Corps, and 404 Navy and 1,883 United States internees, 1,596 men and 287 women. Japan holds many times this number of Americans.

Walton Literary Club Entertained

Mrs. Alan H. Gaines was the very gracious hostess on Wednesday afternoon to the members of the Walton Woman's Literary Club, for their January meeting, which was conducted by the president, Mrs. Clayton Jones. Mrs. John L. Vest gave a report on the progress being made toward erecting an outdoor metal signboard, on which the names will be painted of all members of the United States armed forces who are from the Walton voting precinct. This project is sponsored by the club. Mrs. Pearl R. Johnson gave a very appropriate New Year "Thought for the Day." The members were delighted to have as their guest speaker on this occasion, Mrs. Ann Stewart, a resident of Boone County, and author of the book of fiction, "Let the Earth Speak." Mrs. Stewart, who is a gifted speaker, has chosen as her topic, "The Importance of Good Literature in Time of War." She is well informed on books and their writers, and gave extracts from "Birds of Dawning," by John Maysfield, and "Time of Man," by Elizabeth Roberts. Following adjournment, the hostess served a lovely salad course. Guests present at this meeting were: Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Joe Berkshire, Mrs. J. F. Cleek, Miss Anna Hudson, Mrs. Evan M. WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Nazis Face Serious Retreats in Russia Following New Major Gains by Soviet; U.S. Planes Smash Jap Ships at Rabaul; Gen. Clark Leads Africa Fifth Army

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

President Roosevelt examines a huge globe of the world, which was presented to him by the army. The globe, which is 50 inches in diameter, shows in considerable detail strategic areas of the earth's surface. It occupies a prominent place in the President's office in the White House.

SIGNIFICANCE:
Of Russia's Drive

While the world marveled at the military might of the Russians which was able to push the Nazis back all along the battle front the full significance of this winter campaign was overlooked by many. Should the offensive maintain its momentum of the early days of the new year Hitler's troops faced the definite prospect of retiring to lines they held in the last World war.

On both ends of the long fighting front the Russians were scoring major triumphs. In the north, the vital German-held supply base and rail center of Velikie Luki had fallen to the Soviet army. (Velikie Luki is only 200 miles from East Prussia.) In this sector the big threat was to the Nazis massed before Leningrad, because if the Russians pushed beyond Velikie Luki toward that stronghold all the Germans in the area would be cut off from supplies. Further extending the picture, military experts foresee the necessary evacuation of Estonia and northern Latvia.

Results

But while much of this campaign in the north was speculation, Russian might had already dealt a series of crushing blows to the Germans massed in front of Stalingrad and in the Caucasus. Success here came as the result of a bold strategic move on the part of Josef Stalin and General Zhukoff. For when these Russian leaders decided that Germany had about spent her might in the all-out effort to capture Stalingrad they unleashed a counter-offensive directly before the city. Soon they learned that the Germans had few reserves between the Volga and the Don rivers. Thus the Russians took heart and pushed westward toward the all-important city of Rostov.

Capture of Rostov would mean the entrapment of a million Nazis in the Caucasus. Hitler realized this and started a general movement of his troops in that sector. But again the Russians attacked and were successful in capturing many important points while driving the Nazis evar backward from their last year's goal —the oil fields of Grozny and Baku.

NEW SPIRIT:
On Capitol Hill

Over were the colorful opening sessions of the new 78th congress and the national legislators had settled down to the tough job ahead. Yet a new spirit—some observers called it a "spirit of Independence" —hung over Capitol Hill.

On the biggest objective of all—the winning of the war—there was unity between the two parties. There, however, unity ended.

Support of the administration in most of its home policies would no doubt be forthcoming from the Democratic side of both houses but there would be no quick "write your own ticket" edicts of power to the executive branch. Like their Republican brethren, the Democrats were in a "show me" mood as far as domestic programs were concerned.

So small was the control of the Democratic party that anything could and more than likely would happen. Republicans had their eyes on 1944 and were pledged to strictly uphold the position of an opposition party on matters affecting the home front.

SOUTH PACIFIC:
Allied Successes

Although the Allies won the battle of Buna, clearing that New Guinea area of Jap troops, activities in the South Pacific showed no signs of lessening. Jap resistance continued unabated in other areas.

Later communiques from General MacArthur's headquarters told of a successful heavy bombing attack upon a strong Japanese naval concentration at Rabaul, New Britain. Flying over the target, Flying Fortresses and Liberators scored direct hits with 1,000 pound bombs on eight Jap merchantmen and supply vessels. Another 1,000 pounder smashed into a destroyer tender, alongside which a destroyer was tied. All were left sinking or burning.

A government official in Melbourne, Australia, announced that the largest armada of transports, supply vessels and warships yet sent by Japan into the Southwest Pacific was being assembled at various points under cover of bad weather. The concentration meant one of three things, he said: 1. An attempt to retake Henderson air[illegible] Guadalcanal. 2. An effort to reinforce Jap units at Sanananda point in New Guinea. 3. An effort to strengthen Jap defensive positions in the entire area.

Guadalcanal

Encouraging news came from Guadalcanal island when American troops took from the Japanese important heights flanking the southwestern rim of the United States position in that sector. It was thought the advance may have signalized the beginning of a campaign to drive the enemy out of artillery range of the Solomon island air field. Six Jap counterattacks were repulsed with a loss of 150 enemy dead.

AFRICA FIFTH ARMY:
Gen. Clark in Command

Another step in the organization of huge Allied forces for the assault on Tunis and Bizerte in North Africa was made with the announcement that the United States fifth army has been activated and Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark placed in command of the new force.

General Clark, 46, is the hero who, traveling by submarine to North Africa three weeks before the Allied landings, held a secret rendezvous with French officers.

The announcement indicated that a large United States army of several divisions has been organized through its rank and is ready to fight alongside Lieut. Gen. K. A. N. Anderson's first army in Tunisia. The size of the army was not indicated. It may mean a force of as few as two or three divisions, although it may reach 10 or 12 divisions.

Meanwhile the United States army air force struck strong blows in support of French and American ground forces in central Tunisia. Railroad yards were bombed at Kairouan and other targets were smashed at Cherichera, five miles northeast of Foundouk.

Bad weather continued to keep the opposing armies comparatively inactive in the north. Observers said that French troops, with a complete disregard for politics and ancient equipment, are fighting with great gallantry in central and southern Tunisia.

FOOD PRICES:
And Subsidies

Householders with low incomes frozen for the duration, looked to Washington for further developments on a reported program to allow food prices to rise rather than to have the government continue subsidies to farmers.

This report indicated that such a policy is gradually being put into effect and that subsidies will be continued only where necessary to keep up farm production. If so, this program represents a change from that carried out under Leon Henderson who even "went around" congress to reach his subsidy goal.

At one time he asked congress for a half billion dollars to carry out a subsidy plan and keep food prices down. This was rejected and the government began to use funds of the Commodity Credit corporation to maintain temporary subsidies.

The new policy would have two main objectives:

1. To keep down the national debt by not allowing further subsidy payments from the federal treasury, and,

2. Would make consumers stand their share in a price raise. (It is argued that there is a great surplus buying power evident among consumers.)

But the householder whose income is not from war work and has not been increased because of the war boom was caught squarely in the middle. He found no comfort in the fact that food prices had risen 16 per cent in the year ending last October and that in November they had risen another 1.2 per cent. Later figures were not available for him to fret about.

CHINESE MISSION:
'Not Recalled'

Chang Tao-fan, Chinese minister of information, has emphatically denied that Lieut. Gen. Hsiung Shih-fei, head of the Chinese military mission to the United States, has been recalled.

After General Hsiung conferred recently with President Roosevelt, it was reported unofficially that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek had recalled the military mission because he was dissatisfied with American aid to China.

Chang said that Hsiung's visit to London—and even a trip to Chungking—was merely in the normal course of events. Hsiung will return to the United States, the minister of information said.

VICTORY FLEET:
Production Doubled

More than 16,000,000 tons of merchant shipping—double last year's output—will be produced in 1943, President Roosevelt predicted at a conference during which U. S. shipyards were praised by the President and by Adm. Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime commission, for their record-breaking performances.

The 1942 goal of 8,000,000 tons was surpassed by 90,000 tons. At the end of December merchant ships were being built at a rate of 14,400,000 tons a year, the President said. This rate will continue to increase until the peak is reached during May, at which time shipyards will be producing five ships a day, compared with a rate of four at present. Totals do not include a number of ships built for the armed forces.

When peak production for 1942 was reached in December, 121 ships, totaling 1,199,309 tons, were built. During all of 1941 only 95 ships, totaling 1,088,000 tons, were produced.

U. S. WAR DEAD:
Listed by OWI

Since Pearl Harbor, 8,531 members of the armed forces of the United States have been killed, the Office of War Information has disclosed. Total casualties have been 61,126, including killed, wounded, missing, interned in neutral countries and prisoners of army, navy, marine corps, coast guard and the Philippine Scouts.

The heaviest loss was reported by the navy, which lost 4,657 officers and men killed. The navy is in the process of reporting 23,254 casualties, excluding prisoners of war. Of this, 1,769 officers and men are reported as wounded and 8,970 missing.

The marine corps has reported 1,201 officers and men as dead; 1,658 as wounded and 1,943 as missing. A total of 50 coast guardsmen have been killed, 19 wounded and 134 are missing. The merchant marine reports 429 dead, 2,428 missing and none wounded.

Of the army's 36,528 casualties, 2,193 were wounded. This total includes 469 Philippine Scouts. Of the 29,265 missing, 11,352 were Philippine Scouts. The army listed 1,016 as prisoners of war and 106 interned in neutral countries.

A total of 4,230 United States civilians are interned by enemy.

BUTTER:

Effective February 1 a new order by Food Administrator Claude Wickard sets aside 30 per cent of the nation's creamery butter production for the military forces and the Lend-Lease program of 1943. This means that a civilian supply averaging 13 pounds of butter per person for the year will be available. This is three pounds less per person than was available last year. If production goals are not met or if military demands increase the available civilian supply may be cut still more.

LORD HALIFAX ENTERTAINS

Dignified Viscount Halifax, British ambassador and former foreign minister of Great Britain, was entertaining at dinner at the British embassy. The time had come for his guests to go into dinner, but they were so busily engaged in conversation that it was difficult for the ambassador to attract their attention.

"How shall we do this?" he appealed to delightful Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wife of the justice department's famous trust-buster.

"Down in Missouri where I come from," she suggested, "we sing out 'Come and get it!' "

So his lordship sang out to his assembled guests:

"Come and get it!"

TRUMAN COMMITTEE FIGHT

A hot fight is shaping up in the senate over continuation of the Truman committee.

Friends of Jesse Jones, WPB boss Donald Nelson and others who have been criticized by the committee have quietly been lining up support in the senate to force a termination of the Truman investigation after the next session of congress convenes.

Enemies of the committee thought they won a great victory when the senate voted, two days before adjournment, to abolish all of its investigating committees on January 31, 1943.

However, far-sighted Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, chairman of the senate audit and control committee, who handled this legislation, agreed privately with Senator Harry S. Truman of Missouri that his committee will get more funds.

Furthermore, one of the first things the Truman probers will examine when the next congress convenes will be the administration and necessity of nation-wide gasoline rationing.

PASS THE AMMUNITION

It hasn't been officially announced yet, but when Madame Chiang Kai-shek, "Generalissimistress of China" emerges from the hospital, she plans to come to Washington and camp at the White House until she has persuaded FDR to pass the ammunition.

Madame Chiang is a very persuasive person. She combines oriental charm with a Wellesley education. Unquestionably she will become China's "ambassador-in-effect" in Washington. Already Chinese Ambassador Wei is wondering whether he or Madame Chiang really represents the Chinese government.

But while there may be some doubt on that, there is absolutely no doubt that China wants more planes and wants them quickly. This time, it is not the appeal of a desperate people, but of a people ready to take the offensive. Chinese military experts declare that they can do more damage to Japan with one plane than British and Americans could do with two in the Solomons or the East Indies.

Reason is, that they can engage the enemy in great numbers, for all eastern China is occupied by Japan, whereas her forces in the Pacific are scattered from island to island.

Immediate objective of the Chinese drive—if they are allowed to make it—will be Hankow.

Madame Chiang will argue that capture of Hankow would disorganize the entire transportation system by which the Japanese ship supplies overland to Indo-China and Burma.

1944 Is Too Late.

Madame Chiang also has another powerful argument up her sleeve—that 1944 will be too late. The schedule now adopted by the United Nations high command to knock off Hitler first and then turn on Hirohito in 1944, is regarded by the Chinese as a dangerous and unsound strategy.

Month by month, the Japanese are consolidating. They are bringing together the rubber, tin, and oil of the East Indies, with the iron and coal of north China, and welding an industrial system which will be able to run indefinitely. No longer will scrap iron be necessary from the outside world.

If given time, Madame Chiang will argue, the Japs will complete the gaps in the rail lines between Singapore and China, and thus have an overland transportation route, safe from submarines. Then no matter how strong the British and American navies, they will be no more able to dent Jap supply lines than the Japs can dent our communications between San Francisco and New York.

That roughly is the powerful argument Madame Chiang Kai-shek will make.

Milton Eisenhower, brother of the U. S. North African commander, is a strong possibility to become assistant to Manpower Chief Paul McNutt. Eisenhower, now chief of the War Relocation authority, was born in Abilene, Kan., eight years after his army officer brother, who was born in Denison, Texas . . . Another strong possibility as McNutt's assistant is John Steelman, the crack labor conciliator, who, however, cannot well be spared from his present job.

Social Security Program, Labor Laws Face Congress

Proposed Legislation to Bring Unions Under Definite Restrictions; New Insurance Plan To 'Out-Beveridge' England's Program.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

As the ship of state pulls out of the holiday doldrums, skipper and crew are setting their jaws for rough weather. There are cross currents ahead in the new congress which are going to set the old ship rocking.

Symbolic of conflicting movements, the debate of which will soon be filling the Congressional Record, are these two: A proposed bill to bring labor unions into the restricting pale of legislation such as business has to contend with under the anti-trust laws, and a social security program which some say will out-Beveridge England's new Beveridge plan. That program, its author, Sir William Beveridge says, is "in some ways a revolution."

The "holiday doldrums" I mentioned were not entirely a seasonal affair this year. There was the usual letdown while congress went home and the nation turned to festal thoughts. There was also a premeditated lull which was necessitated by the turnover in the last election. The administration knew that no matter what was done in the interim between November and January, it would, in some measure, be undone when anti-administration Democrats and the increased Republican minority got together in the new congress.

Stop-Gap Arranged

Since manpower is the prime consideration of the moment, a stop-gap was arranged. With much fanfare Manpower Commissioner McNutt was given new powers and a far-flung program was ballyhooed. But it was mostly ballyhoo and just before Christmas wide publicity was given to a document which was obviously the forewarning that much stricter regimentation of labor was in the wind. The long-postponed, but inevitable, national service act raised its head again.

The document was a draft of a bill made by Grenville Clark, an attorney who suddenly emerged as a presidential advisor. It was announced that he made a special trip to England to study the British manpower setup. Clark remained silent until just before Christmas and after congress had gone home, but every congressman received a copy of the proposed legislation.

About two weeks earlier, shortly after the Beveridge report was made public, a cabinet officer was heard to remark: "We've got to get busy and draw up a program that fits America's needs a little better than the Beveridge plan would."

But the lull was still lulling then and when the President was asked at a press and radio conference if he were preparing a message for congress on the subject—that was about the time of the remark of the cabinet member—he said "no."

The Beveridge plan was the natural result of the Battle of Britain. Then a common danger brought the British people closer together. The underfed, underclothed and underhoused had to be taken care of. Class lines don't exist in the shambles. A bombed-out duchess can be as cold and hungry as a waif. The poor suddenly realized that if they could be taken care of as well or better in an emergency, they ought to have a little better distribution of the ordinary decencies of life in prosperous peace times. Wise leaders didn't wait until the war was over to face angry demands which might turn into real revolution. Sir William Bevaridge's committee drew up the blueprint for what they called "a British revolution" in the country's economic setup undar which, as one spokesman described it, "the people would contribute by their own preference, to a national insurance fund rather than take a handout from the state."

'Assurance'

The goal of the Beveridge plan is to lay the ghost of insecurity by means of "assurance." Assurance is the British word for what we call "insurance" and which really defines the commodity better than our word—assurance that men and women would have a subsistence through sickness and unemployment and old age; would have money to take the baby through its difficult early stages; enough for a decent burial without burdening friends or relatives; would provide a working woman with a bonus when she married so she wouldn't be penalized for enjoying connubial bliss. All this would be done on the principle of ordinary commercial insurance except that the government would run the machinery, both labor and capital would contribute as such and the people as a whole, in accordance with their income, would pay a share through taxes.

The plan is not new. But it is a considerable extension of the present security laws such as Britain has had for a long time and such as the New Deal brought to America.

No sane American politician, no matter how far he leaned to tha conservative side, would suggest repealing America's social security laws. It couldn't be done. But the controversy will arise in congress when attempts are made, as they will be, to extend the benefits, both as to amounts paid and to new categories of workers. Such extensions are contemplated in the plan now cooking in Washington.

Labor Regulation

That is one trend we can look for. Running counter to it on the surface, but really also shooting at tha "greatest good for the greatest number" is the trend toward regulation of organized labor. Probably a dozen bills have been drawn up, all of which tend to put the screws on labor unions. Many liberals feel that the unions have it coming. The growing number of strikes in wartime, when maximum production is a matter of patriotism as well as necessity, the existing union rules which tend to interfere with maximum production, the various "restraints" considered as evil as the "restraint of trade" resulting from monopolies, all have been highlighted by war conditions. Bills will be presented to root out these ills. Much of the restriction of unions could be avoided if the unions cleaned their own house.

In America, as in England, when a nation is called upon to make the sacrifices demanded by this war, it can be expected that the people will insist on a democratic distribution of opportunity and reward of effort when peace comes. The war will also have taught that maximum production means maximum prosperity. There are plenty of people to consume peacetime products; there are plenty of natural resources whose development can furnish the jobs for the consumers and provide the pay which makes it possible for them to buy what is produced. Any group or institution—farm, labor, management—which stands in the way of this maximum production is bound to have its wings clipped. Meanwhile, the people will demand and get greater "assurance" against rainy days, which come even when prosperity is with us. And in providing it, if Britain comes along, America cannot be far behind.

Sightless Workers

Lockheed officials report that 13 blind workers who are helping build fighting and bombing planes in the California plant are in some respects better than average and turn out more work than their fellows because of higher concentration. Including two women, these sightless workers passed a month's placement test in the Lockheed factory and are now working as tubing assemblers, burring-roll operators and assemblers of switch boxes. One is a paris handler on a conveyor in the paint shop.

Guide dogs bring the blind employees to the plant each morning and doze all day beneath their masters' benches. Miss Hazel Hurst, sightless president of a foundation for training blind persons, worked at every job before selecting the blind worker to be placed in it. However, the number of jobs they can perform with safety will always be limited, she said. Lockheed hopes to find jobs for more sightless workers.

The use of aerial bombs as air-raid warning devices are frowned upon by the war department in a statement to OCD officials. Not only is the sound of aerial bombs easily confused with that of antiaircraft fire, but "they have doubtful value for warning purposes." Communities now using aerial bombs should discontinue the practice.

West Point at War

By Maj. Gen. Francis B. Wilby
(Supt. of West Point Academy)

Being a newspaper columnist and reporter is a new experience for me. However, I feel that I can give you a "Reporter's Report to the Nation" from West Point, which should be of interest to every red-blooded American.

I wish that everyone could visit West Point for just one day, and see what I see. You would get an inspiration that you cannot help but feel when you see the men of the Corps and what they are doing. They are not only fitting themselves for whaling this war, but also for winning the peace, and preventing, if possible, the recurrence of such another world conflagration as we are passing through today.

As you know, a cross-section of American youth is selected from all parts of the country to come to West Point. They are selected by the most democratic of methods, many of them by winning competitive examinations.

Starting with these young men, we aim to develop a rigorously trained soldier-officer, a job which is greatly facilitated by the fact that the Cadets themselves sincerely desire to make the most of the opportunity they have here. With the rapidly changing weapons and new methods developed in modern warfare, we are constantly working to keep up to date and give the latest, most accurate information and training to the Cadets.

The Cadets learned and were doing everything a thoroughly trained enlisted man ought to be able to do, and before the Summer was over, they looked like veterans.

Summer maneuvers don't end the story of tough training at West Point. Summer maneuvers are just a phase of the year-round program which is built to train fighting leaders.

Every minute of the 16-hour day (6 a. m. to 10 p. m.) is filled by a tight schedule of instruction, study, and athletics plus tactical training in the arms and branches of the Service. The program is designed to turn out officers schooled in all types of army operation, and each Cadet is familiarized with the use of every weapon from the pistol to the airplane.

So one can see the West Pointer is TOUGH—physically and mentally. He has to be.

At the close of the Summer, the Cadets came back into the classrooms for what we call academics. During the Winter months emphasis is placed upon academic instruction while the schedule in tactical training is somewhat reduced.

A reporter probably would say that we have a highly mathematical and stiff engineering course. Perhaps that is right, but the West Point curriculum aims at teaching a man to think, to reason, and to draw sound conclusions expressed clearly and concisely. Mathematics and the sciences provide this training of the mind which we believe is so essential in order to produce the finest military leaders.

I am happy to announce that this week the West Point instruction is being given a first-hand inspection by some of the leading educators in our country. I have invited Doctor Compton, President of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Doctor Hopkins, President of Dartmouth, along with the principal military experts on training in our Army today, Major General Bull of the Replacement Training Center of the Ground Forces, Brigadier Huebner of the Training Division of the Services of Supply, Brigadier General Edwards of the Training Division of the War Department General Staff, and Colonel Schlatter of the Flying Training Command of the Army Air Forces, to meet, confer and review our plans for the new 3-year course at the Military Academy. With this course we propose to produce a graduate of West Point who will have the finest education and training it is possible to afford in the time available. By constantly keeping abreast of the latest developments, we aim to do the job which America and Americans have asked us to do.

In the days of Robert E. Lee and U. S. Grant, West Point produced men to meet the challenge of their era. John J. Pershing fulfilled his task in the days of the Kaiser.

During the past Summer over 2,000 West Pointers went through the most rigorous field maneuvers that have been held in the history of the Academy. Every phase of combat training was given the Cadets. They worked, they sweated, they maneuvered over the hills and through the rivers of northwest New York State, as well as here at West Point. They had a good taste of how modern campaigns are fought.

During these maneuvers some of the toughest combat problems were carried out by the Cadets.

Famous Mule Dies

ONE of the most famous mules in American history died the other day. Myrtle was her name and when her service of more than a third of a century to the United States army ended at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., she was cremated with full military honors.

Not only was Myrtle the oldest mule in the army at the time of her death, but she had another distinction. She was once the subject of a special order issued by Gen. John J. Pershing that when her days of usefulness were over, she was not to be destroyed (as is usually the case with army mules) but was to be permitted to die a natural death.

That was because Myrtle was the last survivor of the pack train which accompanied "Black Jack" into northern Mexico back in 1917 when he was engaged in his chase of Pancho Villa after that Mexican leader had led the raid on Columbus, N. M. Two years ago, when Myrtle was 33 years old, she became dangerously ill and a veterinarian suggested shooting her. But Col. Lee Davis, then post commander at Fort Huachuca, remembered General Pershing's order and the mule was spared to enjoy two more years of ease on the "retired list."

However, the honors heaped upon Myrtle are not the first that have been bestowed upon one of the long-eared, end highly important, "sidejuncts" of Uncle Sam's fighting forces. On October 8, 1937, Jack, another veteran of the Mexican border troubles, was officially retired from service at the age of 29 and on that occasion the 62nd coast artillery (anti-aircraft) regiment staged a full-dress review at Fort Totten, N. Y., in his honor.

At that time the Chicago Daily News commented editorially:

"The review is said to be the first tendered to a mule as guest of honor in the New York area. That may be so, but it is not the first official honor given the army mule.

"History and tradition are full of such honors, beginning, perheps, with the brevet awarded the leader of the Civil war herd that stampeded and routed a Confederate attack in the vicinity of Chattenooga. Then there was the mule that tumbled off a cliff while packed with a loaded Gatling gun, the fire from which frightened off a band of Indians in ambush.

"There was Arizona, wounded in the Meuse-Argonne, who was decorated by the 30th infantry, and Whiskey, purchased by the 28th infantry when its service company was motorized, who was turned out to graze in a mule Valhalla at Fort Niagara.

"A more wholesale honor was paid at Washington, where a tablet commemorates the 243,135 mules of the American expeditionary forces.

"The army mule's endurance has been the subject of many encomiums. A first cavalry mule who somersaulted down an Idaho mountain and was left for dead, turned up in camp that night unharmed.

"Perhaps we should not mention the mule that hospitalized most of a national guard machine gun company on the border some years ago, and the mule whose kick cost the government a $10,000 insurance payment, except that it reminds us that, even in these days of motorization and mechanization, there is still many a kick left in the old army mule."

That there is "many a kick left in the old army mule" yet is proved by the fact that, even in the "streamlined" and mechanized modern American army, there is still a place for the mule. Visit Camp Carson near Colorado Springs, Colo., and there you will see the 98th field artillery with its guns mounted on mule-back. That is, you'll see it unless it's off on a hike such as the outfit took recently when its 793 men and 790 mules climbed to the top of Pikes peak, thereby providing such a sight as that mountain has not seen in all the years since it was "discovered" by Lieut. Zebulon Pike away back in 1806!

No list of famous mules would be complete without mention of Mademoiselle Verdun, mascot of the 15th United States field artillery, who was born on April 16, 1918, in France, in the Troyon sector while the Second division, of which the 15th artillery was then a part, was holding the lines near the site of the historic battle of Verdun. Mademoiselle Verdun went through the Belleau Woods, Vaux, St. Mihiel, Mont Blanc and Meuse-Argonne offensives with the regiment and accompanied it when it marched into Germany after the Armistice.

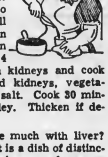
Budget That Meat, Serve Delicious Stews
(See Recipes Below)

Stretch That Meat!

Today most of you homemakers find the meat situation actually testing your mettle. In your trips to the butcher's you may find many cuts of meat you haven't used often in the past, and less and less of the cuts you know how to use and that your family has eaten rarely. But those are the meats available for your menus, and thus I'm going to give you some first aid in preparing them.

Fortunately, the cheaper cuts of meat, along with liver and kidneys and the other entrails not included in the meat rationing program are as rich in proteins and minerals as their better known relatives. Cooked correctly, they can become as popular.



"Extend the meat" should become the motto of every family for the duration. The way to do it is to include unrationed cuts plentifully through the menus, use cereals and meat extenders such as oatmeal end bread crumbs on rationed cuts, and substitute fowl and cheese in the menu for steaks and chops as often as possible.

Veal kidneys combine with beef in this especially delightful and nutritious stew—and stretch that beef to serve eight people. It's a colorful main dish with bright carrots and button mushrooms:

Beef and Kidney Stew.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 veal kidneys
1 pound beef, cut in strips
1 cup sliced carrots
1 cup sliced onion
1 cup cubed potatoes
1 cup sliced or button mushrooms
2 tablespoons worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon salt
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

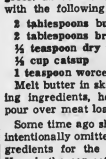
Remove skin and fat from kidneys; soak in cold, salted water for 1 hour; cover with cold water; bring slowly to boiling point. Drain; cut into small pieces. Roll beef strips in flour; brown in hot fat. Add 4 cups stock from kidneys and cook 30 minutes. Add kidneys, vegetables, sauce and salt. Cook 30 minutes. Add persley. Thicken if desired.

Have you done much with liver? Then you know it is a dish of distinction, worthy of being served even on special occasions:

This Week's Menu

*Beef and Kidney Stew
Waldorf Salad Rye Bread-Butter
Orange Tapioca
Honey Brownies Beverage
*Recipe Given

Liver Loaf.
(Serves 6 to 8)



1 pound of beef liver
1 onion, chopped
½ pound pork sausage
1 cup dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon celery salt
2 beaten eggs
½ cup liver or chicken stock

Cover liver with hot water and simmer 5 minutes. Drain liquid to use for stock. Force liver and onion through food chopper. Add remaining ingredients. Form into a loaf in a pan and bake in s moderete oven (350 degrees) 45 minutes. Serve with broiled bacon or tomato slices, if desired.

Rice With Pork Liver.
(Serves 6)

1¼ pounds pork liver, sliced
4 strips bacon
¾ cup rice
3 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 or 3 sliced carrots
2 sliced onions

Fry the liver with the bacon until brown, then add rice which has been soaked in water for a half hour. Cover with hot water or chicken stock, add parsley, carrots, onion, salt and pepper to taste. Simmer slowly until tender, about 40 minutes.

Oatmeal is an excellent source of the B vitamins and proteins and therefore makes an excellent meat extender. Here it's used to make that meat go further:

Meat Loaf.
(Serves 8)

1½ pounds of beef or beef and pork combined
¾ cup onion, minced
1 cup oatmeal
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup catsup
1 egg, beaten
1 cup water
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning

Combine all ingredients and blend well together. Pack into a loaf pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) about 45 to 50 minutes. Serve with the following sauce:

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons brown sugar
½ teaspoon dry mustard
⅓ cup catsup
1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce

Melt butter in skillet, add remaining ingredients, heat through, and pour over meat loaf when baked.

Some time ago shortening was unintentionally omitted in the list of ingredients for the following cookie. Here is the corrected recipe:

Oatmeal Drops
2 cups 3-minute oats
½ cup shortening
1 cup corn syrup
½ cup flour
1 teaspoon soda dissolved in 4 tablespoons boiling water
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup chopped raisins

Bring to a boil in a saucepan, the corn syrup, shortening, and raisins and cook for 5 minutes, then add soda. Mix in oats, flour and nutmeg. Blend well and drop by spoonfuls on a greased and floured baking sheet 2 inches apart. Bake in a hot (375-400-degree) oven for 10 minutes.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Citrus fruits, apples, Hubbard squash or acorn squash offer bargains during the cool crisp months. Include them in on your menus.

What to do about those recipes calling for whipped cream? You can use a little of the cream off the top of the bottle, if you chill it well for a day or so, and chill the bowl which you use for whipping . . . and the beaters too. Some of the brands of canned milk will also whip, if they're well chilled, along with the bowl and beaters.

If you're unable to obtain chocolate or cocoa sometimes at the grocer's, use victory type of cookies utilizing honey, corn syrup and the wheat flour for darker cakes.

Inexpensive delicacies to help you on the slender meat-rationed days: boiled, baked tongue with raisin or cranberry sauce; pigs feet; oxtail soup; hocks; brains; tripe with broiled mushrooms.

JESUS WINNING SOULS

LESSON TEXT—John 4:27-42.
GOLDEN TEXT—He that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal.—John 4:36.

Man's need is the same wherever and whoever he may be. The Christ who met the need of the distinguished religious leader Nicodemus did the same for the poor sinful woman of Samaria.

The incident at Jacob's well in Sychar took place when Jesus, leaving Jerusalem because of increasing hindrance to His work, went up to Galilee. Unlike His Jewish brethren, who detoured around the land of the hated "half-breed" Samaritans, He "must needs go through Samaria," for there was a sin-sick soul that needed Him.

Our lesson abounds with instruction regarding soul-winning, both in principle and in practice. We here find Jesus:

I. Winning a Soul-Winner (vv. 27-30).

The faithful and kindly ministry of Christ led the woman to faith in Him as the Messiah. She left her water pot and ran at once into the city to share her new-found joy with everyone she knew.

Since the first expression of spiritual life is testimony, the one who brings a sinner to Christ not only saves a soul, but also wins a worker for Christ. One fears that we often assume that winning men to Christ is enough. We should expect that the new light should shine forth into the darkness.

So we have a two-fold reason for soul-winning; saving a soul from perdition, and setting a life on fire for testimony. It's a great business. Why don't we do more of it?

II. Instructing Soul-Winners (vv. 31-38).

This work of soul-winning requires a sustaining grace which this world cannot give. Jesus by His own example showed His disciples how that strength comes from above.

He who had seated Himself at the well, tired and hungry, to await the return of the disciples with food, had been refreshed in the doing of the Father's will—in reaching this forlorn woman. "The greatest thing that ever occurs in the world is the transformation of a human soul, and the greatest joy anyone can ever have is to act as the divine agent in bringing about such a transformation" (Douglass).

There is another thing these soul-winners needed to learn—even as we need to learn and re-learn it—that the time to win souls is now. How prone the human being is to procrastinate. Tomorrow—next Sunday—next week, we will speak to someone about his spiritual need. Next year we will give more liberally for missions, or for the work of soul-winning in our local church! But "look on the fields." Do you not see "that they are ripe already unto harvest"?

Again, soul-winners need to remember our Lord's words in verses 36-38. Not only the reapers receive the reward, but also those who sow and those who labor in order that the harvest may come. The man who plows is just as important as the one who reaps—perhaps some would say more important. Some of us who are called to be God's plowmen should remember that and be encouraged in our labors.

Like the perfect leader that He was, Jesus did not require of His disciples what He did not do Himself. So we find Him again in the work of evangelism. He practiced what He preached.

III. Practicing Soul-Winning (vv. 39-42).

There is real danger that those of us who have a measure of leadership in the church may be quick to tell others whist they ought to do—and not do it ourselves. This is particularly true in this matter of soul-winning. One is apt to write, preach and teach about it, and then neglect to do it.

The disciples had been to town for bread. One wonders whether they had talked to the store-keeper about Christ. Have you?

Jesus did not theorize about it—He really sought men for God. The testimony of the woman He had won sent a host of people out from the city. He spoke to them the word of life and they believed.

This was evidently "group evangelism" as distinguished from the "personal evangelism" which won the woman. They are both important, and belong together. Some are saying that the days of group evangelism are gone. We doubt that, but certainly the days of personal evangelism are always here. Let us be busy about that kind of soul-winning—and God may so bless that we will have a real revival. Are you ready for it?

The Best Prayer

ON THE HOME FRONT with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THIS is the story of an old couch that became glamorous and played a conspicuous part in a charming sunny living room. The transformation started with a heavy cotton twill fabric in a soft tan tone to match the background color of the hooked rug that you see in front of the couch. It was decided not to use any contrasting trimming but to accent the clean-cut box-like edges outlining the couch pad and cushions with a second seam on the outside.

When the smartly tailored cover was completed it was fastened firmly in place with zippers of the type that come apart at the bottom—one side being stitched to the seam allowance of the cover and the other sewn to the couch pad. Next came the stiff cushions to stand up at the back. These were made with an inside core of newspapers tightly bound together with muslin bands and then padded with cotton batting, as shown.

NOTE: Directions for making the hooked rug in this sketch may be found on page 14 of your copy of Book 3. Directions for making the spool table at the left of this sketch are also in that book. The velvet covered frames for the pictures over the couch are in Book 6, which also contains a description of the series of booklets prepared by Mrs. Spears as a service to our readers. Address:

MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR LIGHTING

(No. 8 of a Series)

Avoid Sharp Contrasts of Light and Shadow

Ever notice how it tires your eyes to read under a single bright light when the rest of the room is in semi-darkness? The reason is that brightness causes the pupils of your eyes to contract while darkness causes them to expand. Every time you let your eyes stray from your brighly-lighted book to the surrounding shadow area, your eyes try to adjust themselves to the change. Eventually this causes eyestrain and its accompaniment of fatigue and nervous muscular tension. For maximum eye comfort, you should not only have plenty of well-diffused light on your reading or sewing, but ample soft light elsewhere throughout the room. Good light, evenly distributed, adds to your reading enjoyment and also protects precious eyesight.

Two Cures for "Spotty" Lighting

I. E. S. LAMP

I. E. S. Better Sight Floor Lamps provide both downward light for reading or sewing and upward light which is reflected from the ceiling for general room illumination. The average living room needs at least two.

I. E. S. Pin-to-Wall Lamps provide generous soft light for those hard-to-light corners and out-of-the-way nooks.

ACE IN THE HOLE

by JACKSON GREGORY

©GREGORY W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Ann Lee and Cole Cody, beneficiaries under two identical wills made by Early Bill Cole, in which he left each of them all his money and the King Cole Ranch, arrived in the town of Bald Eagle by stage coach. During the journey they were held up by bandits and the driver and one other passenger wounded. Arriving at Bald Eagle the wounded men were cared for by Old Doc Joe. At the Long Chance Cole Cody met Portirio Lopez, who invited Cody to drink with him. Through Lopez he learned of the death of Early Bill. Upon arrival at King Cole Ranch, Ann Lee, accompanied by Aunt Jenifer, was greeted by Rance Waldron.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VII

Ann came close to the stove.

"What are we going to do?" she whispered. "He is related to Mr. Cole; he thinks he is the owner now; he never heard of any will and—He is terribly good looking, isn't he, Aunt Jenny? I like him, don't you? And it's going to seem like stealing from him—"

"So he is good looking, is he?" miffed Aunt Jenifer, hunting the coffee pot. "Well, so was our stage friend of yesterday, Mr. Cody, wasn't he?"

"Why, Aunt Jenny! You don't like Mr. Waldron! Why?"

"I haven't said any such thing. And if you're asking why—well, just you wait and watch, my pet. He remembers to wash his face and hands, and he remembers about breakfast—and he doesn't forget to shut doors after him—and he doesn't forget to bar his door at night and pull the shades down—and what I want to know is this: Is he going to forget to put our horse in the barn and give it some hay! You just lift up those heavy eye-lashes of yours high enough so you can peek out of your eyes, and watch what happens. And are you going to keep toting that satchel of yours around every step you take?"

Ann clutched it the tighter.

"I'm not going to let it out of my sight, not for one little second, not until that other key—Aunt Jenny! Do you suppose that Rance Waldron is the one with the other key? Why, of course he is! Being Mr. Early Bill's nephew—"

"Son of old Bill'a cousin," corrected Aunt Jenifer. "Or so he says."

By the time Rance Waldron returned to them—and again they heard the soft closing of at least two doors marking his progress—the table was set under a sunny window and breakfast was ready. He was hatless this time and had combed his hair. He smiled and said briskly, "Ah! This is the life!" Yet it struck the observant girl, sensitive to shades of expression, that it was just his lips that smiled, and that there was a hint of sternness and of irritation in his eyes.

"So you came in by stage last night?" he said as they sat down and Aunt Jenifer poured the three cups of good hot coffee and served him his breakfast.

Ann nodded, and told him of their adventure on the mountain road, of the fallen tree and the attempted hold-up, warming to the recital as its details thrilled through her again, making much of each little happening—omitting only any particular reference to Mr. William Cole Cody. It was quite as though she had forgotten that such an individual had ever existed. But when she had finished, and her aunt looked sharply at her and sniffed, her face turned red.

Rance heard her out without interruption, then said thoughtfully, "It's a funny sort of thing, isn't it? Why do you suppose they wanted to stick up the stage if it wasn't carrying a strong box? What do you suppose that the little man—What did you say his name was? Jenkins?—what do you suppose he had on him?"

"We didn't find out," Ann told him. "He was badly hurt; he didn't say anything. It must have been a lot of money, though, and the robbers must have known about it somehow."

"Well, now with things as they are, what do you ladies plan? It must be a terrible disappointment for you not to find your intended host here to receive you. Are you going home right away?"

Rance showed Ann the way into the patio, flooded now with golden sunshine, Aunt Jenifer saying, "You go ahead, Ann; I'll come along as soon as I finish the dishes. No! I don't want anybody in my way helping me!"

"Do you mind," said Rance when they were outside, "if I leave you a few moments? As I told you, I was going through a lot of pretty badly messed-up papers and accounts last night. Part of the mess I've got fairly well in mind right now; I think twenty minutes more with it and I could put it away ship-shape. I hope you don't mind?"

He hurried away, stopped and headed back to the kitchen.

"I never tasted such coffee," he told Aunt Jenifer. "I'm off to my room for a little more study of those papers; I think I'll take another cup along with me." And, carrying the full cup, he departed.

She stopped what she was doing and stood with her head tipped to one side, listening with all her ears. She had noticed something: Before he had put two spoons of sugar to each cup—this time four. She nodded complacently to herself when she heard for the third time the soft closing of doors.

"Man or woman company, which?" she asked herself. "I wonder! And what's he scared of?"

Only a moment did she loiter in the patio garden; its beauty was all about her, steeped in the rare sweetness of the early morning and she was aware of it, yet her troubled thoughts kept darting away. Suddenly she whirled and scurried back into the house, running to her aunt in the kitchen.

"Aunt Jenny!" she cried reproachfully. "Why don't you help me? I don't know what to do! He doesn't want us here—he has as good as told us to go—"

"Well, we're not going! Or are we?"

"Of course not! Not, anyhow, until we find out about everything."

"Shush! Here comes Mr. Rance again."

Rance returned and stood in the doorway, looking in upon them gravely.

"I decided to put everything aside for a while," he said, his eyes flicking from the girl's face to her aunt's, back to Ann's and back again to Jenifer's, as though he were for the first time really taking stock of them, as though he measured them, perhaps to decide which of the two did the thinking and deciding for both. They saw instantly that during these few minutes his mood had altered, hardened; the line of his lips was straight and firm, his eyes were steady and stern.

He pulled a Colt forty-five aut of its holster, stepped across the threshold.

"You see," he went on, "this is really no place for you people at this particular time. I couldn't pretend to make it pleasant for you—under the circumstances. What I should like very much would be for you to come back out here in a few days and be my guests. I'll be coming into Bald Eagle; you'll be staying there at the hotel for a while? I could pick you up and bring you out again."

"My! You do sound hospitable!" said Aunt Jenifer.

He frowned at that. "My dear lady," he said curtly, "just how hospitable I sound has nothing to do with it. You were invited, you tell me, by old Bill Cole. Well, he's dead and gone, and as far as I know that's the end of that invitation. Were circumstances different—did I not have so much on my hands—"

"Mr. Waldron!" cried the girl, her cheeks flaming. "I hadn't meant to say anything like this, but I will now—"

"Count four and twenty, Tatticorum," said Aunt Jenifer warmingly.

"I won't! I've counted enough already! Mr. Waldron, it goes against the grain to come the first time into Mr. Early Bill's home and start talking like this, but how can I help it? You are distantly related to him, yes, but—Did you ever hear of his making a will?"

"A will?" He stared at her so sternly then and for such a long, silent time that she felt a shiver up her back. He didn't seem exactly surprised, she thought that his eyes narrowed speculatively, and she thought there was a glint of menace in them, that was all. "So he did make a will, did he? You don't mean that you are the lucky one?"

"Maybe I am!"

"Maybe?" He gave her a high-shouldered shrug. "Just what does that mean? And I didn't even know that you and my uncle were old friends! Just how long and how well did you know him?"

"I never saw him in my life and you know I didn't! But—"

"This will, now? What are its terms, young lady? When was it made? And where is it now?"

"It—" But she bit the words back. She couldn't tell him. "It's right here in this room! It's locked up in an old iron box in my satchel yonder! There are two keys to the box and I've got only one! For a minute I wondered if you had the other one!" No, none of that was to be spoken without looking ahead.

He laughed at her.

"Really, Miss Lee! Now, look here; if there's any will we'll talk about it when it turns up. As a matter of fact, I happen to know that there isn't any. Also I know that he was going to make one—but he didn't get time! He died first! Meantime, as next of kin, I am taking care of things here. I'm sorry that I can't ask you to stay. Really, I am sorry!"

"We're not going!" cried the girl. "I won't budge, for one. He wasn't your uncle, anyhow, just some sort of distant cousin or something. And he didn't like you! Neither do I! I've come over a hundred miles and at Mr. Early Bill's invitation — and here I stay!"

Rance's voice sharpened.

"Finished? Good! Now you listen to me—"

"What goes on here?" asked a man's voice, very cool and calm, almost at a drawl, yet quietly emphatic.

It was Cal Roundtree, old Early Bill's foreman. Hat in hand he came in from the patio, stepping softly on his toes because of his spurs.

"It's nothing that I can't take care of, Roundtree," said Rance, very curt. "Any time that I need you I'll let you know."

"Thanking you kindly," said Cal Roundtree, and then stood pulling one end of his moustache, then the other, while his serene eyes regarded the two women with the frankest interest. "Mornin', ladies," he greeted them. "Me, I'm Roundtree, Calhoun Roundtree, used to be foreman for old man Cole." He appraised the older woman at his leisure, no impertinence in his look, just unmasked inquiry, then transferred his investigations to the girl. His eyes brightened, but then most eyes brightened when they met Ann Lee's eyes. "It might be," said Cal Roundtree, and sounded friendly, "that you're Miss Ann Lee, come up here to see Early Bill?"

"Why, yes! How did you know?"

"I had a mite of a talk with him a few days ago, shortly before he petered out," said Cal. "He said as how he was expectin' comp'ny. It would be you and with you, maybe, your aunt—Miss Jenifer Edwards, ma'am?" he asked in that gentle voice of his.

Aunt Jenifer nodded.

"Pleased to meet you ladies," said Cal then, and offered a horny, toil-blackened hand. "You're right welcome, that's what Early Bill says I'm to say to you, and to make yourselves to home long as you care to tarry. He says likewise he's most sorry not to be able to be here to shake you by the hand, him bein' called away to keep a date he mustn't be late at." He cleared his throat and clapped on his hat. "I happened to see the horse and buggy. First, I thought maybe the horse might like a drink of water and a forkful of hay; next, I says to myself, That's a livery stable rig from Bald Eagle. Comp'ny! And I reckoned it might be you ladies."

Rance Waldron heard him out, his gorge rising, his face a hot congested red when at last he said in a repressed voice bespeaking a cold fury,

"Roundtree, when you're wanted here at the house I'll let you know. I'm taking care of things up here, understand?"

Cal started to go, then turned and came back. "Either of you ladies know how to shoot a gun off?" he asked gently.

"Ann there," said her aunt, "can shoot your eye out at fifty yards!"

Cal chuckled. "Me, I'll make a point not gettin' ornery around you, ma'am," he told Ann. He pulled a Colt forty-five up out of its holster, stepped across the threshold of the kitchen and dropped the gun to the table. "Any time you want anything," he said, "you just blaze away with that; me, I'll be down around the corral somewhere, anyhow not too far off to hear it—Like Early Bill said, make yourselves to home, ladies," and departed, stepping softly, along with a scowling Rance Waldron.

"I like him," said Ann Lee when the two had gone. "Isn't he—"

Aunt Jenifer jerked her head about and cupped a hand to her ear.

"Hera comes the rest of the world, I reckon," she said contentedly. "For so far from everywhere, we sure do see folks! Someone on horseback like he was riding a race. Now who do you suppose this young feller is?"

They waited in the patio to find out. He dismounted out under the big oak, around the corner of the building just out of sight. Then they heard him coming on to the house—and then he came to the big arch giving upon the patio, and saw them and lifted his hat—

Ann Lee gasped at the sight of him, startled. The twinkle came glinting back into Aunt Jenifer's eye.

Here came the young man of the stage, Mr. William Cole Cody.

KIDNEY STONES

A patient consulted a physician for a pain in the region of the appendix. As the appendix had been removed, the physician told the patient that the pain was likely due to adhesions following the appendix operation. However, to the surprise of the physician X-rays showed a large stone in the kidney and that kidney stone was removed.

Dr. Barton

It was because the pain was in the appendix region and there was no pain in the back or pain following the course of the tube carrying urine from kidney to bladder, that caused the physician to mistake kidney stone for adhesions. Thanks to the X-rays the removal of the kidney stone brought complete relief from pain.

The above, however, is an "exceptional" case as most cases of kidney stone that cause symptoms can be recognized.

Dr. Charles Pierre-Mathe, San Francisco, director of the department of urology, St. Mary's hospital in "Clinical Medicine" says:

"A sudden, severe pain in the small of the back or abdomen which radiates to the groin should be looked on with suspicion by the attending physician. All patients suffering from kidney stones have red blood cells in the urine which can be detected by making a microscopic examination. I have never seen a patiant suffering with kidney stone whose urine did not show red blood cells under the microscope. In many patients, crystals, usually of the variety found in the stone present, are encountered.

While the family physician with the aid of X-rays, microscopic examination of urine, use of dyes, can locate the position and composition of the stone or stones, Dr. Mathe advises, and most physicians will agree, that a genito-urinary specialist—urologist—should be called into consultation in these cases. The urologist will carry out a complete examination including cystoscopy—instrument with lamps and mirror—use of a catheter up into ureters (the two tubes carrying urine from kidneys to bladder), study of the amount of urine coming from each kidney, and a complete study of the urine collected from kidneys and bladder.

After removal of stone or stones, they are examined to find composition and nature or organisms present so that the proper diet and antiseptics can be used to try to prevent the formation of more stones.

Diabetic Coma And Insulin Shock

Some months ago a moving picture showed the inside of a hospital in which a patient was undergoing diabetic coma. The floor nurse had rushed for the intern on duty, and on arrival the young physician injected insulin and ordered salt solution. The physician in charge of the case when told about the patient's symptoms was furious, and told the young intern that the patient was suffering from insulin shocks, too much insulin, and the patient's life was endangered.

The young intern suggested that they both take a look at the patient and he was found to be in a normal condition.

The point of the story of the picture does not concern us. However, there are now so many diabetics, all of whom know how to treat themselves when at home or at work, who may be placed in strange surroundings when they are suffering with diabetic coma (acidosis) or with insulin shocks. The treatment is very simple in either case, but, as the two conditions are exactly opposite in character, the treatment for each case is different.

What is diabetic coma and what is insulin shock? How can one tell the difference if a known diabetic is found unconscious?

Diabetic coma is a condition brought on by overeating—that is, the patient himself may eat too much food—or the body, due to an overactive thyroid gland or infection which eats or burns up the food too rapidly. Treatment is therefore by insulin injection.

Insulin shock or reaction is due to too much insulin, to taking too little food after insulin has been taken, or taking too much exercise and using up the food eaten too soon. The treatment is to give some starch or sugar at once.

HEALTH BRIEFS

To prevent psittacosis, parrot fever, government authorities in 1932 adopted U. S. Interstate Quarantine Regulations. These regulations recommended that every interstate shipment of parrots, love birds, and parrakeets be accompanied by a certificate from the proper health authorities. This certificate stated that: "The bird or birds in the shipment have come from distributing establishments free from infection."

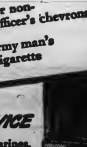
SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

In Calcutta wealthy natives with cars invariably paint their tires red because of the superstition that this will obviate motor trouble.

The rubber tapper, or seringuero, in Brazil lives partly off the forest he ranges in search of wild rubber. A shotgun and machete are his traditional equipment.

Superstitious negroes of Georgia believe that the best cure for rheumatism is to sleep with an old tire around the waist.

When dual tires are mis-mated, the larger tire carries most of the load, wears off its tread abnormally and fails early due to the generation of excess heat in its cord carcass.



It is estimated that the average tire loses 12 per cent of its weight in use and yields about ⅞ of its original weight in reclaimed rubber.

Sportlight by Grantland Rice

THE recent death of Jack Doyle, Broadway's famous betting commissioner, cleared up one of the mysteries connected with one of the most famous ring battles ever fought.

This was the first meeting between Jim Jeffries and Jim Corbett, won by Jeffries with a knockout in the 23rd round.

Grantland Rice

In most of the remembered versions of that fight, where Corbett put on the most sensational comeback of all time, the average opinion is that Corbett had the fight packed away by a wide margin until Big Jeff landed the killing punch.

Many who saw the fight had given Corbett 20 of the first 22 rounds.

Doyle's Story

But Jack Doyle had another story to tell. "George Siler refereed this fight," Jack said once, "and for a long time I tried to get him to tell me what his decision would have been if the fight had been only a 20-round contest. For a long time Siler wouldn't say. Then one night he told me confidentially, asking me not to repeat his words, that at the end of 20 rounds he would have given the fight to Jeffries.

"'I'll tell you why,' Siler said. 'Jeffries was the champion. Jeffries was the aggressor. And Jeffries landed the only damaging punches. It was true enough that Corbett landed many more blows. But none of these bothered Jeffries in the slightest. Jeffries only landed a few times solidly, hnt when he did I could see that he had hurt Corbett considerably. In fact, once or twice he had Corbett in serious trouble. For that reason at the end of 20 rounds I would have left the title with Jeffries, the defender.'"

Corbett's Angle

Before his death, I talked to Corbett about this Jeffries fight on many occasions.

Corbett felt dead sure that he had lost the championship by being overconfident in the 23rd round.

"I had nailed Jeffries at least 10 times to one," he said. "I don't think anyone could hurt Jeffries when he was in shape, as he was then. You remember, Fits broke both hands on his jaw in their second fight. But I was nailing him all through the fight. I was far in front when he finally caught me coming off the ropes."

I asked Corbett if Jeff had hurt him. "Twice," Corbett said. "Both body punches, and each time I thought he had torn me in two. The Jeffries that fought Jack Johnson wasn't even a ghost of the old Jeffries. He was a fat, half-bald fellow, far out of shape. But the Jeffries I met the second time was the greatest fighter I ever saw. He was not only tough and rugged, game and strong, not only a killing puncher, but he had also become a high-class boxer, which few remember. He had to retire because there was no one else even close. In his prime I don't think that Jack Dempsey or any one else could have hurt him. He would have worn down and beaten them all."

Doyle's Favorite Story

Jack Doyle's favorite story concerns Jimmy Austin, at that time the Yankee third baseman.

Big Ed Walsh was pitching for the White Sox. "Austin was hitting around .200," Jack said. "He hadn't gotten a hit for three days. Walsh was at his peak. The big fellow was mowing them down with his fast ball and his spitter. On that day I happened to be sitting near a bunch of gamblers who found it hard to get down a bet. They were panning Austin as he came to bat. Sitting near those gamblers there was a drunk about half asleep. He suddenly lurched over and said he would like to bet $100 to $500 that Austin would get a triple. This was too good to be true, especially after he had shown his roll. Five of the sure-thing boys took him, $500 to $2,500, and I held the stakes. On the first pitch Austin hit one against the top of the fence for three bases.

"The funny part is, that was the last bet they could get ont of the drunk. He crammed his winning $2,500 into his pocket and went back to sieep. His last remark was: 'I only make one bet a game and then I wait for a sure thing that can't miss.'

"I'd say the odds against that bet were 1,000 to 1."

No Wild Odds

Doyla's prices were closer than many others. You'd never find him laying 7 to 1 that Georgia would beat Auburn, Boston College would beat Holy Cross, or that the Chicago Bears would beat the Redskins.

Jack, who came up in football from the days of Frank Hinkey and The Bloody Corner, had seen too many upsets, especially in traditional games.

The 1942 season was more than ample evidence of the truth of his beliefs.

Farm Topics

Income Stabilized By Crop Insurance

Greater Expenditures Involved During War

Planting war crops means added expenditures and business risks. Farmers must buy new equipment and use more fertilizers and other materials. All are scarce.

When cotton or wheat crops are insured up to 50 or 75 per cent of average yields, farmers are in a better position to plan production of all the commodities they produce. With some return on wheat or cotton crops certain, farmers can afford to make more acres available for war production.

Thus crop insurance stabilizes income, helps the grower to meet his obligations, and helps provide for financing crops essential to winning the war.

Many wheat and cotton growers planted vital war crops on part of their land for the first time last year—and did it with an assured income from their regular money crops.

Through the Federal Crop Insurance corporation, they were insured against failure of their cotton or wheat crops from such hazards as insects, drouth, flood, fire, hail, plant disease, winter-kill and wind.

For the first time, the cotton crop was insured in 1942. Here, bales are stored in a field near a cotton compress company at Memphis, Tenn.

Participation in the wheat insurance program has increased each year for the past three years. In 1941, 421,133 contracts were written with wheat growers.

The cotton crop is being insured again this year. Because the nation has had cotton surpluses in the past, it is not generally recognized that crop losses cost growers an average of 460 million dollars annually. Insurance of the 1942 cotton crop on the same basis as the wheat crop will mean much to the 13 million who depend directly on cotton.

Insured growers pay premiums based on their crop loss experience. A commodity note embodied in the three-year contract guarantees the premium will be paid. Payments may be made in either cash or the commodity. If an annual installment is not paid, the equivalent may be deducted from the indemnity if there is one or from any payment dne the farmer for participation in the national farm program or proceeds of any loan he obtains under loan programs administered by the secretary of agriculture.

Indemnities for crop losses are paid with a certificate of indemnity. This is convertible into cash or the actual commodity, if it is available, or used to obtain a commodity loan if loans are available.

As is the case with other phases of the farm program, the crop insurance program is administered by the state and county AAA committeemen. These committees write applications, adjust losses, collect premiums, measure acreages and handle establishment of yields and rates for individual farms.

1942 Milk Production

Keeping farm pastures at a high productive rate to meet tha wartime demands of Uncle Sam's 26 million milk cow army requires a soil conservation program that builds up fertility and provides plant foods that will assure a good stand of legumes and grasses, an agricultural bulletin points out. In such a program, the use of fertilizer containing necessary phosphorus and potash plays an important part. "In 1942 alone," the bulletin says, "milk production totaled 123 billion pounds for our fighting forces, our allies and civilian population."

Best Milk Bucket

Where hand-milking is done, a hooded or small top milk bucket is preferred. This type of bucket will exclude about 50 per cent of the number of bacteria which usually get into the milk during the milking process. The strainer should be seamless and constructed to use standard filter discs. Milk cans and all other utensils used in handling milk should be of standard construction and free from open seams, say health authorities.

OLD MAN COYOTE IS DISAPPOINTED

OLD MAN COYOTE lay stretched out in his favorito napping place on the Green Meadows. He was thinking of what he had found out up there in the Green Forest that morning—that Paddy the Beaver was living there. Old Man Coyote's thoughts were very pleasant to himself, though really they were very dreadful thoughts. You see he was thinking how easy it was going to be to catch Paddy the Beaver, and what a splendid meal he would make. He licked his chops at the thought.

"He doesn't know I know he's here," thought Old Man Coyote. "In fact I don't believe he even knows that I am anywhere around. Of course he won't be watching for me. He cuts his trees at night, so all I will have to do is to hide right close to where he is at work and he'll walk right into my mouth. Sammy Jay knows I was up there this morning, but Sammy sleeps at night, so he will not give the alarm.

Old Man Coyote waited and waited.

My, my, how good that Beaver will taste!" He licked his chops once more, then yawned and closed his eyes for a nap.

Old Man Coyote waited until Jolly, round, red Mr. Sun had gone to bed behind the Purple Hills, and the black shadows had crept out across the Green Meadows. Then, keeping in the blackest of them, and very much like a shadow himself, he slipped into the Green Forest. It was dark in there and he made straight for Paddy's new pond, trotting along swiftly without making a sound. When he was near the aspen trees which he knew Paddy was planning to cut he crept forward very slowly and carefully. Everything was still as still could be.

"Good!" thought Old Man Coyote. "I am here first and now all I need do is hide and wait for Paddy to come ashore."

So he stretched himself flat behind some brush close beside the little path Paddy had made up from the edge of the water and waited. It was very still, so still that it seemed almost as if he could hear his heart beat. He could see the little stars twinkling in the sky and their own reflections twinkling back at them from the water of Paddy's pond. Old Man Coyote waited and waited. He is very patient when there is something to gain by it. With such a splendid dinner as Paddy the Beaver would make, he felt that he could well afford to be patient. So he waited and waited and everything was as still as if no living thing, but the trees were there. Even the trees seemed to be asleep.

At last after a long, long time he heard just the faintest splash. He pricked up his ears and peeped out on the pond with the hungriest look in his cruel yellow eyes. There was a little line of silver coming straight toward him. He knew that it was made by Paddy the Beaver swimming. Nearer and nearer it drew. Old Man Coyote chuckled way down deep inside without making a sound. He could see Paddy's head now, and Paddy was coming straight in as if he hadn't a fear in the world. Nearer and nearer he came.

Almost to the edge of the pond swam Paddy. Then he stopped. In a few minutes he began to swim again, but this time it was back in the direction of his house, and he seemed to be carrying something. It was one of those little food logs he had cut that day and he was taking it out to his storehouse. Then back he came for another. And so he kept on, never once coming ashore. Old Man Coyote waited until Paddy had carried the last log to his storehouse and then with a loud whack on the water with his broad tail had dived and disappeared in his house. Then Old Man Coyote arose and started elsewhere to look for his dinner, and in his heart was bitter disappointment.

Out on Count

To impress on his pupils the need of thinking before speaking, the master told them to count fifty before saying anything important, and one hundred if it was very important.

Next day he was speaking, standing with his back to the fire, when he noticed several lips moving rapidly.

Suddenly the whole class shouted: "Ninety-eight, ninety-nine, a hundred. Your coat's on fire, sir."

Honor Roll Board Erected Friday

Expressions of appreciation have been current over the nice appearance of the New Service Honor Roll Board which was made, painted, and erected by the Rouse Sign Service to honor boys and girls from the two Walton Voting Precincts.

The committee from the Walton Womens' Club, Mrs. John C. Bedinger, Mrs. Scott Chambers and Mrs. John L. Vest would like to have the names of all service men whose names have not been reported. To date there are six more names to be added to the list.

There is a deficit of about thirty dollars for this work.

Contributions have come in to Mann's Grocery, Conrad Hardware, and Lusby's Grocery and these places of business are ready to accept further contributions to take care of this deficit.

Let's show our boys that we appreciate their services by doing our bit towards taking care of this our way, of honoring them.

Busy Days Ahead for Homemakers.

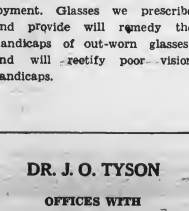
Busy days are ahead for Kentucky farm homemakers, with larger gardens and more chickens being requested by Uncle Sam. In addition, many women will be taking the places of men in the fields. With these things in mind, home economict at the College of Agriculture and Home Economics suggest that now is the time to get certain jobs out of the way. Men folks are less busy now and they can help with some of them.

Heading the list are repairs and improvements to lighten the homemaker's work. Windows that stick, doors that won't latch, floor boards or linoleum that need repairing, and drawers that refuse to pull out are annoyances that can easily be taken care of. A bigger and important job might be the building of convenient kitchen cabinets, or the rearrangement of kitchen equipment to save steps.

Other things to check off the list include the repairing of furniture, doing inside painting and putting garden tools in good condition. A larger garden space must be planned for and plans made to plant seeds at various times to avoid a peak load at canning time.

Two Soldier Sons Entertained With Sunday Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Massie of Mt. Zion entertained the family Sunday in honor of their two sons: Corp. Harry Massie of Fort Kansas who is home on a thirteen-day furlough and Pfc. Francis R. Massie of Camp Atterbury who is home for three days.



Corp. Harry Massie has been in the service since May 1942 and Pfc. Francis R. Massie has served since July 1942.

Those who enjoyed the day together were: Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Powers, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Benson, Williard Benson and daughter Barbara of Piner; Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Chapman, Frances Chapman, Mrs. Lucille Cook and two son, Tommy and Ronnie of Walton, Mr. and Mrs. Butler Alexander, Mrs. Otto Johnson and daughter Ruth Ann of Crittenden; Mrs. Worth Vest of Mt. Zion, Mrs. Emma Alexander of Verona, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Dawson and daughter Arlene of Erlanger, the honor guests Corp. Harry E. Massie and Pfc. Francis R. Massie and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Massie.

Happy Helpers Class Entertained.

The Happy Helpers Class of the Methodist Church School was delightfully entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Wallace for the January monthly business and social meeting. The new president, Miss Rebecca Sleet presided in an most efficient manner, opening the program with the reading of a bible lesson from the Psalms by Mrs. Lucille Hudson, prayer by Rev. C. G. Dearing, then Miss Sleet gave a reading on the timely topic of "New Year's Resolutions," followed by a short talk. After the business was taken care of letters were written to the two members of the class who are now in the service, Malcolm Simpson and Wm. Roberts, after which a social hour of games and stunts lead by Mrs. Pruett was enjoyed. Dainty refreshments of cookies, punch, candy and nuts were served by the hostess.

Members and guests present were: Rev. D. E. eBdinger, teacher of the class, Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Dearing, Mr. and Mrs. Sam J. Hudson, Mrs. Mary Stephenson and Joe, Mrs. Lillie Young, Mrs. Jessie Pruett, Mrs. Fay Conner, Miss Rebrecca Sleet, Miss Emma Jane Miller, Mrs. Myrtle Carlisle, and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace.

Maritime Service Offers New Course to Experienced Seamen.

The Cleveland Regional Headquarters of the United States Maritime Service, covering the states of Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky, announced today that a new class of the Officers School at Fort Trumbull, New London, Connecticut will commence February 1 and that others will follow at one-months intervals.

The four-month course of instructions is open to qualified seafaring men who have had fourteen months or more experience on the Great Lakes or on Salt water, to prepare them for licenses as Third Assistant Engineers or Third Mates of ocean-going merchant vessels. Candidates must have reached their 19th birthday. There is no maximum age limit for this course.

While training, Officer Candidates earn $126 per month, plus subsistence and quarters. In addition, a clothing bounty is furnished from which candidates purchase the uniform worn at the Officers School.

Commissions as Ensigns in the United States Maritime Service are awarded to those who complete the course and obtain their respective licenses.

Applications may be made and nformation obtained for the Officers School at the United States Maritime Service Office, Traction Building, Cincinnati, O.

Demonstrations were given on spot removal, washing and drying of sweaters, the sewing on of coat buttons and cleaning gloves and etc.

Members and guests present were: Elizabeth Boyer, Dortha Dance and baby, Ellena Hamilton, Geraldine Harris, Lena Harris, Pearl Lamb, Francis McCormack, Lerena Myers, Blanch Ransom, Grace Renaker, Ura Roberts, Gladys Stewart, Clara Vest, Mary Scott Moore, Relda Powers and Mrs. Walter Hon.

LOCAL WALTON BOY AT GREAT LAKES

Great Lakes, Ill.—Harry Wayne Hopperton, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Hopperton, Walton, Kentucky, is becoming accustomed to the life of a sailor as a recruit at the U. S. Naval Station here.

He is getting into fighting shape through participation in the Navy's rugged physical toughening program, learning the fundamentals of seamanship, and being indoctrinated with Naval customs and procedure. Each recruit also is given a series of aptitude tests designed as an aid in placing him in the type of work for which he is best qualified.

Upon completing "boot" training the new Bluejacket will be granted a nine-day leave at which time he probably will be home.

Willing Workers Class Entertained.

The Willing Workers Class of Walton Christian church met Tuesday evening, Jan. 19th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Crouse with Nell Campbell and Helen Ruth Gardiner as cohostesses.

Mrs. Irene Bush gave a very interesting scripture reading.

Those enjoying the bountiful dinner and meeting were: Chas. Ransler, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Hall, Irene Bush, Rev. and Mrs. Geo. Caroland, Vernon James, Mr. and Mrs. Cloyd Johnson, Wendell Rouse and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Watson, Mary Ransler, Elizabeth Gross, Lula Huey, Mary Alice Conrad, Mabel Groger, Mabel Maddox, Nell Campbell, Helen Ruth Gardiner and Barbara Crouse, host and hostesses.

February 7th Named 4-H Club Sunday

The Kentucky Rural Church Council has asked country churches to set aside Feb. 7 as 4-H club Sunday. In order that boys and girls on farms and in rural towns may be enlisted in producing food, or in giving war-time service, the Council requested rural ministers to plan their services Feb. 7 around the theme of rural youth, promoting membership in 4-H clubs and other youth organizations engaged in war production. Dr. T. W. Rainey, president of the council, said churches not holding services on Feb. 7 might use a date either before or after, to recognize 4-H club work.

Hunters Urged To Make Their 1942 Game Kill Report Immediately.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan.—Many sportsmen are mailing in their 1942 hunting licenses with their report of game killed during the year marked up on the back of the license, S. A. Wakefield, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, stated today.

This is the first time the Division has ever undertaken to make any sort of census of the game kill in Kentucky and many of the hunters are cooperating but there are many who still have not mailed in their licenses and they are urged to do so immediately.

Farm Planning For Wartime Production

Producing more food and fiber with less labor, will be the problem of Boone County farmers during the coming year, according to Liston Hempfling, Chairman of the board of supervisors of the Boone County Soil Conservation District.

To accomplish this goal, careful planning for land use and labor management will be required. Only the fields best suited to cultivation and capable of producing the greatest returns with the least labor, should be row-cropped. Land not suitable for cultivation should be left in grass or devoted to small grain. Fields that are row-cropped should be protected from erosion by leaving sod strips in the natural waterways, and by contour planting. In some cases diversion ditches or terraces may be needed to prevent soil washing and the loss of much needed fertilizers.

Information concerning the procurement of complete Soil maps, showing soil types and land capabilities, developed from aerial photographs, by soil specialists, and any assistance desired for setting up a better farm plan, may be secured by contacting Mr. H. R. Forkner, County Agent, the office of the Boone County Soil Conservation District, or any of the following supervisors, Messrs. C. Liston Hempfling, G. C. Ransom, W. H. Presser, H. E. White, and J. C. Bedinger.

Use Old Materials to Dress-up Homes.

How homemakers in Fulton county are using materials on hand to make their homes more attractive and comfortable at little cost was told by Home Agent, Catherine Thompson. Eighty-one pieces of furniture were re-upholstered, 116 chairs slip-covered, 130 floor coverings reconditioned and 348 articles made from feed or flour sacks. Six hundred and thirteen women refinished old floors, 132 refinished walls and 247 reconditioned window shades. Twenty-one rugs were also made. Seventy-three women dyed or tinted house-hold articles and 142 added new storage spaces in their homes.

Says Pure Water Makes Hogs Gain.

Pure and cool drinking water is one of the secrets in getting the extra poundage of pork needed by Uncle Sam in winning the war. So declares Hershel Fears of Christian county, Kentucky, who sold a litter of nine pigs weighing 2,440 pounds for $340.

He fed a balanced ration, including everything recommended by County Agent W. D. Talbert. Then he saw to it that the pigs always had a good supply of pure drinking water. Alfalfa pasture helped reduce the amount of grain needed by almost 100 pounds. Self-feeding reduced the amount of labor required.

County Agent Talbert says hog raising in Christian county jumped 35 percent last year, although the government asked for only 20 percent more pork.

Funeral Home Will Continue Business Under Same Name.

Wallace K. Grubbs and Mary C. Grubbs of the Chambers and Grubbs Funeral Home, Walton, announced this week, the business will be continued under the same trade name as in the past.

This firm was founded by C. Scott Chambers thirty-six years ago, during which time it has served a wide area, and has built up a splendid reputation for efficient and courteous service.

Mr. Chambers, founder of the organization passed away Tuesday of last week, and his loss will not only be mourned by his relatives but by the county as a whole. His memory will live on for many years to come.

The firm promises to serve the public in the same efficient and sympathetic manner that has been traditional of this concern since its organization.

Sportsmen Urged to Buy 1943 Hunting and Fishing Licenses Early.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan—All hunters and fishermen were urged today by S. A. Wakefield, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, not to delay in purchasing their 1943 hunting and fishing licenses.

In his statement for publication Wakefield pointed out that the Division of Game and Fish faces a "serious reduction" in revenues because of the war, and that the only funds available for futherance of the Division's restocking program come from hunters and fishermen. He explained that purchase of the 1943 license now with the resultant revenue, would be of great assistance to the Division in its conservation program for the present year.

Wakefield stated that December is the big revenue month for the Division and during that month of 1941 the Division received $55,185.60 from sale of licenses but this figure dropped for the month of December 1942 down to $36,529.07. This decline resulted from so many men going into the armed services; men and women taking defense jobs with less time for sport and recreation the rubber shortage and gasoline rationing. The decline will continue as the war progresses and the only way revenue can be maintained is through the purchase of licenses by the people left back home. Even though a person might not have any opportunity to hunt or fish, he or she can purchase a license and insure the continuance of the Conservation Program in Kentucky and know that the money spent for such a license will help to keep the out-of-doors intact for the men when they return from the pursuance of a victorious war. These men can then get out their guns and fishing tackle to seek out the sports they once enjoyed in the past.

W.S.C.S. of Methodist Church Entertained

The Local Division of the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Walton Methodist church was entertained in the home of the pastor, the Rev. C. G. Dearing and family, for the January meeting on Saturday, January 16th. There was a good number present for the noon luncheon. with several others arriving for the afternoon session. Mrs. W. O. Rouse, chairman of division presided over the meeting. The program was short due to the installation of officers of the W. S. C. S. which followed. Officers installed for the year of 1943 were president, Mrs. C. G. Dearing; Vice-Pres., Mrs. J. R. Conrad; Recording Sec., Mrs. Lotta Powers; Corresponding Sec., Mrs. Horace Simpson; Treasurer, Mrs. Wm. Lancaster; Sec. of Missionary Education and Study, Mrs. E. B. Wallace; Sec. Christian Social Relations and Local Church Activities, Mrs. W. O. Rouse; Sec. of Literature and Publications, Mrs. J. F. Jockey; Sec. of Children's Work, Mrs. Mary Stephenson; Sec. of Young Women and Girls, Mrs. G. C. Young; Sec. Student Work, Mrs. C. C. Pruett; Pres. of Circle No. 2, Mrs. Faye Connor; Sec. Circle No. 2, Mrs. Jessie Pruett; Treas of Circle No. 2, Mrs. Scott Lancaster; Sec.-Treas. of Local Division, Emma Jane Miller. These were supplemented by members of various standing committees appointed by the president. During the session of afternoon Misses Ella Mae and Ruth Dearing sang "Alone" as a duett, accompained at the piano by Miss Louise Dearing, which was enjoyed very much. Due to some not being able to attend meetings on Saturday it was voted to change the meeting day to the third Thursday of each month. The place of next meeting is open for invitations.

Members and guests present were: Mrs. Hattie Stephenson; Mrs. R. O. Hughes; Mrs. Reamy Simpson; Mrs. Jessie Pruett; Mrs. Faye Connor; Mrs. Mary Stephenson and Joe; Mrs. Wm. Lancaster; Mrs. Scott Lancaster and Bobbie; Mrs. W. O. Rouse; Mrs. Lula J. Hudson; Mrs. Ida Simpson; Mrs. Mayme Simpson; Mrs. E. B. Wallace; Mrs. C. O. Quail Prospects For 1943 Very Bright

Frankfort, Ky., Jan.—Kentucky has more quail left in the wild for seed stock this year than in any year in the last 12 or 15, S. A. Wakefield, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, stated today.

With hunting off about 75 per cent; with more birds to start the season than in any year in a long time; with a lot of poor hunting weather between November 24 and the close of the season; with the biggest beech mast in years and the best winter food supply, Kentucky's quail supply will be greater than ever this fall unless we have some natural setbacks.

Officials of the Division estimate that only about 25 per cent as many hunters were in the field this past season and that they hunted only the normal number of times, thus reducing the mandays in the hunting field by 75 per cent.

Prospects for food for the remainder of the winter are good, because of a lush weed crop and the fact that much wheat and grain was left in the fields by farmers who couldn't find manpower to harvest it.

With hunting off so much, the revenue for the Division of Game and Fish will be away below that of past years, and only the favorable natural conditions could have saved Kentucky's quail supply.

Wakefield stated that the Division will probably be able to release 10,000 birds this spring, as against 29,230 last spring.

CORN CEILINGS:
Spur Meat Production

Although Food Administrator Claude Wickard had been steadily urging farmers to increase meat, dairy, poultry and egg production to meet war demands, the price of corn had been rising to a point where farmers found it more profitable to sell than to use the grain to feed cattle, hogs and chickens.

Moving to stabilize corn prices the OPA under instructions from Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes imposed a ceiling at January 8th to 12th prices for 60 days, promising permanent ceilings later. Declaring that these ceiling prices were in excess of 100 per cent of parity when taking into consideration AAA benefit payments, officials said the ceilings would establish price relationships at which farmers would find it profitable to feed, thus preventing shortages of vitally needed foods.

As observers had expected, the government action produced repercussions. Livestock feeders were pleased, since grain prices were stabilized; corn growers, whose profit incentive for maintaining record production was reduced, expressed displeasure.

CHINESE FREEDOM:
Real but Deferred

China was too busy fighting Japs to take time off to celebrate the treaty by which Great Britain and the United States abolished extraterritorial rights. But this action meant that once the Japs were ousted, China would enjoy real and unqualified freedom for the first time in a century.

The agreements, subject to favorable U. S. senate action will do away with political, military, commercial and judicial preferences under which Britain and America hold jurisdiction over their own shipping in Chinese ports, their own special law courts in Shanghai, their international settlements and their right to maintain troops in China.

Months, and perhaps years remained to complete the readjustments, but the march for Chinese freedom had begun.

NAVAL LOSSES:
U. S. Lists Names

"Reasons of military security" no longer made secrecy necessary, so the navy announced the names of 11 warships previously reported as lost in three battles of the Solomons. The list included the 20,000-ton aircraft carrier Hornet and two of the nation's fastest and newest light cruisers, the Juneau and Atlanta and the heavy cruiser Northampton.

Likewise reported as sunk were seven destroyers, the Cushing, Preston, Benham, Walke, Monssen, Laffey and Barton.

Commanders of five of the ships were listed as missing, while the skippers of the other six, including Rear Adm. Charles P. Mason of the Hornet were reported safe. Greatest losses were in the epic sea battle off Guadalcanal in November when all seven destroyers and both light cruisers were sunk. In this battle, 28 Jap ships were destroyed.

BUDGET:
Asks 109 Billions

Plenty of headaches for Hitler and Hirohito were inherent in the epochal $109,000,000,000 total war budget for the 1943-44 fiscal year which congress was scanning studiously. Largest budget in world history, the total would devote $100,000,000,000 to war activities, the remainder to domestic government expense and interest on the national debt which by July, 1944, would reach $210,000,000,000.

Plenty of wrinkles furrowed the brows of fiscal experts as they contemplated the stupendous budget. The mere act of spending such sums meant bringing nearer the specter of inflation. With more money jingling in American pockets because of war-boosted income and fewer goods to buy because of necessary war rationing the nation faced a supreme economic test.

Antidote to the inflation threat was President Roosevelt's dual-purpose recommendation: Syphon off $16,000,000,000 in new taxes or forced savings from national income; add this to the present $35,000,000,000 tax bill and thus provide $51,000,000,000 which would pay about half the war costs and be a potent checkmate to inflation. And to enable wage earners to meet the steadily mounting bill, moves had been speeded to provide pay-as-you-go machinery for collecting the new levies.

RUSSIA:
Decision at Rostov?

Military strategists eyed Rostov, key communications city at the mouth of the Don river. Here, they felt, history would be written in weeks to come that would determine whether Hitler's Russian adventure would be a complete rout or merely disaster deferred.

Toward Rostov converged the retreating Nazi armies from the south, east and north. Toward Rostov, too, moved the advancing Russian armies whose successful winter offensives had badly upset Nazi tactical calculations. Here the struggle would reach decisive stages.

Continued gains of the Russians in the Caucasus south of Rostov—gains which carried them beyond the strategic rail city of Georgievsk in incredibly short periods—suggested to some observers that the German armies were retiring with virtually no resistance to the Rostov area. These observers pointed out that at Rostov the Nazis might make as bitterly stubborn a resistance as the Reds had at Stalingrad northwest on the Volga.

SUPREME COURT:
FDR Sets Record

George Washington had appointed the original six members of the Supreme court and filled seven vacancies during his two terms. Franklin D. Roosevelt set a record for the number named by one President since Washington's time when he selected Judge Wiley B. Rutledge as his eighth appointee to the tribunal.

As the court is now constituted, Owen J. Roberts, appointed by President Hoover, is the only justice on the court not named by Roosevelt.

NORTH AFRICA:
Mud Enemy No. 1

Mud and recurrent tropical rains had continued to make anything but air activity virtually impossible on the Tunisian North Africa front. While optimistic estimates predicted better weather by early February, other forecasts lengthened the rainy season until March.

But a four-way threat to the narrowing African coastal region still in Axis hands was steadily developing as Allied aircraft attacked German and Italian bases over a 600-mile area.

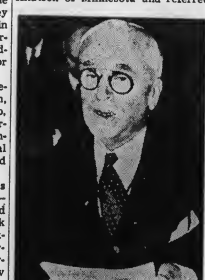
From Tunisia a French column was reported to have cut across into Tripolitania some 300 miles below Tripoli. Another French column from the Lake Chad area was moving north. On the east the British eighth army under Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery was pressing the remnants of Marshal Rommel's forces, while in Tunisia the American, British and French forces were preparing for the time when the weather would permit them to take the offensive against Bizerte and Tunis, remaining Axis strongholds on the African Mediterranean coast.

SO. WESTERN PACIFIC:
New Guinea Struggle

The Japs were determined to give up their remaining footholds in New Guinea only at the same stubborn cost at which they had yielded the Gona-Buna area. It had taken nearly four months to wipe out the Jap beachhead in this sector. Still in Nipponese hands were Sanananda, Lae, Salamaua and Madang. Closest in was Sanananda and here a three-pronged Allied drive had hemmed in the last survivors and cut off all bope of reinforcement.

The subjugation of remaining Lae, Salamaua and Madang presented another story. Their successful assault meant overcoming the same complex problems of supply that impeded and delayed the offensive against the Japanese at Buna and Gona. And until these New Guinea positions were wiped out, the United Nations would be unable to launch any offensive to extend Allied control on to New Britain.

Guadalcanal



In the Solomons, reinforced American troops were reported moving against only spasmodic Jap resistance. While the Americans had been able to land additional forces to augment their units on Guadalcanal, reports persisted that the Japs had been able also to strengthen their positions.

Observers believed that if U. S. army units in force had reinforced and relieved the marine garrisons on Guadalcanal, the next step would be a concentrated move to push American occupation further to the north in the Solomons with the ultimate goal of completely ejecting the Japs.

RECIPROCAL TRADE:
Hull Girds for Fight

Tennessee-bred Secretary of State Cordell Hull who never backs away from a fight prepared to wage a vigorous battle to preserve his reciprocal trade agreements from the onslaughts of opposing congressmen.

Although the presidential authority over reciprocal trade agreements does not expire until June, a bill to terminate them already had been introduced by Representative Harold Knutson of Minnesota and referred to the house ways and means committee.

CORDELL HULL

In addition to considering this proposal to terminate the agreements now in effect between this country and 25 others, the committee also will have to pass on legislation to extend the President's authority to make such agreements. Congressional observers believe the extension proposal will be bitterly fought by certain groups. Strongly championing the measures will be Secretary Hull, who was their original sponsor.

6,000,000 WOMEN:
In War Work

More than 30 per cent of the nation's war production workers will be women by the end of 1943 and a proportionately larger number will be employed in essential civilian trades and services, it was predicted by Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower commission.

Mr. McNutt estimated that 4,000,000 of the present 17,000,000 war workers are women and forecast 6,000,000 by the end of 1943.

THE GENERAL'S TWO WIVES

There was much more than meets the eye behind the departure of Gen. Hsiung Shih-fei, head of the Chinese military mission to Washington. It had its intriguing personal side, but also it went deep into the vitals of our most difficult war problem.

On the personal side, it happened that General Hsiung had two wives, which in China is a criterion of power and prestige. But it also happened that Madame Chiang Kai-shek, educated in the United States, does not approve of two wives.

When in China, Madame Chiang does not interfere with the military appointments of her husband. But in the United States, General Hsiung is reported to believe that the situation might have been otherwise, and that the U. S. A., big as it is, might have been too small for both of them.

FARM FIGHT

A group of presidents of land grant colleges, headed by President H. C. "Curley" Byrd of the University of Maryland, called on Secretary of Agriculture Wickard the other day. Behind that call was one of the most important fights which will come before the present congress.

Actually the land grant college presidents came to propose an agricultural program which they think will overcome the food shortages. But behind this is a plan to put control of the farm economy back into the hands of the farm bureau and the powerful farm lobbies. It is a fight which probably will keep up a running fire all during congress.

Background of the fight goes back to early in the Roosevelt administration when Henry Wallace, then secretary of agriculture, delivered a speech in which he criticized his own agriculture department for helping only the one-third upper-crust farmers. The great mass of the farmers, he said, the tenants, the little farmers, and farm labor, got no help from the government.

Wallace was referring to the fact that the American Farm Bureau federation, the Grange, the National Co-operative Milk Producers, and other organizations with powerful lobbies in Washington, had always influenced farm policies and dominated the agriculture department.

Working hand in glove with them have been the land grant colleges, the state commissioners of agriculture, the county agents, and the farm extension services.

These groups controlled agriculture locally, even when Washington was supplying a majority of the funds.

HITLER OR JAPAN?

Another factor, however, goes much deeper and is one reason behind reports that Gen. Joseph Stilwell may return as head of the U. S. military mission to China.

This factor is the Chinese argument that Japan is a greater enemy than Hitler, coupled with the fear that after we have defeated Hitler, we will make peace with Japan at the expense of China.

This fear is one which cannot be laughed off easily. In fact, it will take a lot of persuading to dispel Chinese worries. They know that a lot of the career gentlemen, powerful in the state department, have contended that Japan should have her place in the sun. They know that some of the state department clique tacitly favored Japanese occupation of Manchuria, while the British almost openly supported it.

The realistic Chinese, therefore, argue that after Hitler is defeated Japan is more than likely to propose a compromise (as she got Teddy Roosevelt to do to end the Russo-Japanese war) whereby Japan gets a slice of China and the world gets a rest from war.

The realistic Chinese also know that they could make peace with Japan tomorrow by giving her several treaty ports and a slice of the North. In fact, the Japs probably would like nothing better than a peace which would permit them to withdraw half a million men from China and use them against us in the Pacific.

Finally Chiang Kai-shek has his own troubles with his generals, many of them pliable to Jap wiles, especially "silver bullets," which the Japs claim is the easiest way to win wars.

So Chiang needs something to show to keep his generals in line—either more arms, which he is not getting; or a treaty from the United States pledging we will fight to the end until China is absolutely free.

Instead of such a pledge, Chiang has a military mission headed by a man whom the Chinese don't like—General Stilwell. Joe Stilwell comes from the old school which didn't particularly like the Chinese, and the Chinese make no bones about the fact that they don't like him.

He insists on doing all his business direct with the generalissimo, talking to him only.

As a result, Willkie was given a message to take back to Roosevelt to get General Stilwell out of the picture.

Budget Bureau Assumes New Importance to Nation

Director Harold D. Smith Responsible Only To President; Real Value Lies in Counsel Given to Nation's Lawmakers.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W., Washington, D. C.

A budget that bites.

That is what the United States government will have if Harold Dewey Smith, director of the bureau of the budget since April, 1939, when America started its astronomical spending, has his way.

He is not concerned with the size of Uncle Sam's bill alone—his job is to see that the dollars appropriated by the congress go to work, that no dollars are appropriated which aren't needed to do the job the congress wants done, that no two dollars are doing the same job.

I thought it would be interesting to take a look at the man who had just given his okeh to the biggest budget in American history while the ink on the report was still damp. So I wended my way up the curling staircase of the solemn old State Department building to his office (second-floor front) and was ushered into the presence of Mr. Smith, a bland-faced gentleman from Kansas with a middlewestern accent like the one which ecboes through my natal corn fields. The last conversations between Mr. Smith and the President were taking place just before the 1943 budget message was completed. Mr. Smith, who budgets his own time as well as the government's money, gave me some fiscal philosophy between pipe-puffs.

"A budget should be an administrative tool," he told me quietly, speaking with a happy combination of the poker-faced accountant and the old-shoe corner-store crony.

Budgeting for governments—municipal, state, nation—were the result of the efforts of the reformers, he explained. But, as usual, when the reformers had the laws passed they ran off and left them to administer themselves. The result was that budgeting dried up into bookkeeping routine.

"I have a new concept of budgeting," he said with a forthright modesty that characterizes his remarks about his work, "any clerk can add up figures." The real job of the budget bureau is to examine the programs of the administrative agencies for which the cash is to be spent, to weigh their significance in terms of economic service—not just publish a report every year as big as a dictionary that serves to confuse the public.

The year before Smith came into office the bureau of the budget had an appropriation of 167 thousand dollars—30 thousand of that went into the publication of the bound report. In other words, the agency which bottlenecks the spending of billions had 150 thousand to spend on itself.

Separate Entity

The bureau by law is a separate entity which is under no department. The director is responsible to the President. The bureau reports to congress.

"It is a staff agency," Smith pointed out, "detached, objective, critical."

Today in Washington there is no doubt that this detached and objective criticism has become a powerful element in the writing of laws of the land. Before a bill is passed it goes under the microscope of the budgeteers. Smith, it is generally admitted, has as much influence on the President, when it comes to the formation of policy which is frozen into law, as any man in Washington. He reviews every bill which is passed and advises whether the President should sign it or veto it.

But the real, constructive value of the bureau of the budget which has been given a dynamic force under Smith's direction, is the advice and counsel it can render in advance of the passage of legislation.

Proponents of a bill ask the budget bureau's advice before they present their testimony to the committees which pass life or death sentences on a measure. And it is Smith's idea to make this an increasingly positive function; to compile frequent important technical reports on proposed programs for the guidance of the committees.

The budget bureau has always consulted with the departments and agencies and the common practice of a department head is to ask for more than he expects in the hope he won't get much less than he wants. Smith's idea is to provide active cooperation by obtaining data on how current programs are functioning before renewing or increasing appropriations. Thus the budget becomes a tool of administration.

Confusion

He gave me an example of one problem he is working on now.

"Today there is confusion and conflict between many government departments and agencies. Examination of their methods is clearing this up. There is even conflict and confusion between agencies and their own field forces. This the budget bureau with a field force of its own can eliminate," Smith believes.

"When an agency doesn't like the way we examine the administration of its program and says, 'you are getting into operation,' I tell them, 'No, we are not. We don't want to operate but we do intend to be constructively critical.'"

Another constructive job that Smith feels is important is reconciliation between the government agency asking congress for money and congress trying to keep down costs on the one hand, or trying to bring new benefits to its constituencies, on the other.

"Congress has a tendency to shy away from bureaucracy, the bureau heads have a distrust of congress. Congress frequently gets facts mixed with policy. But facts are facts. Our job is to get the facts and to present them objectively."

Politics doesn't worry Smith. He served under three governors of Michigan, of highly different temperament, party and policies and he says that politics entered very little into the decisions made by any of them on the recommendations he made.

He said that the same thing applies to his experience with President Roosevelt.

"We may not have made all the recommendations we should," he said, "but 90 per cent of those we have made the President has accepted."

Since his college days, when he specialized in engineering, and later in civil administration, Smith has been engaged in some phase of the work he is doing now: regulating the "ways and means" of government.

TO YOUR Good Health

FIRST AID

Dr. Barton

One of the good things that comes from the war is the interest in first aid. Everywhere, even in small villages, first aid classes are being formed and the members of the class learn the correct manner of handling the injured.

So widespread is the interest in first aid that our humorists and cartoonists are using it in their strips or columns. I have spoken before of one class in which the young man being treated for a "supposed" broken leg was allowed to fall off the table and really did break his leg. In putting him into the ambulance he was not pushed far enough forward and the door being forcibly closed struck his head and caused concussion. The humorous comment was that with a few more lessons this class could be sent against the enemy.

A daily cartoon about youngsters shows the little heroine trying first aid methods on youngsters whom her boy friend had damaged in order to give her the necessary cases in which to practice.

As a matter of fact, the first lesson taught by the instructor to a first aid class is that they are not learning to be doctors but to do the right thing until the doctor arrives, thereby preventing complications and saving life. Many physicians, including myself, can testify to the skill and judgment of the members of these classes. I have taught first aid classes and have worked with members of the Red Cross and St. John's Ambulance corps.

My point in writing about first aid is to emphasize the importance of the first lesson given by the first aid instructors which is that what not to do is as important as what to do.

Dr. H. E. McDermott, editor of the Canadian Medical Journal, says: "There is great value in a widespread knowledge of first aid methods and there can be nothing but encouragement of the movement. At the same time experience shows that enthusiasm to learn and practice first aid must be kept within proper bounds. The first aider must realize his limits and never exceed them. That is the first and great commandment in his work."

"First aid is largely a combination of physiology and common sense."

Calmness of Mind Great Aid in Colitis

When the four letters "itis" are used, it means "inflammation of." Thus we have appendicitis, pleurisitis, sinusitis, mastoiditis, all meaning inflammation of these organs. Following this rule colitis means inflammation of the colon, and there are certain cases where the colon is inflamed and are rightly called colitis. The colon is the large intestine which holds the wastes.

However, what is often called colitis is a spasm of the colon, which is called spastic colitis, but there is no real inflammation of the colon present.

Functional not organic, conditions of the colon are outlined by Dr. J. H. Geddes, London, Ontario, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. These are colitis, spastic colitis, mucous colitis, spastic constipation, tonic hardening of the colon, irritable colon, and having the mind always on the colon—colon conscious.

Dr. Geddes believes that irritable colon and being always conscious of the colon really represent all the above conditions — disturbances in the nervous, muscular and gland control of the colon, or large intestine. As in all functional disturbances or diseases, the fault does not lie in the colon itself, but in the unstable nervous condition of the individual.

Other general types of colitis have a combination of symptoms, the commonest being gas and bloating, and sometimes loss of appetite. Intestinal parasites — worms — have symptoms resembling colitis.

Of course, in all cases where there is gas, bloating, bowel spasm, diarrhea and constipation, the use of the X-rays will greatly help in finding the cause, and it should be used. Naturally in times of strain and stress as at present, the number of cases of colitis greatly increases.

Successful treatment consists in trying to acquire calmness of mind even when the problem is very great, and also to use soft nonirritant foods.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Driven under 35 miles an hour, properly inflated and on a car with wheels in alignment, your tires of reclaimed rubber should return up to 10,000 or more miles of service. Care should be the watchword of the "war tire" user!

Rubber is considered one of the three most important strategic materials in war by officers in the Army's ordnance department.

Progress in reverse is the re-opening of a street car line in Brooklyn, N. Y., that had been converted to motor buses several years ago. A war measure that will save 1,200,000 bus miles a year—and of course a relative amount of rubber.

Caster, camber, toe-in and king-pin inclination are factors in wheel alignment tire users are going to hear about now that periodic tire inspections are mandatory. They mean much to tire conservation.

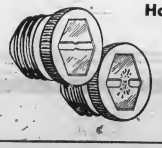
They Stop the Flow of Electricity When Something Is Wrong



The fuse is a safety valve for the electric system. If the correct size is used, a thin strip of soft metal under the glass will melt or "blow" whenever a short circuit or overload causes more electricity to flow through the wires than they can safely carry. The melted fuse link stops the flow of current before damage to the wiring in the walls can result.

It's Easy to Replace Fuses

If you do not know how to replace a "blown" fuse, call us and we'll have a serviceman show you next time he's in your vicinity.* It's almost as simple as replacing a light bulb and not only eliminates delay in restoring service, but also saves a trip for a service truck, thus conserving vital rubber.

Never Use Substitutes

Always keep a few spare fuses of correct size on hand, so you'll have them when needed. Never use pennies or other makeshift substitutes. They will not protect you and may cause a fire.

How to Locate a "Blown" Fuse

Notice thin metal strip under glass. If this strip or link has melted and shows a gap, or if glass is scorched and you cannot see link, fuse has blown and should be replaced with new fuse of correct size, usually 15 amperes for branch circuits. (Illustration shows type most commonly used. If your fuses are different, ask for specific instructions.)

The BOX-SCORE OF SELF REGULATION

Results in The Beer Industry's Crusade of Decency

THESE figures may amaze you. For never before has an entire industry fearlessly acted as judge and jury in keeping its own business clean. But wherever beer is being sold in unwholesome surroundings, without regard for the simple common-sense rules laid down—we act! Here are the results:

	1940 (6 mo.)	1941	1942	TOTAL
Places investigated	239	446	533	1218
Places found O. K.	148	303	326	779
Licenses Revoked or Suspended	13	26	76	115
Other Actions	78	115	161	324

The record speaks for itself. Decent law-abiding beer retailers are entitled to do business without illegal competition that brings discredit on them all.

This Committee, pledged to the Clean-Up or Close-Up Campaign, investigates constantly, reports those places that do not heed the warning to clean up. Alert state enforcement officials promptly revoke or suspend licenses on the evidence we submit.

Beer's reputation as a beverage of moderation is jealously guarded against those who would use it to cloak unsavory activities.

CARD OF THANKS FROM THE COLORED COMMUNITY
By Amelia Dixon

Words will not express the high esteem we have for Mr. Scott Chambers. He was as fine as the finest, I never knew a man could possess a heart as big as Mr. Scott Chambers, so full of love and sympathy. He rendered his best service to all. Creed or color did not matter to him. He saw his fellow man as a human being and treated all as such. That shows he had the masters training. I can not put into words the love we feel for Mr. Chambers. Our comunity will miss him as a loyal friend. He set a beautiful shining example the way he rendered service to us endeared him to us more than words can tell.

He lived the life the master wants us to live. He served the master serving humanity, some choose their life work but have nothing to go with it.

It seems as if Mr. Chambers could not have chosen any work that would have fitted him better, he had the right qualifications and a pleasing personality that blended with his profession.

There are other white friends that have been nice to us from time to time, we want you to know every deed has been appreciated. We thank you, may God bless you.

Sentiment of our Community.

"I never saw the likes of it!"

YES, Bill has been guarding that crossing for a good many years now . . . and never before has he seen the likes of the transportation job the Southern Railway is doing today.

You see, when America declared war, the men and women of the Southern knew that they would be up against the biggest, most important job they had ever tackled.

They know now that millions of fighting men are counting on them to keep enormous quantities of war goods rolling.

They know now that Uncle Sam is depending on them to move troops by the millions...swiftly, safely, at a moment's notice.

They know now that gas-and-tire-rationed civilians are looking to them to handle essential civilian travel and the transportation of civilian necessities.

It's a big, tough job...chock-full of headaches and heartaches. But the Southern's men and women are getting it done!

That's why full-packed trains are rumbling by Bill's post at the crossing in an endless procession . . . carrying freight and passengers in a volume that amazes even railroaders.

What's more, the trains that are heavy with war traffic today will keep on rolling after Victory is won. For then the Southern Railway will be serving a new and a greater South...a busy, prosperous Southland.

And Bill will still be saying, "I never saw the likes of it!"

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Ann Lee and Cole Cody, beneficiaries under two identical wills made by Early Bill Cole, arrived in the town of Bald Eagle by stage coach only to learn of Bill Cole's death a few days previously. Ann, accompanied by Aunt Jenifer, went out to the Ranch the following day and was greeted by Rance Waldron posing as Old Bill's nephew. Afterward, Rance made it evident they were not welcome at the Ranch. And while Ann Lee was making it just as plain she had no intention of leaving, Cal Roundtree, Old Early Bill's foreman, came upon the scene. Shortly they heard someone else arriving. Ann Lee gasped when she saw it was Cole Cody.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VIII

If Ann Lee had not been such a precipitate, hair-trigger sort of creature, a lovely little package of all sorts of unmanageable impulses, she must have marked in Cole Cody's startled expression that he was no whit less amazed to see her here than she was to see him. But she happened to be a girl who did her major thinking, when thinking seemed indicated, after the act instead of before. "Well!" said little Miss Ann Lee. "Of all things! If you think for one single minute, Mr. Cody, that either my aunt or myself has anything whatever to say to you, you are sadly mistaken. Come, Auntie, let's go in the house. It's nicer in there."

"Good morning, Mr. Cody," said Aunt Jenifer, smiling friendliwise. "Lovely morning, ain't it?"

"You're right!" he told her enthusiastically. "Take this morning just as it is, you couldn't beat it with a ten foot pole. The sun's shining, notice? And the sky is as blue as anything. That's the way it ought to be. The air, now, it's all shot full of sunshine, and you can smell the pines and the green grass, and you just get a whiff of wood smoke out of the chimneys, dropping down lazy-like because on a still morning like this, with no wind blowing—"

"Coming, Aunt Jenifer?" asked a cool, distant-seeming Ann Lee.

Whether Aunt Jenifer exactly tipped Mr. Cody a sly wink, or whether perhaps she merely squinted an eye against the sun, looking his way, is a question. Not much of a question, perhaps, yet there is room for argument.

She said meekly to her niece without in the least looking meek, "Coming, my pet," and followed along to the door which Ann was holding open.

"Just a minute there!" Cody called after them. "Me, too, I'm coming in!"

"I don't think you have any business bere, Mr. Cody," Ann said crisply. "You are not invited and you are not coming in. And I never want to see you again. Do you understand? Or must I say it again?"

"Can you get it through your head," said a very rude William Cole Cody, "that you and I, far apart as the poles in everything else, agree right up to the hilt on one thing? That we never want to see each other any more than we have to, and let's hope that today wipes the slate clean. Just the same I am coming in, and I am going to stay for a spell, and—"

"Like fun you are!" Ann cried angrily. And, stepping swiftly backward, she slammed the door in his face.

He set his hand to the latch just in time to hear her drop the oaken bar into place. He swore gently under his breath, scratched his head, jerked his hat forward and strode purposefully along the corridor edging the patio, hunting for another door. He found it just in time to have it slammed, good and hard. He hastened his step and heard light steps running. So he, too, ran.

The next door was already fastened. He wasted no time at all on it—those doors at the Hacienda Estrada, made long and long ago of good, honest oak two inches thick, asked for a battering ram when hospitality was not at home—but spun on his heel and dashed for the kitchen end of the house. Little Ann Lee, hearing him, ran, too, as swift and agile as anyone of the three little pigs who were not wishful for a call from the wolf, but the long-legged Cody was ahead of her by several safe yards.

He burst into the kitchen and halted there, briefly triumphant, while he could hear the staccato tapping of her racing feet.

They looked at each other across the room. Cody shoved his hat back, set his hands on his hips, lifted his chin at her and gave her a look as good as a slap. She came to a dead halt.

"You get out!" she cried in an anger that made her beautiful for any man, not likewise angry, to gaze upon.

"Some other time," said Cody, very brittle with her.

Behind Ann Lee, Aunt Jenifer appeared. She wasn't laughing; she wasn't even exactly smiling. Yet a man some degrees less than blind could have told that she was having the time of her life.

Ann Lee, close to her wits' end, remembered the recent visit of the amiable Mr. Calhoun Roundtree, remembered in a flash the gift he had made her. There on the kitchen table, in the middle of the room, between here and the detestable Mr. Cody, was Cal's Colt .45. What more could any beleaguered girl ask?

She fairly leaped upon it. She snatched the weapon up and, her eyes very bright along its barrel, looked at Cole Cody disquietingly.

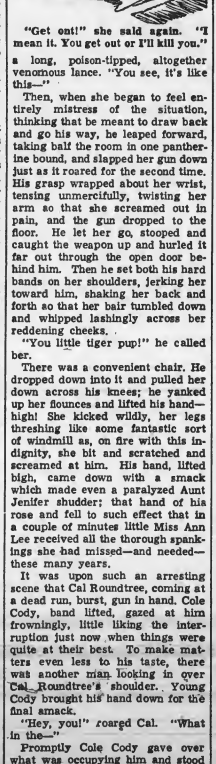
"Get out!" she said again. "I mean it. You get out or I'll kill you!"

"Better look out, Mister," said Aunt Jenifer's gentle voice. "Our little vixen can shoot like a sharpshooter—and she's just in the mood. Better do the way she says and come back some other time."

Cody began to laugh and took a forward step, meaning to force the gun down, to take it away from her, then to have a sensible word with the very obviously sensible Miss Jenifer Edwards.

Ann Lee, desperate now, shrilled another word or two of defiance:

"Stop! I tell you—"



In the quiet kitchen the explosion as the gun went off was as good as a cannon shot. Down at the corrals Cal Roundtree heard it, quite as he had said he would.

A queer, rigid look stamped itself on Cole Cody's face. He stood his ground a minute, staring incredulously. He opened his lips to speak, then closed them again without a word. After all, what was there to say? The matter required a modicum of thought.

"That's just to show you!" the girl told him, mocking him with voice and eyes and her whole attitude. "Next time I'll kill you!"

He thought that over, too.

"There won't be any next time," he managed at last. His eyes fascinated her; they seemed to catch all the light there was in the room, to focus it and draw it down to a fine point, to drive it back at her in a long, poison-tipped, altogether venomous lance. "You see, it's like this—"

"Get out!" she said again. "I mean it. You get out or I'll kill you."

Then, when she began to feel entirely mistress of the situation, thinking that he meant to draw back and go his way, he leaped forward, taking half the room in one pantherine bound, and slapped her gun down just as it roared for the second time. His grasp wrapped about her wrist, tensing unmercifully, twisting her arm so that she screamed out in pain, and the gun dropped to the floor. He let her go, stooped and caught the weapon up and hurled it far out through the open door behind him. Then he set both his hard hands on her shoulders, jerking her toward him, shaking her back and forth so that her hair tumbled down and whipped lashingly across her reddening cheeks.

"You little tiger pup!" he called her.

There was a convenient chair. He dropped down into it and pulled her down across his knees; he yanked up her flounces and lifted his hand—high! She kicked wildly, her legs threshing like some fantastic sort of windmill as, on fire with this indignity, she bit and scratched and screamed at him. His hand, lifted high, came down with a smack which made even a paralyzed Aunt Jenifer shudder; that hand of his rose and fell to such effect that in a couple of minutes little Miss Ann Lee received all the thorough spankings she had missed—and needed—these many years.

It was upon such an arresting scene that Cal Roundtree, coming at a dead run, burst, gun in hand. Cole Cody, hand lifted, gazed at him frowningly, little liking the interruption just now when things were quite at their best. To make matters even less to his taste, there was another man looking in over Cal Roundtree's shoulder. Young Cody brought his hand down for the final smack.

"Hey, you!" roared Cal. "What in the—"

Promptly Cole Cody gave over what was occupying him and stood up, letting Ann Lee slide off his knees and sprawl on the floor. He stepped toward the newcomers.

"Why, darn you!" Cal Roundtree stormed at him.

Again Cole Cody emulated a springing cat, and his fist came up in a long swing, taking Cal Roundtree neatly and forcefully upon the point of the chin, and such was the effect of the blow that Cal was lifted from his feet and flung backward, landing in the yard from which he had just come, flat on his back. And still a stormy Cole Cody stormed along, giving next his full attention, asking no questions, to Cal's companion, Rance Waldron. Rance, too, went for his gun, and small good it did him, for in his case as in Cal's Cody's hand seemed to be quicker than the eye. At any rate the same fist, looking now to Ann Lee like a rock bound to the end of a war club, accomplished for Rance Waldron what it had already done for Cal Roundtree, with but a slight variation: the bronze knuckles landed with a sound compounded of thudding and squishing effects upon Rance's nose, and blood spouted, and Rance tottered backward, tripped over Cal's earthbound body, and went down ignominiously.

But Cody's gun was in his hand, its blunt, ugly nose turned Cal's way.

"Better drop it, feller," said Cole Cody, sounding listless and not greatly concerned. He sat down as though making himself thoroughly at home. "Might blister your fingers."

"Look here, you," said Cal Roundtree, his hand hanging down, the muzzle of his gun brushing his boot top. "Seems as though—"

He stopped short, biting his words off clean. He saw that the man lounging in the kitchen chair had turned white under his heavy tan, and he saw something else. He saw a tiny red pool on the floor close to one of the chair legs, and noticed the spaced drops falling down into it.

Cal said, "I'm putting my gun away, stranger; all right?" and holstered it with Cody watching him narrowly.

Then he stepped up close to Cody and stood looking down at him.

"Hurt bad?" he asked.

"No," said Cody.

Cal stooped down and took his gun away from him.

Ann Lee, her eyes enormous, hot spots of red on her burning cheeks, was on her feet again and staring at the man who had just used her so, and she, too, at last saw the whiteness through his bronze, and the slowly dripping blood into the tiny glistening pool.

"I shot him and I am glad!" she exulted.

Aunt Jenifer came to Cal Roundtree's aide, bending over the man in the chair.

"Children shouldn't be allowed to play with shooting irons," said Aunt Jenifer mildly. "They're always getting hurt. If you boys, Mr. Roundtree, will get Mr. Bill Cole Cody to a bed, and if you'll bring me some boiled water and a clean sheet or pillow case, we'll try to mend him up. I don't think—"

"Mr. Who?" demanded Cal Roundtree. "Who'd you say he is?"

"He calls himself Cody, William Cole Cody, and—"

Roundtree ran his fingers through his hair, then along the rim of an aching jaw. He frowned down at young Cody. "You Cole Cody?" he demanded.

Cole Cody, a trifle dizzy and sickish, demanded,

"Might I ask if it's any business of yours? I'm not asking your pedigree, am I? Suppose you leave me alone."

"You're a nice kid, like a hornet," Cal snorted. "But I got to know. Unless you're ashamed of yourself, and I reckon you ought to be on general principles, you tell me whether you're William Cole Cody or not!"

Cody regarded him speculatively. Not a bad sort, it struck him, this nosy individual. Further, he was in no mood for a lot of empty jabber. Nor had he any reason to deny himself. So he said curtly,

"Me, I'm Cole Cody. William Cole Cody. Just Cody for short. Now what? Want to do anything about it?"

Cal Roundtree stood rubbing his bruised jaw.

"Yes, I do," he said, having duly meditated. "Two things. I want to get your shirt off, see how bad you're hurt and mend you up again. That's one thing. The other is, I want to make you welcome to the King Cole Ranch. Old Early Bill told me to watch out for you, to treat you like home folks. That's two things. Maybe later on we can make it three: when you're all well again, I'd like powerful well to take you out behind the barn and beat you clean to death!"

He stuck his hand out.

"Shake, Cody," he said. "Old Early Bill says so. You're welcome; like the old Spanish used to say, the place is yours."

Cody looked up at him and a slow smile twitched at his lips and warmed his eyes, and his hand went out to find and clasp Cal Roundtree's. And Ann Lee stared at them with all her might. As, indeed, did Rance Waldron.

So Cal got young Cody as far along as a chair in the living room—the same old chair in which Early Bill had sat just before he lunged up, to die standing up!—and yanked up his shirt tail and sought his wound.

JESUS THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

LESSON TEXT—John 5:2-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Wilt thou be made whole?—John 5:6.

Hope of the hopeless, help of the helpless—who would that be, but Jesus? Coming to Jerusalem for the feast He did not seek out the homes of the mighty, the places of learning and culture, but betook Himself to the Pool of Bethesda, where there "lay a multitude of them that were sick, blind, halt, withered." Why did He go to such a place? Because He always had compassion upon those in need.

In this multitude He saw at once the neediest man of all—one without friends or loved ones to care for him, despondent and disheartened. What happened that day may well encourage the heart of every sad, lonely, and discouraged one.

We see three things here.

I. Hopeless Infirmity (vv. 1-7).

How weak and helpless is humanity. Oh, yes, we seem to be strong, capable, fearless, but only until we meet some great elemental problem. Then we see that we are indeed a great multitude of impotent folk. The gently falling snow stopped the undefeated Napoleon. The silent fog can paralyze a nation. Sickness, death—who can stay their hand? We need the steady and powerful grip of God upon our lives if we are to go through such experiences. Not only was this man ill and weak, but his long years of suffering had made him so accustomed to weakness that he had reached a state of despair.

Such an attitude invites defeat. It may be the only recourse of the man of the world, but with Jesus standing by to help, there is good reason for assurance of faith in the darkest hour.

In the face of his need—yes, even in the light of Jesus' provision for that need—the leaders of the Jews could only criticize.

II. Heartless Religion (vv. 10-13, 15-16).

Jesus had done for the man what the Jews had not been able to do; in fact, one wonders whether they had so much as lifted a finger to help this poor sufferer. But now that he was able to walk, they were greatly concerned about the violation of their Sabbath day restriction against any work.

Instead of shouting for joy that this man was able to carry not only himself but his bed, they became zealous about maintaining the letter of their law.

Are there not those in our day who would be greatly disturbed if the deathlike quiet and dignity of their church services were to be broken by the cry of a new born babe in Christ? Would a revival be welcomed in the great churches of America which have lost the savor of Christ and the power of the gospel? We think not.

The man who had been healed answered well (v. 11). He did not know who Jesus was, but he knew that if He had authority to heal, He also had the right to tell him to carry his bed. When we meet Jesus we will be healed of our infirmities and, like this man, be delivered from the fear of cold ecclesiasticism.

But let us turn to the heart of our lesson, which is the act of Jesus in giving him

III. Healing of Body and Soul (vv. 8, 9, 14).

The body of this man was miraculously healed. There was no partial improvement, no long drawn out convalescence and regaining of strength. In fact, he was told to do something which called for the full vigor of a healthy body, to show that he was healed.

Even so when we are healed from sin in the soul-dead existence, but to the full vigor of spiritual life. We are to arise and walk in the power and grace which Christ has brought into our lives.

Note that the miracle performed here was for the glory of God. The miracles of God are not mere marvels or wonders. They are not for the advancement of the cause of any man or for personal glory. They are the mighty signs of an omnipotent God wrought for the good of men, for their spiritual enlightenment, and as a testimony to the one true God.

So in this case Jesus found the man in the temple to admonish him to continue steadfast in the spiritual liberty which had come to him "lest a worse thing befall" him.

Evidently this man's infirmity had been caused by sin, and even though he had suffered those 38 long years the tendency toward sin was still alive in his heart. Sin dies hard. How often have we not seen those who have cried to God out of their affliction, promising all sorts of spiritual changes if God will deliver them. When He does, they go right back to their old ways. The one who does that may well be looking for the "worse thing" which will surely befall him.

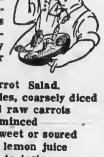
Flatter Your Winter Menus With a Crisp Salad Bowl

(See Recipes Below)

Flair for Salads

Tie a string around your finger and remember that salads belong in wintertime menus, too.

Their cool crispiness will be a tonic to your stove-hot meals, and their vitamin alphabet is one of the longest and most substantial that you can find in any food. Oranges and grapefruit are having a fling in their abundance, and crackly crisp, red, red apples are better now than during warmer months. Use leftover bits of vegetables or just plain greens — lettuce and watercress— and your table will take on a new charm.



A bit of cheese here and there will bring a longed-for sharpness in salads. Here's one that makes use of winter vegetables, and is as pretty as pretty can be:

Bermuda Salad Bowl.
(Serves 6 to 8)

1 small head cauliflower
1 small head lettuce
½ large peeled Bermuda onion
½ cup stuffed olives, sliced
Watercress, for garnish
2½ ounces Blue cheese, crumbled
French dressing

Separate uncooked cauliflower into flowerets. Break lettuce into pieces. Toss together with cauliflower, lettuce, onion rings, olives, and french dressing into which the blue cheese has been crumbled.

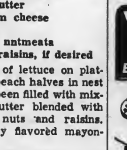
Look to the crisp and juicy apples for real menu inspiration. Apples which provide plenty of vitamin A—to help you resist winter colds and infections—along with sunny carrots make for a nice salad:

Apple-Carrot Salad.

3 large, red apples, coarsely diced
2 cups shredded raw carrots
1 small onion, minced
½ cup cream, sweet or soured
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
Salt and pepper to taste

Dice apples without peeling and combine with grated carrot and onion. Add cream blended with lemon juice, salt and pepper. Serve in crisp lettuce cups.

A salad that can make you the hit of the party is this grapefruit ring if you fill the center with a waldorf salad made of apples as crisp as the frosty night:



Grapefruit Salad Ring.
(Serves 6 to 8)
2½ tablespoons gelatin

½ cup cold water
1 cup water
1½ cups sugar
½ cup orange juice
¼ cup lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt

Soften gelatin in cold water. Boil water (1 cup with 1½ cups sugar for 3 minutes). Pour over softened gelatin, stir well and cool. Add fruit juices and pour into ring mold. Let cool until firm. Unmold, serve on lettuce with center filled with Waldorf salad:

Waldorf Salad.
2½ cups diced, unpeeled red apples
1 cup chopped celery
½ cup broken nutmeats
¼ cup salad dressing

Combine all ingredients together and fill ring mold or if served separately, fill lettuce cups. If apples are peeled in advance, squeeze juice of one-half lemon to prevent their turning dark.

A salad for every purpose. Here's one for a lovely winter luncheon or bridge refreshments:

Peach Cup Salad.
(Serves 6)

12 halves canned peaches
¼ cup apple butter
3 ounces cream cheese
½ cup celery
¼ cup chopped nutmeats
¼ cup seeded raisins, if desired

Arrange nests of lettuce on platter. Place two peach halves in nest after they have been filled with mixture of apple butter blended with cheese, celery, nuts and raisins. Serve with honey flavored mayonnaise.

Since it's the muffin season, this is a good place to include a muffin—they go so well with salads:

Corn Sticks or Muffins.
(Makes 12 medium)

¾ cup yellow corn meal
1 cup sifted flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
4 tablespoons sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons shortening, melted

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Combine well-beaten egg and milk and add to dry ingredients. Stir in shortening. Bake in greased muffin tins or in iron corn-stick pans (which have been heated before being greased) in a moderately hot (425-degree) oven 20 to 25 minutes.

Ruby red cranberry sauce goes into this delightful bavarian cream dessert that's made with corn syrup if you're short on sugar:

Cranberry Bavarian Cream
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 tablespoons gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1 1-pound can jellied cranberry sauce
¼ cup sugar, or ½ cup light corn syrup
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
2 egg whites
1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Soften gelatin in cold water and dissolve over hot water. Crush cranberry sauce and combine with sugar (or corn syrup) and lemon juice. Add gelatin and stir well. Whip egg whites and salt and fold into cranberry mixture. Fold in whipped cream. Turn into large or individual molds which have been rinsed in cold water. Chill until firm, unmold and serve.

Lynn Says:

Your Diet I.Q.: If you're deficient in some vital vitamins and minerals you may have certain physical indications of this lack. Check the following indications:

Frequent ear and sinus troubles, nose, throat and sinus infections? Perhaps you're missing vitamin A—found in meat, eggs, milk, green vegetables, yellow-colored fruits and vegetables.

Is the appetite poor and are you nervous and tired? You may be skipping over lightly vitamin B1—found in whole grain cereals, meats and fish, liver and kidneys.

Can't recover quickly from a cold, from that run-down feeling, or having bleeding gums and a sallow, muddy complexion? Better get more vitamin C—from oranges, grapefruit, green leaves, cabbage, tomatoes and berries.

Anemia? Feel tired and listless? You may need iron—molasses, liver, beans, peas, whole grain cereals, egg yolks and leafy green vegetables.

Poor teeth, brittle bones, excessive bleeding when accidents occur, or weakened heart and muscles? A deficiency of calcium may be responsible. Eat more eggs, cheese, milk and cream—and vegetables.

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

"DEAR Mrs. Spears: Recently I sent for your stamping pattern of Mexican figures and used them for two sets of tea towels and pot holders and a pair of curtains for my grand-daughter. Her husband made racks of them that also helped to give the kitchen a gay air.

A triangle shelf to fit in a corner near the sink was put up. It had an ordinary bathroom towel rod screwed to the bottom, and painted, cut-out scallops nailed to the front. For the pot holders, he scalloped both edges of a 4 by ½-inch board; painted it; screwed a brass cup hook in the center of every other scallop and then nailed it up over the stove. G. B. S."

CLOSE EYES TO SEE

Lady—Have you any invisible hair nets?
Clerk—Yes, ma'am.
Lady—Let me see one, please.

These Are the Days

Mr. Smith—Do you think they'll ever find a substitute for gasoline?
Mr. Jones—Well, I'm trying one out right now.
Mr. Smith—You are! What is it?
Mr. Jones—Shoe leather.

Quite a Difference

Hub—Quite a difference in the weather, eh?
Bub—Yeah, makes me feel like a two-year-old.
Hub—Do you mean a horse or an egg?

DOUBLE TALK

The chief of police of a small town was also an expert veterinary surgeon. One night the telephone bell rang. The chief constable's wife answered.

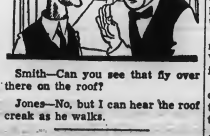
"Is that Mr. Jenkins?" asked an agitated voice.

"Do you want my husband in his capacity as veterinary or as police chief?"

"Both, madam," came the reply. "We can't get our new bulldog to open his mouth, and there's a burglar in it."

Smile, Son

Dad—Son, I never knew what it was to kiss a girl until I courted your mother. I wonder if you will be able to say the same to your children?



Son—I think so, dad, but not with such a straight face as yours.

Ain't It the Truth

Mr. Brown—What would you think of a man who was constantly deceiving his wife?

Mr. Blue—I'd think he was a wizard.

GO ONE BETTER

Smith—Can you see that fly over there on the roof?

Jones—No, but I can hear the roof creak as he walks.

Sounds the Same

Tommy — Are people in India dumb?

Teacher—Of course not. What makes you say that, Tommy?

Tommy—Well, it says in our book that the population is dense.

Who Me? Not Me!

Mrs. Brown—Where are you rushing to?

Mrs. Blue—I've got to hurry and buy a lot of things before the unpatriotic people start hoarding them.

College Football and 1943

What will happen to the colleges—and college football this year?

In the first place, this is a matter entirely up to the war department. In the second place, it is also a matter that interests many millions.

Here is a tip from inside sources in the war department—

"In 1943 we will take over 200 or maybe 300 colleges and universities. At least 300,000 of the 18 and 19-year-old boys will be assigned to this class. They will be drafted, but the pick of the draft will be given over to ROTC training. These men will be trained for officers, especially in the flying corps, where we are looking for at least 70,000 additional fliers. This is a different sort of war.

Grantland Rice

"The only colleges and universities that can get by are those picked for war training. After 1942, the war department will have full charge, not college presidents, who are in complete accord with the war department program."

The New Program

It is my belief that so far as 1943 is concerned, football should be given first place in any physical training.

Football isn't war—but it is the closest thing we have to war.

Football is the best training for war. As references I'll give you Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Capt. Mike Moran of the good ship Boise, who sank six Jap warships in 27 minutes.

Both are staunch believers in football values for war.

But what sort of college football program will we have for 1943?

Many in the war department want only an intramural program. In this respect they are 100 per cent wrong.

On both the physical training and the morale sides, football—or any other sport—needs outside competition.

Men in the service know this much better than head men in Washington.

These servicemen want to beat somebody else—not themselves.

There are too many in Washington who don't happen to understand this psychological angle—which is an important one.

There is no way they can get close enough to millions of servicemen, who know what they want.

The Needed Program

Granting the fact that football is a badly needed ingredient in our national training program—which no sane person denies—there should be outside competition at close traveling range.

There should be no faraway intersectional games. But there are any number of teams who are fairly close neighbors, where there is a homespun rivalry, where traveling distances are short.

The East can play against the East—the South against the South—the Midwest against the Midwest and the Southwest—the Far West only against the Far West.

Until the war is over, national championships are entirely out of order. Long trips are out of order. Intersectional games are out of order.

Very few people expect sports as usual. They know that far-reaching changes are inevitable.

But it so happens this country has teams in every section that can play among themselves on a high basis of skill, with a neighborhood rivalry that is far more interesting than any outside challenge.

For example—Harvard, Yale and Princeton—Georgia, Georgia Tech, Alabama and Auburn—Boston College and Holy Cross—Army and Navy—Southern Cal. and UCLA—Stanford and California—the Texas teams—on and on.

With the war department taking over so many colleges and universities, their major mistake would be to abolish football.

Their second major mistake would be to abolish all outside competition.

They should let these colleges carry on with what they have left. We are thinking now only in terms of physical condition, competitive training and morale.

These are factors that can't be ignored, even by those in charge at Washington who claim to have more important matters to think about.

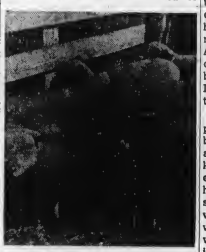
For practically this entire college enlistment will be in war service training, only waiting the call to active duty.

Magnificent Job

The services are doing a magnificent job in maintaining physical fitness—army, navy, marines and coast guard. They are giving millions the chance to box, swim, wrestle, run and jump.

This same program should be carried through for the remainder of the nation—for the kids coming up and for the older men who have yet to be called. We have concentrated too much on the outstanding few, who needed this training less than the others.

Farm Topics



Most Feed Crops Best Put in Silage

Keeping Essential Vitamin A Necessary

Almost any feed crop is worth twice as much an acre when made into silage as it is in the barn or stack.

This is especially true of corn and grain sorghum crops which will not make much grain. It applies equally to sweet sorghums, Johnson grass and sudan.

If corn and grain sorghums can be left standing until the grain is hard, they will make better silage, provided the majority of the leaves still are green. Nevertheless, these feeds should be made into silage even though the leaves are burned or dried up. But all vitamin A would be lost in the latter case.

Sheep are playing a double role in Uncle Sam's fight for freedom: Food for fighters, workers, allies; fleece lined clothing for soldiers in arctic climates.

Vitamin A is very essential, especially if silage is its only source, and the main origin of vitamin A for livestock is green feed.

It is even more necessary to have the sweet sorghums, such as redtop cane and seeded ribbon cane, ripe for making silage. Immature sweet sorghums make sour silage. Johnson and sudan grasses should be headed out and the seed in the dough stage.

Any of the grasses and legumes should be dried until their water content is reduced to 35 or 40 per cent before being put into the silo. This means about half dry enough to bale for hay.

When a majority of the leaves of corn, grain and sweet sorghums, and Johnson and sudan grasses are green, it is not necessary to add water if the feed is chopped in one-quarter-inch lengths or less with an ensilage cutter when put in the trench.

If the majority of the leaves are dry, it will be necessary to add enough water to wet the feed about like a heavy dew. Dampen bundle feed even though the majority of the leaves are green.

Agriculture in Industry

By FLORENCE C. WEED

Mints

An effort is being made to grow in the United States some commodities which are becoming scarce and will soon be unattainable. Manufacturers and dealers in medicines, spices, and condiments who depend on a steady supply of these botanicals from abroad, are urging that they be produced here in greater quantities.

Sage, the savory herb used in cooking, can be easily and profitably grown here. Our American sage is usually of a better quality than the imported article, and growers are being offered very attractive prices for their crop. It is used widely in the meat packing industry and is also a standard ground spice for the pantry shelf.

Sage is one of the 12 species of the mint family and can be started by cuttings or simply dividing the roots. From this family come many other crops which are commercially marketed. Spearmint is used for mint sauces and for flavoring chewing gum; peppermint yields oil and menthol used in confections, flavorings and medicines. Pennyroyal is used in medicine and the lemon-scented leaves of bergamot are much used in perfumes.

OLD MAN COYOTE TRIES ANOTHER PLAN

FOR three nights Old Man Coyote had stolen up through the Green Forest with the coming of the black shadows and had hidden among the aspen trees where Paddy the Beaver had cut his food, and for three nights Paddy had failed to come ashore. Each night he had seemed to have enough food logs in the water to keep him busy without cutting more. Old Man Coyote lay there and the hungry look in his eyes changed to one of doubt and then to suspicion. Could it be that Paddy the Beaver was smarter than he thought? It began to look very much as if Paddy knew perfectly well that he was hiding there each night.

"That means that he comes ashore in the daytime and cuts his trees," thought Old Man Coyote as, tired and with black anger in his heart, he trotted home the third night. "He couldn't have found out about me himself; he isn't smart enough. It must be that some one has told him. And nobody knows that I have been over there but Sammy Jay. It must be he who has been the tattle-tale. I think I'll visit Paddy by daylight tomorrow and then we'll see!"

Now the trouble with some smart people is that they are never able to believe that others may be as smart as they. Old Man Coyote didn't know that the first time he had visited Paddy's pond he had left behind him a footprint in a little patch of soft mud. If he had known it he wouldn't have believed that Paddy would be smart enough to guess what that footprint meant. But that is exactly what Paddy did do, as you and I know. So Old Man Coyote laid all the blame at the door of Sammy Jay, and that very morning when Sammy came flying over the Green Meadows Old Man Coyote accused him of being a tattle-tale.

Now Sammy had flown down to the Green Meadows to tell Old Man Coyote how Paddy was doing all his work on land in the daytime. You see Paddy had twice given Sammy a terrible fright, once by cutting another tree so that it almost fell on

"He couldn't have found out about me himself."

Sammy. So he had made up his mind to get even by telling Old Man Coyote about Paddy's work by day. But when Old Man Coyote began to call him a tattle-tale and accuse him of having warned Paddy and to threaten dreadful things, he straightway forgot all his anger at Paddy and turned it all on Old Man Coyote. He called him everything he could think of, and this was a great deal.

That afternoon Old Man Coyote tried his new plan. He slipped into the Green Forest, looking this way and that way to be sure that no one saw him. Then very, very softly he crept up through the Green Forest toward the pond of Paddy the Beaver. As he drew near he heard a crash and it made him smile. He knew what it meant. It meant that Paddy was at work cutting down trees. With his stomach almost on the ground he crept forward little by little, little by little, taking the greatest care not to rustle so much as a leaf. Presently he reached a place where he could see the aspen trees, and there sure enough was Paddy sitting up on his hind legs and hard at work cutting another tree.

Old Man Coyote lay down for a few minutes to watch. Then he wriggled a little nearer. Slowly and carefully he drew his legs under him and made ready for a rush. Paddy the Beaver was his at last! At just that very minute a harsh scream rang out right over his head: "Thief! thief! thief!"

It was Sammy Jay who had silently followed him all the way. Paddy the Beaver didn't stop to even look around. He knew what that scream meant and he scrambled down his little path to the water as he never had scrambled before. And as he dived with a great splash Old Man Coyote landed with a great jump on the very edge of the pond.

Give Away

"My husband never drinks, and spends all his evenings at home," said Mrs. Miggs to her neighbor. "Why, he even gave up his club to stay at home with me."

"Does he smoke?"

"Only in moderation. He likes a good cigar after he's had a good supper, but I don't suppose he smokes two cigars a month."

The problem of what to send a service man has been solved by the men themselves. Tobacco tops the list of gifts service men prefer from the folks back home, according to numerous surveys. If you have a friend or relative in the armed forces—Army, Navy, Marines, or Coast Guard—who smokes a pipe, or rolls-his-own, a pound of his favorite tobacco is very much in order. A big favorite with many service men is Prince Albert, the world's largest-selling smoking tobacco. Local dealers now are featuring Prince Albert in the pound can for the men in the service.—Adv.

To relieve distress of MONTHLY Female Weakness AND HELP BUILD UP RED BLOOD!

Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound TABLETS (with added iron) have helped thousands to relieve periodic pain, backache, headache with weak, nervous, cranky, blue feelings—due to functional monthly disturbances.

Taken regularly—Pinkham's Tablets help build up resistance against such annoying symptoms. Also, their iron makes them a fine hematic tonic to help build up red blood. Pinkham's Tablets are made especially for women. Follow label directions. Worth trying!

When Your Back Hurts - And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache; rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

NICHOLSON

"God is our refuge and strength." He alone sustains when shadows fall. "There is no death—they only truly live who pass into the life beyond and see this world is but a school preparative for larger ministry," multiplied thousands of ardent admirers throughout the Nation were overshadowed with deepest sorrow at the announcement of the recent "home going" of E. Howard Cadle, beloved pastor of Cadle Tabernacle, Indianapolis, Ind. Every effort known to medical science put forth to restoration proved futile and despite the gentle untiring ministrations whit which he was blest he sank into that dreamless slumber peacefully passing from earth's shadows, his spirit like the shadow of a passing cloud was wafted gently to realms byond, through the night of death has he entered the joys of eternal day and in some fairer cline has entered the higher life, a little shadow passed over his placid face like that of a soft cloud upon the serene waters of the lake with the calm repose of eternal rest upon his brow, how deep would be the grief over the grave did not the rainbow of Christian hope span the dark gulf between time and eternity." His record for doing good was widespread, and his characteristics of friendliness, loyalty and devotion remain a blessing like the lingering softness of twilight after the sun has set. Many hearts go out to dear Mrs. Cadle, the daughters, son, grandcaughters and other loved ones in deepest sympathy. His son is a pilot in the Air Forces formerly his able announcer, at his early morning broadcasts of The National Family Prayer Period and the noontime services on Sunday which still are broadcast at 7 A. TANKERS THE SUBS CAN'T SINK

MORE than 3½ million gallons of oil a day are rolling into the East in tank cars.

That's 70 times the amount the railroads usually have been called upon to transport—well over half the total needs, hauled in tankers the subs can't sink.

To handle this new assignment takes the full time of 1,100 locomotives, when there are a dozen other uses for every locomotive in the war program as a whole. But it's a job that has to be done, so the railroads are doing it, as a part of their bigger job of hauling 1¼ million tons of freight a mile every minute round the clock.

Behind this record oil movement is a story of the American brand of cooperation: by the companies that ship the oil—by the companies that own the tank cars—by the Federal Petroleum Coordinator—by the Office of Defense Transportation.

That's why this particular story of what the railroads are doing is a good example of what it takes to keep America working and fighting

Three Cheers for You
from Our Men in Uniform

And Many Thanks from GREYHOUND!

With Your Co-operation Greyhound Got 'Em Home for The Holidays!

Thanks to you, a most critical period in wartime bus transportation has been passed with flying colors.

Just before Christmas, Greyhound asked you to "Give your Holiday trips to men in the service"—and you who have learned to depend upon Greyhound for your travel needs, responded!

As a result of your postponing such trips, thousands of men and women in uniform were able to go home by bus to spend precious hours with loved ones.

While helping members of the armed forces, you also made travel smoother and more convenient for war workers and others whose trips could not wait. It's cooperation like this that makes it possible for Greyhound and other bus lines to carry on the tremendous mass-transportation job that is so completely essential to winning the war.

Now the holiday period is passed, Greyhound will make every effort to see that the service you count on is available when you need it—and with the utmost comfort and convenience that war conditions will permit.

We suggest, however, that you phone or call upon your nearest Greyhound agent well in advance of any trip. He can help you choose days and schedules that will be most convenient for you and best for wartime travel.

Victory Book Campaign Started

At a meeting in the Court House Thursday night, called by Miss Mary Bess Cropper, Librarian, representative of the Red Cross and the U. S. O. made plans to conduct the "Victory Book Campaign" in Boone County, as is being done throughout the Nation.

This Drive will last until March 6, and its purpose is (1) to collect books for our soldiers, sailors and marines as a supplement to the library services maintained by the Army and Navy, (2) To provide reading matter for the U. S. O. houses outside the camps, and for the American Merchant . Marine Library Association.

Due to the timely nature of magazines, none can be accepted in this Drive.

Last year Boone County responded well to this call for books, turning in 1173 volumes. Throughout the nation ten million books were given but only six million were found suitable to place in the libraries for the Service Men, so when selecting the books to give in this Drive, be guided by the slogan "Any Book you really want to keep is a good one to give."

In the line of fiction, the National Committee has found the following to be the most popular: Adventure, aviation stories, historical novels, humor, mystery, sports and western. In other fields books desired are such as those on applied psychology, current affairs, military publications, crime and the F. B. I., scientific books (Not older than 1935), well illustrated books of all types, sports, biography, history, and texts in present use in law and medical schools.

Begin now to look for the books you intend to give. Next week a list of the Chairmen in the various precincts will be published, and everyone will have the opportunity to "Be a Book Buddy."

George Heginbotham was called to Madisonville, Ky. on Saturday by the death of his grandmother Mrs. G. W. Cook.

Notice—Change of Meeting Place.

The Walton Literary Club will meet at the home of Mrs. Edna Hamilton on Verona road. Wednesday, February 3rd at 3 P. M. This meeting was to have been held with Mrs. W. W. Rouse.

Means of Increasing Production To Be Discussed by Boone County Farmers.

Farmers will discuss their own plans for increasing food and fiber production in a series of community farm planning meetings which began at Grant on Tuesday night of this week according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. These meetings will be held in each community in the county during the next two weeks.

The schedule of the meetings is as follows: Grant—Tuesday, Jan. 26th; Hamilton School—Friday, Jan. 29 at 8:00 P. M.; Verona Bank—Saturday, Jan. 30, at 2:30 P. M.; Burlington—Co. Agent's Office—Monday, Feb. 1 at 8:00 P. M.; Petersburg School—Tuesday, Feb. 2 at 8:00 P. M.; Constance School—Wednesday, Feb. 3 at 8:00 P. M.; Walton Bank—Thursday, Feb. 4 at 8:00 P. M.; Hebron, Florence and New Haven meetings will be announced next week.

All farmers interested in the agricultural planning program are invited to attend.

Bearcats Defeat Dixie Heights 31-30

The Walton-Verona Bearcats led by DeMoisey defeated Dixie Heights in a thriller on the local hardwood Tuesday night, the Bearcats were ahead 11 to 10 at the first quarter, 20 to 14 at the half and 28 to 18 the third quarter.

The Bearcats having suffered a defeat earlier in the season by the Dixie Heights team were out for revenge and to show the Dixie boys that they will again have a say in who will go to the State Tournment this year. Mayhugh playing his first game this year showed that he may be just what the Bearcats need to carry them through to another great season.

Bearcats scoring was divided as follows, DeMoisey 13, Mayhugh 5, Elliott 4, Berkshire 4, Piner 2, and Pennington 3. Cady with 12 and Wernz with 7 led the Dixie attack.

The Dixie Heights reserves defeated the Walton-Verona reserves 33 to 17 in the opener.

Coach Osborn's boys meet New Haven Friday night on the local floor, the Bearcats were defeated by New Haven earlier in the season and will be out to even things up.

IT TAKES BOTH!

U. S. Treasury Department

Cattle To Be T. B. Tested In Co.

The State and Federal Veterinary department have announced that Boone County cattle herds are eligible for a sample T. B. test this spring according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Boone is a Federal T. B. free accredited county. This means that the cattle of the county have been tested free from T. B. and on the sample tests taken every five years find that the cattle are 99¼ percent or higher free from T. B. If the percent of reactors runs above ½ of 1% the county losses it's accrediated standing.

It is the advantage of all dairy owners that they cooperate in this testing program and aid in keeping the herds of the county free from disease. Only five percent of all cattle will be tested in the sample test which will start in the near future. There is no charge for the testing service and owners receive indemnity on the appraised value of the reactors. Dairymen especially requesting their herds be tested will receive consideration according to A. S. Barnes of the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry.

Mrs. Fannie Brittenheim who has been ill is much improved at this writing.

MOORE—VARBLE

Miss Juinetta Varble of Sparta and John Moore of Ghent surprised their many friends by motoring over to Carrollton and having the nuptial knot tied. They were married in the parlors of the Baptist parsonage by Rev. Perry, local pastor who in a very impressive manner made them husband and wife. The bride is the attractive and talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Varble one of Spartas leading business men and is a senior in Gallatin Co.'s high school and a favorite among both old and young. The groom is the fourth son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Moore of Ghent and a young man of splendid character. They were attended by Mrs. Ray Moore of Warsaw and Mrs. Robt Moore of Ghent. They returned Monday to receive parental blessings and will go to housekeeping in Ghent where the groom has prepared a home. The entire community extends hearty congratulations for a long and happy life together.

Missionary and Ladies Aid Society Hold Joint Meeting.

The Missionary Society and the Ladies Aid Society of the Walton Christian Church, were gracefully entertained on Tuesday, Jan., 19 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Bedinger. After a lovely covered dish dinner and social hour, the meetings were called to order by the presidents. Mrs. Ada Moore and Mrs Marie Pennington. After a short business meeting of both groups.The meeting was turned over to the Program Leader. Miss Libby Ingram. Bro. Caroland and Irene Bush having the Devotional. Poultry School To Be Held February 16

The annual Boone County one day PoultrySchool will be held at Burlington on February 16 according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Hubert Conner and Fred Hed, members of the county poultry planning committee met at Burlington, Monday afternoon with Jim Humphrey poultry specialist to plan a recommended program for the year. This program will be presented at the poultry school.

Kentucky's 1943 war goal is 16% more eggs, 8% more chickens and 20% more tuckerys than last years goal. Kentucky farmers over produced their last years egg goal by 12%. Indications are the 1943 goals will also be exceeded.

The committee recommended information on feeding and housing of the farm flock be included in the national program on Home Food supply for 1943 on which neighborhood leaders will make visits in February.

Clothing Leaders Training School To Be Held Wednesday, Feb. 3rd

Miss Vivian Curnette, specialist from the University of Kentucky will conduct a training school for the local leaders of the Boone County Homemakers' clubs on Wednesday, February 3rd at the court house in Burlington. The class will begin at 10:30 E. W. T. and all clubs will be expected to be represented.

The subject of this lesson is "Setting in Sleeves" and it is the first clothing construction lesson presented to Boone County Homemakers. It is preliminary information for work to be done by the clubs in making last season's garments fit into the new season's styles. Since this information will be very useful in the next two months, any woman who is interested in saving clothes and money for her family will be welcomed to the local meetings of the organization during the month. Arrangements for the training school are being made by Mary Scott Moore. Home Demonstration Agent.

E. Ryle and Mrs. Margaret Wilson.

Tobacco Brings $1,234 An Acre.

Prentice Bass of Taylor county produced 4,840 pounds of Ky. 16 burley tobacco on two acres, bringing him $2,468.40. Every leaf was picked up. The land on which the tobacco was grorwn had been sowed to alfalfa and bluegrass five years ago. Last Spring it was given light application of manure, high grade fertilizer and chicken manure. Farm Agent C. Y. Bryan notes that tobacco growers who turned under a good green manure crop were well repair in both quality and quantity of tobacco.

Outlook For Farming To Be Good In 1943

The market outlook for all farm products produced in 1943 is good according to Roy E. Proctor, farm management specialist in addressing a group of Boone County farmers at the county agent's office in Burlington last Thursday. Farmers were urged not to be, "penny wise and dollar foolish," in 1943, maximum production means maximum profit and greatest aid for victory in our war effort.

Mr. Proctor pointed out that the farmer this year is confronted with the most difficult production problem in history along with an acute labor and power machinery shortage. The first problem is one's attitude, an attitude and a will to do the job regardless. A man with power machinery can do five times as much work as a man with one horse equipment. Those who own power equipment plan to do custom work for neighbors in rush periods and when the machinery is not otherwise in use. It is expected the neighbor will either pay for this service or exchange labor.

There are many other labor saving practices that may be carried out in the 1943 production including the self feeding of hogs, the balancing of crops and livestock production so that labor is more evenly distributed and to relieve presure of rush seasons.

The keeping of a complete farm account book was recommended as one of the best ways for a farmer to calculate his income tax returns.

Victorious Russian Drive Sweeps On As German Army Faces New Threats; Political Situation in North Africa Inflamed by Peyrouton Appointment

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

MALTA.—After beating off Axis attacks, a convoy laden with the necessary sinews of war drops anchor in harbor at Malta. The Axis does everything possible to halt the stream of supplies pouring into this vitally important British island base, but the convoys are getting through. This photograph was made from on board an accompanying British six-inch gun cruiser which helped escort the ships through the Mediterranean.

INSPIRATION:
For the Russians

There were reports of later Russian successes following the breaking of the siege of Leningrad but that story carried more drama for the Russian people themselves than the reports of all the rest. For Leningrad is Russia's second city and it had been almost a year and a half since there had been any land communication between it and the rest of the country.

As the Red army battled to widen the five-mile corridor through which the siege was first broken there were dispatches from all along the 1,200-mile front reporting new losses for the Nazis. At all points the German lines were sagging before the newly found power of the Russians. Inspired by the news from Leningrad, named for their revolutionary leader and considered the home of the revolution itself, Red soldiers received a real boost in morale which aided in maintaining a high degree of momentum in their offensives.

Immediate objectives that loomed closer now were the Latvian border, southwest of Velikie Luki, Rostov on the lower Don, complete annihilation of the armies before Stalingrad and added progress in the direction of Kharkov, the Pittsburgh of the Ukraine.

NORTH AFRICA:
DeGaullists Object

New flames were ignited under the bubbling cauldron of political dissatisfaction in North Africa when Marcel Peyrouton, veteran French politician and former Vichy minister of the interior, was named governor general of Algeria.

The appointment rekindled the popular alarm which was felt when Darlan first took office. The Fighting French at once jumped on the appointment, terming Peyrouton a former Fascist sympathizer. Headquarters of the DeGaulle forces recalled that in April, 1941, Peyrouton said that "Only madmen believe in a British victory." The London Daily Herald called it a "political blunder of the first water. Peyrouton is distrusted by Frenchmen of all parties . . ."

Added to this confusion was the fact that the Allies soon must decide on a supreme commander for the showdown with the Axis in North Africa. The decision probably will be hastened by the rapid telescoping of the Tunisian and Libyan fronts.

NEW LEADER:
For Democrats

While congress was huddling over Edward J. Flynn's qualifications to represent the United States and President Roosevelt in the South Pacific diplomatic front, Democratic party chieftains assembled in Chicago to select Postmaster General Frank C. Walker to be his successor as chairman of the Democratic national committee. In his acceptance speech Walker expressed a "distaste for oratory as a substitute for action" and further avowed that he was a "firm advocate of the two-party system."

NEW GUINEA:
Victory in Papua

Climaxing a series of attacking movements by American and Australian infantry units, Allied ground forces captured Sanananda Point and Sanananda Village on the northeastern coast of New Guinea.

The capture of Sanananda Point—between previously captured Gona and Buna—took the last remaining strong Japanese point in that area. The remaining Japs were left in pockets about a mile west of Sanananda, faced with nothing more than suicide action.

Aerial action saw Allied bombers sink an 8,000-ton Japanese cargo ship in the Bismarck sea and blast enemy airports and installations over a wide area of the Southwest Pacific.

Jap forces were cut into bits by Australian and American patrols reaching almost every corner of the swampy area. Japan's last remaining strength in Papua had been decimated. Enemy outposts were little more than handfuls of troops, waiting an almost certain end.

LIBYAN DRIVE:
Attack Tempo Increased

As aerial activity flared over a wide area of the Tripolitanian front the British eighth army continued its headlong assault against Field Marshal Rommel's fleeing but still intact forces.

An early British advance carried one of two attacking columns to within less than 50 miles of Tripoli—closer than Rommel came to Alexandria last summer.

Gen. B. L. Montgomery's most advanced column had driven Axis forces from Beni Ulid and was in contact with the enemy near Tarhuna, only 40 miles southeast of Tripoli. The second British column drove along the coastal road, reaching a spot 90 miles east of Tripoli.

Even as the British pushed on, many observers were of the opinion that Rommel had decided or had been ordered, to forget Tripoli and attempt to get into Tunisia to join Col. Gen. Juergen von Arnim in a stand against the Allied assault from both sides.

ARGENTINA:
Stands Alone

After Chile's senate had voted 30 to 10 to break off diplomatic ties with the Axis, Argentina remained the only American country retaining relations with Germany, Italy and Japan.

Chile's action came after weeks of wrangling over the issue and following the vote, Foreign Minister Joaquin Fernadez left immediately to notify President Juan Antonio Rios of the action. President Rios followed this with a radio broadcast to his people.

Chile's army and navy had earlier taken over control of strategic areas which had been colonized by the Germans. These were mostly in the southern part of the country and included ports, mining centers and other vital areas.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

ELIGIBLE: Washington officials revealed that boys who have reached the age of 17 are eligible to enlist in the army enlisted reserve corps and air corps enlisted reserve—providing they have the consent of their parents. Not until they are 18, however, will the 17-year-old enlistees be called to active duty. Until this new ruling boys were not accepted in the army until they were 18.

PROBE: Among other subjects being reviewed by the new congress is the matter of war contracts and the house rules committee has decided to call before it high army and navy officials to explain why some such contracts were authorized. Those in question are contracts, which, it is charged by the house naval and military affairs committee, permitted huge fees and profits.

FARM LABOR:
And the Draft

In an effort designed to keep more workers on the nation's farms the War Manpower commission has put into effect a broad liberalization of agricultural deferment requirements. Draft boards are now to be guided by a "new criteria" including liberalized application of the war unit production standard and the addition to the list of essential crops for which workers may be deferred.

Heretofore farmers have usually been required to be responsible for 16 "farm units." Now as few as eight "units" could result in holding off induction. (A unit, for example, is one dairy cow, or 20 acres of wheat, or 20 feed lot cattle, among other items deemed essential in the war food program.)

BIRTH-TO-GRAVE:
Social Security

President Roosevelt is scheduled to receive from the department of labor a greatly broadened—birth-to-grave—social security plan. This was revealed by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins at a New York Town Hall meeting. She said adoption of such a plan would provide larger benefits including greater old age pensions, payments for all employment interruptions and maternity and funeral benefits.

Premiums would increase progressively to an amount equal to 10 per cent of the worker's paycheck. During the first stages of the plan's operation these premiums would be paid jointly by the employer and employee, much like the present social security program. Then as the number of old age benefit recipients increased beyond the amount collected the government would step in to pay a share of the benefits.

POINT RATIONING:
System Explained

When Office of Price Administration officials began explaining the system of point rationing it became immediately evident that points will vie in importance with dollars and cents in the minds of the nation's housewives.

Here is how the system will work: The sale of processed foods in cans and bottles will be stopped in retail stores a week before the rationing begins—some time in February. This will allow grocers to fill their shelves. On registration day, housewives will take the family's No. 1 war ration books to their local boards and apply for book No. 2.

The consumer will have to declare the actual number of cans, bottles and jars of eight ounces or more of the rationed foods on hand. Home canned foods are exempt. Each person will be allowed to have a certain number—probably between 8 and 12—on hand without penalty. For more than that, stamps will be removed.

Each consumer will be allowed 48 points during each rationing period, which will probably be one month.

RATION DATES

Feb. 7—Period 4 fuel-oil coupons, good to March 26, become valid.

Feb. 8—Final date on which No. 28 coffee coupon is valid.

Feb. 20—Expiration date for Period 3 fuel-oil coupons which became valid Dec. 23.

Feb. 28—Final date for first inspection of tires for "B" or "C" passenger car card holders and for commercial vehicles.

March 13—Period 5 fuel-oil coupons, good to Sept. 30, become valid.

March 31—Final date for first inspection of passenger car tires for "A" card holders and motorcycles.

New War Poster

This dramatic poster depicting the enemy's ruthless intention, was entered in the national war poster competition conducted by the New Museum of Modern Art and was chosen as the best. Duane Breyers, artist, who drew the winning entry is currently awaiting induction into the army.

MORE ACTION:

Striking at Japanese shipping in the Pacific and Far East, U. S. submarines have sunk 112 enemy ships since Pearl Harbor. The latest communique issued on this subject by the navy department showed the sinking of one destroyer, one large cargo ship, one medium sized transport, one medium sized cargo ship and one small patrol vessel sunk to reach this 112 total. Twenty-two other ships are listed as probably sunk and 29 others are reported as "damaged."

REVISE WARSHIP PLANS

Due in part to the fact that the U. S. navy had not had opportunity to profit from the experience of engaging in any major naval battles between 1812 and 1942, some of our biggest and fastest ships now under construction are being revised.

The main factor being changed in the blueprints is extra precaution against fire.

This is the lesson learned from the aircraft carriers Wasp and Lexington, and the cruiser Boise, all swept by fire after the direct damage of battle.

Since then the bureau of ships has made a study of fire hazards, finding that even an all-steel vessel can be swept by fire when tremendous heat is engendered, as from exploding shells and burning oil and gasoline.

New plans call for elimination of linoleum flooring, substitution of spun glass for cork in insulation, decrease in paint, and elimination of interior woodwork. Also, there will be larger fire hose and better fire fighting equipment generally.

Navy hopes to put an end to the grief of losing ships by fire after they have survived the battle.

Note: In the War of 1812, fire was a real hazard to wooden ships. But in the Civil war the only real engagement was between the Monitor and Merrimac which were not much bigger than modern escort vessels. In the Spanish-American war, there were no real naval battles and only one life was lost at Santiago, when an American sailor fell down a hatch on the Texas. In the World war, the U. S. navy got in too late to participate in any naval activities other than convoy work.

FDR'S SURPRISE

One thing that didn't get out about the "surprise" party at the White House for Speaker Sam Rayburn, on Sam's 61st birthday, was a little frill added by the President.

Rayburn was called to the White House with other congressional leaders ostensibly to discuss the legislative program for the new session. But when the group arrived, all but Rayburn were ushered into the private office of Economic Stabilizer Jimmy Byrnes.

The speaker was told that the President wished to see him alone for a few minutes.

The two men discussed legislative problems for a few minutes. Meantime, the President was keeping a sharp eye on the clock. Suddenly he broke out:

"Sam, the reason I asked you to come in here alone was to discuss a personal matter that has been worrying me."

Rayburn eyed him curiously, said nothing.

"It's about you, Sam," continued the President without batting an eyelash. "We're old friends and I feel I can talk to you frankly. I've got reports from Capitol Hill that the Democrats are dissatisfied with your leadership. They think you're getting too old to be speaker."

At that precise moment, Democratic Congressmen Cliff Pudrum of Virginia, Bob Ramspeck of Georgia, Republican Leader Joe Martin of Massachusetts, Rep. Jim Wadsworth of New York and other house members burst into the President's office, led by Jimmy Byrnes.

Together they began singing "Happy Birthday to You" at the top of their voices.

"That was perfect timing, fellows," beamed the President. He had planned it all very carefully himself.

JOE MARTIN VS. SAM RAYBURN

Privately Republican Leader Joe Martin never had any intention of letting the Republicans organize congress and elect him as speaker. Until 1944, this responsibility is the last thing he wants.

However, the canny Republican leader took keen delight in keeping the opposition guessing and carried on his little joke until the very last.

When he marched into Speaker Rayburn's office with the committee that was to escort Rayburn to the floor, following his re-election, Martin was grinning from ear to ear.

"Sam," he said, "I've got some bad news for you. I hope you can hold up under the shock. You've been re-elected speaker."

Opinions Vary on Success Of Mexican Labor Plans

West, Southwest Farmers Reported Objecting to Minimum Wage Clause; Many Prefer Familiar 'Padrone' System.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

What has happened to the scheme for bringing Mexican labor into the United States to help fill the gap left by the drain which industry and the draft have made on the farm?

In trying to get an answer to that question I turned up some rather interesting data which I wish to submit as an answer to that slur on our fair city that you hear frequently these days: "Washington is a mad house." It may at least explain what makes the wild cat wild.

I first went to an official in one of the war agencies with my query about Mexican labor. He is a very energetic, sincere worker, an anti-New Dealer, who is here trying to do his share to win the war. I am not permitted to use his name. He said:

"Somebody in our government with a lot of high ideals went to the Mexican government and made an agreement to send Mexican laborers to the United States. They arranged to have a contract which would deal with each laborer as a free agent and put in all sorts of conditions which the farmer who had to hire him had to agree to, including housing, transportation, and a minimum per diem rate.

"But instead of sending over experienced farm laborers the Mexican government gathered together a lot of ne'er-do-wells and hoboes. It didn't work. In fact, the farmers got less help than usual. The trouble was that before the social-conscious officials took a hand the American farmers had been making contracts with padrones (bosses) who got the money and the workers, established the working conditions and paid the workers as they saw fit. They brought in trained workers and they made them work. But the starry-eyed members of the Mexican and American governments wouldn't hear of making use of the padrone system."

That sounded very bad to me, so I called up the offices of Senator Downey of California and Senator McFarland of Arizona, who are members of a special committee holding hearings in California and New Mexico on this question of imported farm labor.

Success Reported

Senator Downey was still in California but his office was enthusiastic. I was told about how successful the use of this imported Mexican labor had been under the government's plan, in the beet industry, how it worked in the great guayle rubber fields of which 500,000 acres have been planted as part of our home-grown rubber program. How the senator was arranging with the state department for the admission of more foreign labor.

Then I talked with Senator McFarland. He said he would go along with Senator Downey in some of the things but not all. He said the farmers' complaint in Arizona was that they got neither the quantity nor the quality of workers they wanted. Cotton and dairy workers are their chief needs. He said that some of the farmers wouldn't sign a contract which the American government required. All protested against it. The objection was to the clause which established a minimum daily wage. The farmers said that the worker came out to the field in the morning, picked until he wanted to quit and then weighed in. But in order to be sure he had worked his minimum hours it was necessary to have a timekeeper and a bookkeeper to check on his time and the whole process was too expensive.

Long-Staple Cotton

He said, on the whole, that the Arizona farmer didn't get as many workers as needed and didn't get as good ones as he had expected.

On the department of agriculture's program for the next year there is a quota of 160,000 acres of long-staple cotton. One hundred thousand acres are allotted to Arizona. Normally, we import most of our long-staple cotton from abroad.

Senator McFarland said that unless some solution of the farm labor problem was reached, unless the present contract was modified and the Arizona farmers were assured more and better hands at a lower cost, they wouldn't be able to invest their money in planting the long-staple cotton the government wants.

Neither Senator Downey's office nor Senator McFarland's had any comments on the padrone system.

Then I talked with a department of agriculture official. He was of the opinion that the contracts had worked out fairly well, and he pointed out that there was an "ideological" as well as a practical objection on the part of the farmers to the contract—the objection to establishing a minimum wage for farm labor.

Here are three quite different viewpoints. They represent a tiny fraction of the tangle which Washington has to untangle, has to reconcile.

If Washington is a madhouse, who made it mad?

MacArthur Lauded For Leadership

When the chapter of war history dealing with the Battle of New Guinea is written, it will be one of the most important in the whole book. That is what military men here tell me.

They began telling me that bit by bit just before the second front in Africa opened. Then the African story wiped everything else off the first pages. Recently they have been talking about New Guinea again. They keep saying to me a little reproachfully, "the American people don't realize what MacArthur has achieved down in that jungle country."

These aren't the "MacArthur men"—there are such in the army, a little group of hero worshipers who perhaps worship a bit more fervently than logically. But the men who have watched the New Guinea campaign from Moresby straight up over the Owen Stanley range and down the other side and up to the eastern coast of the island tell me that MacArthur and the leaders he has about him have done a great and a significant job.

It is great because he has accomplished what it was freely predicted the Japs could not do (and didn't). It is significant because it has proved that Australians and Americans, given the training, can beat the Jap at his own game. They can (and have) beaten him with less training, without the fatalistic quality of the Jap, whose religion is to die rather than surrender even when dying isn't a military necessity.

There are two reasons, which military men put forward why the battle of New Guinea has not been painted in its true colors—represented in its true importance. One is the fact that MacArthur leans backward in his communiques. Another is a peculiar copy-desk prejudice of American newspapers, which causes them to play down reports from the distance and play up the reports from the war department in Washington.

There are two reasons why MacArthur's reports are given out from his headquarters in Australia instead of by the war department in Washington. One is that the Australians (and perhaps MacArthur) want it that way, and another is because American newspapers, who pay a lot of money to keep correspondents in that area, don't like to have their men scooped by Washington.

Why He Is Winning

MacArthur may have another reason for not ballyhooing his achievements. He was beaten in Bataan. He may feel that until he has a complete victory to his credit, he doesn't want to sing too loudly.

But MacArthur has won so far in New Guinea because the men under his command were able to do what they never had a chance to do on Bataan because of lack of numbers, supplies and food.

On New Guinea they were able to do better than the Japs could, the very things which the Japs could do best. And they did it in the kind of jungle country in which that "best" was even better. They were able to adapt themselves to the environment which required a kind of fighting and a kind of endurance for which the Japanese had spent years in preparing. The kind of fighting that resulted in the fall of Singapore and the kind which the conventional British soldiers—even the Far Eastern experts—said was impossible.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The first known rubber hose was manufactured in England in 1827.

Collapsible rubber boats equipped with paddles, bullet-hole plugs, anchor, water, etc., are being produced for fighting U. S. airmen. Inflated in 10 seconds, this boat forms part of the pilot's seat and stays with him when he hits the water.

An Omaha, Neb., tire salesman hauled into court before retiring for parking his car near a hydrant first talked himself out of the $2 fine, then sold two new tires to the judge, two to the cop who arrested him and two to the court attendant.

Production of War tires is definitely tied to the production of reclaimed rubber. It is estimated that the country has retining capacity to process 360,000 tons of reclaimed a year.

Rubber authorities estimate that 900 million tires have been scrapped since World War I.

Some Items Which

WE SHOULD KNOW ABOUT THE JAPS

—By James R. Young—

Who Was 13 Years in Tokyo for INS.

MAYLING SOONG FOUNDATION, honoring the First Lady of China, established by her many friends in this country, has been given further impetus by Wellesley College alumnae on her arrival here 25 years after her graduation.

TWO JAPS, former students in the United States, are reported handling the 12,000 man Jap invasion army units in Northern Japan. These men would specialize in a follow up, after combat troops, in commandeering radio stations, telephone switchboards, gasoline stations, highways, railways, bus lines and power houses. One is Lieut. Henry Shimanouchi, a former San Francisco resident, and as of Dec. 7, 1941, in charge of Japan's so-called cultural society of Rockefeller Center. The other, Capt. Frank Matsumoto, was athletic director of Waseda University in Tokyo who entertained visiting American college and professional athletic teams.

A BICYCLE, the chief means of transportation in Shanghai, now costs $10,000 in Chinese currency. The Japs, pre-Pearl Harbor, were the world's largest bike manufacturers, making them from processed American scrap at $3 apiece and selling them on a one year installment plan to the natives of Indo-China, Siam and Malaya. In the drive on Singapore, Bangkok and Rangoon, the Japs seized the bicycles and literally peddled their way through the peninsula. Tokyo has an estimated 3,200,000 bicycles. Few have coaster brakes, which are the costliest part. The ingenious Jap manufacturers decided to leave off the expensive part—if you want to stop, fall off.

THIS WINTER Shanghai will witness hundreds of deaths from freezing and insufficient food. The European refugee colony, numbering several thousands, will suffer, too. The Japs, last Winter, seized all wheat and rice, and sealed Red Cross supplies—not one ounce or a single bottle of medicine was permitted in use. The Japs prefer to have thousands die in Shanghai's below zero weather than survive and require to be fed.

CHILEANS are being told by the Jap ambassador down there that if their country breaks with the Axis, Japan will bomb the long shore line. Japan for years was one of Chile's great nitrate buyers. In return the Chileans obtained Jap cotton piece goods, pottery, rayon, uniforms and military equipment. Boatloads of Chilean nitrate, sold by a British controlled company, went to Japan in return for munitions and agriculture. Now we must use nitrate on the Japs in the Pacific. Just as our oil and gasoline have taken the Japs to the Solomons and the Aleutians. Or, as Dr. Lin Yutang explains the paradox, we sold the Japs the Ninth Avenue Elevated so they could make bullets. Now we have torn down the Second Avenue Elevated to make bullets to fire back at the Ninth Avenue train.

HOUSE FOREIGN AFFAIRS committee should include besides Clare Boothe Luce, a famous medical missionary from China, Dr. Walter H. Judd, elected from Minneapolis. He was one of many warning us years ahead of Japan's method of attacks. Possibly the Luce-Judd combination might shake down some of the mentally stagnated members of the State Department. And here's a tip: These Chinese are indignant that we have not cleaned house in the Far Eastern division of Mr. Hull's department, a year after war started. We'd better clean those career barnacles from the ship of state, if we expect future cooperation from the Chinese.

RAY KINNEY, the coast to coast Hawaiian bandman who recently played to a $22,000 house in Chicago, knows Hawaiian legislative work. He worked as a page boy in the Territorial halls. His brother is an outstanding authority on Japs in Hawaii and published a book 20 years ago which was suppressed because it revealed Jap plots and intrigue in illegal immigration work.

SIR GEORGE SANSOM, one of the few British officials really familiar with Japan, has been appointed economic expert on Far Eastern affairs to the British Embassy in Washington. His counterpart in the American Embassy in Tokyo was Frank Starr Williams. Both Sir George and Frank Williams were outstanding authorities on Japan's plans for war—but few wanted to listen to them, especially the cotton people who were selling the Japs on credit and wanted Williams to help collect their bills!

THE VITAMINS

Physicians who have followed the history of the vitamins will remember that vitamin C was one of the first vitamins to gain fame as it was found that scurvy could be prevented by eating foods rich in vitamin C.

Dr. Barton

Later came the very great interest in vitamin D because it prevented rickets (rachitis) which up to that time had been widespread. Today, fortunately enough, one rarely sees a case of misshapen legs in children that is due to rickets.

Still later came the knowledge of the benefits derived from vitamin A; infections warded off and night blindness prevented.

Finally came vitamin B, with its family—B1, B2, B complex and others—as a nerve builder, a definite treatment for neuritis, an appetite builder and an aid to various run-down conditions.

Lately we have been reading about vitamin B complex as delaying the onset of fatigue. An interesting experiment on the use of vitamin B complex in the treatment of fatigue is recorded in the Journal of Industrial Hygiene and Toxicology by Drs. E. Simonson, N. Enzer, A. Baer and R. Braun. These physicians put 23 persons to various fatigue tests. First they found what each individual could do in the way of work before he became fatigued; then 12 were given vitamin B complex in tablet form and 11 were given plain tablets similar in appearance containing no vitamin B complex but with the same taste.

From the standpoint of fatigue of the muscles those given the vitamin B complex tablets showed no greater improvement than the ones who received no vitamin B complex. However, from the standpoint of fatigue of the nervous system, measured by the flicker light test, considerable difference was shown. Of the 12 given the B complex, 5 required a great deal more time to become tired, 3 showed moderate amount more time and 4 showed no change. In the 11 who received no B complex, there was no change in the amount of time it took to cause tiredness of the nervous system.

Exercise Essential For Folks Over 40

Some months ago articles appeared in the medical journals in which two prominent physicians warned those over 40 of the dangers of exercise. They pointed out that after 40, we are on the way down hill and that exercise would be dangerous to heart and blood vessels. Neither the heart nor the blood vessels should be asked to do any unnecessary work, not even "lift a finger."

Most physicians will agree with the idea that strenuous exercise in those at and past middle age is not necessary to maintain health and can do more harm than good.

What is a middle-aged man or woman who walks to his or her employment instead of riding, does the housework, or plays a round of golf a couple of times a week, or takes five minutes' exercise every morning, going to think about this business of "not lifting a finger unnecessarily?"

He or she is going to lift the finger, the arm, the feet, bend the body, walk home hundreds of yards at least daily because they know that as far as they are concerned the exercise they take is necessary work.

We all have sense enough to know what would happen to our heart muscle, our lungs, our muscles, our blood vessels, our digestion, our skin, if we loafed or sat down all the time. Every physician knows that he must not let the middle aged or the elderly loaf or take to bed. They would soon become bedridden.

Simple everyday exercise such as walking, housework, noncompetitive golf, or swimming; stimulates heart action, keeps blood vessels elastic, stimulates flow of blood through all the organs and working processes, maintains the appetite and prevents constipation.

What these physicians who advised "no exercise" are really telling us is that, as we grow older, we must get rid of the idea that we "need" regular strenuous exercise to keep ourselves healthy. This strenuous exercise may lessen our reserve strength.

HEALTH BRIEFS

The term Diabetes Mellitus comes from the Greek words that mean "Passing through of honey."

Diabetes is a condition in which the body cannot make use of all the sugar which enters the bloodstream from digested food. The symptoms are increased thirst and desire for food; loss of weight, weakness, pains in the legs and general irritability. Diabetes can be controlled. Consult your family physician at once by all means.

SAVE MEAT WITH TASTY ALL-BRAN MEAT PATTIES

Here's a grand recipe for these tiniest Delicious, nourishing meat patties—made with KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Makes meat go further. Gives these patties a tempting, crunchy texture—plus all the nutritional benefits of ALL-BRAN: valuable proteins, carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals. Try it!

Kellogg's All-Bran Meat Patties

1 egg — 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper — 1 cup milk
2 tablespoons minced onion — ¾ cup catsup
1 cup Kellogg's All-Bran
1 pound ground beef

Beat egg, add salt, pepper, onion, parsley, milk, catsup and All-Bran. Let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Add beef and mix thoroughly. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) about 20 minutes or broil about 15 minutes. Remove meat patties from pan. Add some milk and seasonings to drippings. Thicken slightly to make gravy. Yield: 5 servings, 2 patties each.

Handicapped

A company of recruits, having been issued with new boots, went for a route march to "run them in." At the end of the march, one man was missing.

When eventually rounded up and asked where he had been he replied:

"My boots were tied together, sergeant, so I couldn't get along as fast as the other chaps."

Man, they say, is made of dust. But some women think it is gold dust.

His Lot

"How many times shall I bow?" said the novice entertainer at the battalion variety show.

"Bow?" said the stage manager. "No bowing for you, you'll have to duck."

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

IN THE good old days when dressmakers were paid according to the number of spools of thread they used, the empty spools were saved until enough had been accumulated to make a corner what-not or hanging shelves. Now, with machines whirring for defense sewing, it is again easy to save enough spools for one of these quaint sets of shelves.

You will need 60 spools; 12½ feet of wire just stiff enough to bend easily; and three boards of the size desired for the shelves. Either a stain or a paint finish may be used.

NOTE: These spool shelves are from Book 3 of the series of eight booklets which Mrs. Spears has prepared for our readers. There are directions for an end table of spools in Book 5 and a corner what-not in Book 7. Each of these booklets contains more than 30 other fascinating things to make for the home. Copies are 10 cents each postpaid, and should be ordered direct from Hunted Camels in U. S.

Early settlers of the American West (1870-'80) relished the meat of the wild camel. Camel steaks were a favorite dish. These wild camels were descendants of a herd imported from Egypt for army use in 1856.

Turned loose because they caused horses to stampede (camels have a strange odor), the camels multiplied rapidly until wiped out by American hunters in search of the fine-flavored meat.

The available supply of textiles for civilians during 1943 should not fall more than 10% below last year's production, according to Frank L. Walton, Director of the WPB Textile, Clothing and Leather Division.

Basing his estimates on the assumption that increased military and foreign requirements will be met through conservation measures, which have already been instituted, and allowing for possible production losses due to labor, power, transportation, or other shortages, he declared that the output of fabrics should be sufficient to meet all essential civilian requirements.

There is no overall shortage of textile fibers, he said. We have a surplus of cotton which, along with our production of rayon and our production and supply of wool and flax, should prevent any shortage of fibers. Production is limited only by the available processing capacity for fibers. Sheets, towels, bedspreads, and blankets are expected to be available in quantities to take care of essential needs, he said, and the same holds true for knitted hosiery and underwear.

Housewives, who unwrap their bread and find the loaves unsliced, need not be dismayed for lack of a fancy blade called the "bread knife". Following the announcement that bakeries would stop slicing bread on January 18th, there was a widespread buying splurge of such knives. Any keen-edged meat or other type of slicing knife that is in almost every kitchen will do the bread cutting trick as neatly as the fancy blade.

Construction projects having a total cost of $1,214,850,897 have been stopped in the last three months, in line the WPB's policy of curtailing non-war work to free materials, equipment and labor for more essential uses.

Competent stenographers and secretaries can have their transportation paid to Washington by Uncle Sam, who will also be happy to do their room hunting for them. WPB district offices will give them 30-day, training periods at $1440 before sending them to Washington at increases up to $2,000, depending on their experience and capabilities.

The OPA is campaigning to stop gasoline stations from accepting No. 4, 5, and 6 gasoline coupons before they are valid. Suspension hearings are already being held.

The broken-down condition of a large proportion of the tires turned in by motorists to the Government has emphasized the necessity for periodic inspection to extend the life of tires now on cars.

The 152 class one motor carries reporting to the I. C. C. carried more than 36,000,000 passengers in September, a 91% increase over September, 1941.

A plan to mobilize commercial vehicles to augment facilities of local civilian defense councils in the event of war emergency or public disaster has been announced by the ODT for the critical areas of the Atlantic, Gulf, and Pacific Coasts, and the Great Lakes region.

Manufacture of anti-freeze solutions compounded with inorganic salts or petroleum distillates has been prohibited by the WPB, as a result of widespread complaints that certain solutions recently distributed in large quantities have been found highly destructive to radiators, ignition systems, and rubber connections in automobiles and trucks.

This week more than 200,000 stores will remind housewives to save waste fats. Four weeks from now, some of the fats turned in at this time, will be ready to fire airplane cannon. The six S's of waste fat salvage are: Save, Sell, Saponify, Seperate, Ship, Shoot.

Launderies, which maintain a diaper service, may require a deposit covering diapers, containers, baby scales, bottle sterilizers, and other infant necessities of a durable nature, which they rent to customers, the OPA said.

To lessen any possible confusion and lack of understanding of the OPA point rationing system when it goes into effect, a comprehensive program of education on the subject will be carried on through public schools in Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, Indiana, and Michigan.

Far-reaching liberalization of the requirements for agricultural deferments which is expected to keep many additional workers on farms has been announced by the War Manpower Commission's Selective Service Bureau. The revised guide provides that a local board would be justified in some cases in defering an agricultural worker who produced as little as 8 war units of essential products. Heretofore, 16 units was considered as a standard.

In a move to protect young workers entering war time industry, the U. S. Department of Labor's Children's Bureau is setting up a series of advisory standards, pointing out the hazards of the various occupations in which young workers are likely to be employed and listing kinds of work that are relatively safe or unsafe for boys and girls 16 and 17 years old.

The hours of operation of service stations throughout the country have been regulated by the Office of Petroleum Administrator for War. The station may operate on two plans: Staying open not more than 72 hours a week and for not more than 12 hours a day, or staying open 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, but serving only T cards holders during 12 of the 24.

Over a billion dollars worth of army contracts have been placed during the last two months with concerns employing from five to 500 persons, the Smaller War Plant Corporation announces.

A new regional WPB service designed to smash critical war production bottlenecks at the request of the armed forces by calling into instant play any or all of the WPB's specialized services is being developed with excellent results in Northern Ohio.

Workers will again find cotton flannel shirts selling for approximately $1.59 on retail shelves as a result of OPA action establishing fair margins on these goods. Price inequities had forced withdrawal of these goods from the market.

A forthcoming OPA regulation will prohibit changes in quality, weight, quantity, ingredients, and containers of toiletries and cosmetics except when such changes are required by war limitation orders and then the manufacturer must certify that the resulting product will give approximately the same results, an OPA representative told the Ohio Cosmetologists Association.

If your lights go out suddenly and your neighbors' lights remain on, the chances are that a short circuit or overload somewhere in your home has caused a fuse to blow. This is really for your protection for if the fuse did not blow and cut off the current, damage to your housewiring might result. Here are some suggestions that will help you avoid blown fuses and prevent needless interruptions in your electric service:

Repair faulty appliance and portable lamp cords. Cords with worn insulation or loose connections that permit bare wires to come together are a common cause of blown fuses. Inspect your cords regularly and repair them or have them repaired if they show signs of wear. Protect them from fraying, cracking, breaking or kinking.

Keep fabric-covered cords away from water. If moisture soaks into a cord it may cause a short circuit as water is an excellent conductor of electricity. Washers and other appliances used around water are equipped with rubber cords for this reason.

Do not overload your washer. Filling tub too full of clothes or feeding too many pieces into wringer at one time may cause an overload on the motor that will result in a blown fuse. Stiff grease in the gear case, caused by storing washer outdoors in cold weather, may do the same thing.

Do not connect too many appliances on one circuit. The average household branch circuit is wired to carry 15 amperes or 1725 watts. Connecting lamps and appliances totaling more than this wattage on one such circuit at one time may cause a fuse to blow.

Do not use defective appliances. Have them repaired by a competent electrician or appliance dealer at the first sign of trouble.

Blown fuses may also result from defective wall switches, outlets and other parts of your wiring system, although more often the causes are those mentioned above. In the event of trouble with your housewiring, it is best to call a qualified electrician to deal with it.

Keniucky Enlists 200,000 Youth in Food-for-Freedom.

Enlistment of 4-H club boys and girls in the food-for-freedom program is going forward all over Kentucky. The plan calls for the enrollment of 200,000 boys and girls on farms and in towns and cities. Reports already received indicate the eagerness with which boys and girls from 10 to 20 years are filling pledge cards. Each is making plans to carry one or more types of work such as a garden to feed at least three people, poultry for meat and egg production, or the production of corn, seed hemp, castor beans, hogs, beef cattle, dairy cattle and sheep. Quantity will be stressed in all lines of work.

President Roosevelt expressed his whole-hearted approval of the part 4-H'ers play in the victory campaign in the following letter:

TO ALL 4-H CLUB MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES:

The turn of each year is symbolic of youth and renewed confidence. Never before has a New Year presented to all youth a greater challenge to do their part in a democratic world. The whole nation recognizes your self-reliance, your steadfast determination to attain your goals, and your patriotic devotion as individuals and as a group.

At this time it is particularly gratifying ti learn of your extensive mobilization plans for 1943 to help the farmers of America to bring about still greater food production. May the observance of National Mobilization Week, February 6 to 14, reach into every rural home. We have faith in your ability to render a great service in this way. We know that you, like your brothers and sisters in the Service, have the spirit and perseverance that will bring victory in the fight for human freedom and a world at peace.

THE STORY SO FAR: Ann Lee and Cole Cody, beneficiaries under two identical wills made by Early Bill Cole, arrived in Bald Eagle by stage coach, only to learn of Bill Cole's death a few days previously. Ann, accompanied by Aunt Jenifer, went out to Old Bill's ranch the following day and was greeted by Rance Waldron, who, posing as Old Bill's nephew, made it evident they were not welcome at the Ranch. While Ann Lee was making it just as plain she had no intention of leaving, Cole Cody arrived. Ann and Cole had a misunderstanding during the journey to Bald Eagle and she was not pleased to see him at the Ranch. In fact, she ordered him out.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER IX

"You're not a very good shot, are you?" said Cole Cody, lazy and slow-spoken and impudent. Even his eyebrows mocked Ann.

"I could shoot your toenails off and never blister your feet," she told him.

"Then why only mess me up like this, making it hurt like seven kinds of hell and at the same time do me no more harm than a hot stove lid dropped on your toe?"

"It's that darned gun of Calhoun's! It does its own shooting when it feels like it. You try it sometime, smarty!"

"Trying to apologize? Meaning you didn't go to do it?" He was still jeering at her. Maybe it was just as well then that Cal had retrieved his gun and taken it off with him.

"Mr. Cody," said Ann, very prim and very polite, "I am sorry, in a way, that I shot you. You see—"

"In a way? That's nice! What way?" snapped young Cody.

"There is such a thing as being humane, or anyhow human," said Ann. "You know very well that you are not welcome here. What's the use pretending? You and I don't like each other—for my part," she exploded, "I hate the sight of you! Get well as soon as you can—and go somewhere else. So, what I mean by being sorry I shot you, it's just that if you weren't all shot up you could be on your way right now."

He slid out of his chair, the tight bandage about his midriff irking him, and stood up.

"I'm here to stay," he told her flatly. "I didn't come here following you, either. If I'd known you were here, maybe I couldn't have come at all. And, not meaning to be tough with you, just the same I can ask you what the devil you are doing here anyhow? At my place."

"Your place! Why, you—"

"We sort of find it natural to call each other 'You' and then gulp and stop, don't we?" he said.

"Your place! What on earth are you talking about? Have you gone crazy? Oh, maybe you always were crazy! Of course, that's it! That explains everything!"

"Listen, and don't be so smart. You're kind of pretty, and maybe it's gone to your head. Men, I guess, seeing you at a dance, all dolled up, have told you a lot of lies, and you think you're Cleopatra, maybe, or the Queen of Sheba. Whoa! Didn't I say wait a minute? I'm answering questions right now; you say what do I mean by saying this is my place. Well, this was a spot it is, or anyhow going to be. Me, I'm old Early Bill Cole's heir. This is the King Cole Ranch, and it's mine."

"Why, you—you—"

"I've told you I'm getting tired of our calling each other 'You-you's.' Where's your originality?"

"You—liar! You're worse than that man Rance Waldron. He says its his place too—and it's mine! Now, Mr. Cody, will you—Will you tuck your shirt tail in, and go climb a tree?"

What Mr. Cody did was scratch his head, thick-thatched with abundant dark red hair, and hold his peace a moment and do a bit of thinking, staring at her all the while. He told himself that this was a sort of funny lay-out, his running into this obnoxious girl so consistently for one thing, her making a claim like that for another, the letter from old Early Bill Cole for the first of all in a chain of events that—No chain at all, just a crazy quilt of a thing!

Pondering, he did tuck his shirt tail in. Also he produced the makings of a cigarette and very slowly, his mind on other matters, he builded his cigarette. And in due course, lighted it. He inhaled deeply; he sent a stream of bluish smoke ceilingward.

"It's still reasonably early in the morning," he said after he had driven her frantic with his leisureliness. "You've got lots of time to comb your hair and wash your face—Go look in a looking glass, and you'll do both!—and get into Bald Eagle before noon. If the stage doesn't go where you want it to go today, it'll be pretty sure to go tomorrow. So you've got time to listen while I tell you something. Mr. Early Bill Cole, rest his wild soul, Early Bill being dead now, made up his mind he wanted the right sort of man to take care of the things he had to leave behind him on taking the long, one-way trip. He nominated me for the job. He even took time to write out a will. He left every damn thing he had to William Cole Cody. And that's me. Do you begin to get the general idea?"

"When I was a very little girl," she told him sweetly, "I used to say that I hated things. Castor oil was one, and there were others. But, dear me, I didn't know what I was talking about. For only now, Mr. Cody, I do know now what the word 'hate' means. Need I go further? Of course not. Now, suppose you tell me what, if anything at all, you are driving at? Someone has told you, no doubt, that Mr. Early Bill Cole willed everything he had to me?"

Cole Cody had a way of exhaling cigarette smoke that, she was dead sure, could infuriate anyone on earth. He did some exhaling. Her nails bit into her pink palms. But Spartanlike, she clenched her teeth and waited.

Outside, in the patio, Rance Waldron had stopped at the side of a window, listening, one would have judged, so still and attentive had he become, that he was far and away more than merely casually interested. At least so deemed Aunt Jenifer, spying on him from a kitchen corner!

At last Ann spoke up, and very quietly, considering who it was speaking.

"Mr. Early Bill Cole," she said, spacing her words nicely, "was a gentleman and a very fine man. He was a friend of my father's. He knew that he had to die. So he made his will. It's quite too bad,

With Ann watching his slightest move, he shot the key home.

Mr. Cody, to disappoint you, but Mr. Cole left everything he had—to me. Yes, that's what I said. He made a will to that effect and—and I've got that will! Now—Will you get well and go!"

He moved over to the table, feeling a trifle unsteady and blurry in the head, and sat on the table's edge, one foot swinging.

"We'll soon find out about all this," he said. "I've got a key—a key old Early Bill sent me—"

"A key! You've got a key! Wh—what sort of key?"

"A key that's made to unlock something." He snorted at her. "What do you suppose, asking what sort of key? Now, when I find what it's to unlock—There's an old devil in town they call the Judge—He's crazy as a bed-bug, no question. But he knows a lot of things. Between him and another crazy old coot name of Doc Joe—"

"Doc Joe isn't a crazy old coot! He's a dear! But—but—Where did you say you got your key?"

"Forget that I've told you as much as I have! Are you and I old friends who tell each other all our heart's secrets? Are we—"

"Shut up! You talk so darned much and say so little—you make me mad! Tell me about your key. Did Early Bill—You say that he sent it to you?"

"Well, what if he did? Maybe you've got the lock it fits! Let's laugh!"

"Maybe I have! And if you've got the other key, I'll show you! I'll show you who owns the King Cole Ranch and all that goes with it! Where's your precious key, Mr. Cole Cody?"

"Where's your lock for it to fit?" he shot back at her, and grinned his most malicious grin.

Suddenly they were aware of Aunt Jenifer in the doorway, clearing her throat to a warning "Ahem!" Her eyes drifted sidewise toward the window, and managed to jerk their attention in that direction, whereupon Rance Waldron made the best of the situation, tapping on the pane, calling to them,

"What's going on in there? I thought you two, after the lady had popped a bullet into the gent, would have had enough of each other. Mind if I drop in and join in the powwow?"

He moved away from his vantage point, and a moment later the doorway framed him. He stopped there, studying them.

"I don't think I know you very well," said Cody. "Do you happen to be one of my guests?"

"We met just now," Rance reminded him, cool and insolent, as was his fashion. He pinched his chin, looking reflective. "Guests; you said, didn't you? Whose guests I can't but ask. You mean I'm your guest or you're my guest or—Just what did you have in mind?"

Cole Cody, drained of his strength as he was, felt a strong urge to batter all the smug insolence off the man's handsome face. As a matter of fact he experienced an all but overwhelming desire to spoil Mr. Rance Waldron's manly profile for all time.

"It's like this," said Cole Cody, very slow-spoken. When he spoke that way he was generally saying one thing and thinking far afield; right now he was regarding Rance Waldron's empurpled nose and dallying with the thought of taking even more painstaking care of that nose when opportunity afforded. "You heard part of what was said; I guess out there at the window, you didn't miss a word. So suppose we go on from there. I don't know who you are—"

"Why not get straightened out at the start?" said Rance Waldron reasonably. "Me, I'm Rance Waldron and just blew in here a few days ago. As far as I know, or anyone else seems to know, I'm next of kin to that rare old bird, Early Bill Cole. I had me a hunch that he kicked off without making any will at all, and in spite of the several mentions of wills that I've heard since, I'm still of that notion. If I happen to be right—Well, then, this outfit, lock, stock and barrel, belongs to me! Got all that, Mr. Cody?"

"That's quite a speech," conceded Cody, nodding approvingly. "Yep, I got it. Only it's my bet you're out on a limb. Here are the three of us, you and Miss Lee and me, all putting in our claims." He made a wry face, then wiped it away with the heel of his hand. "Like so many turkey buzzards sitting on a fence! It makes me sort of sick at my stomach. I got a notion to high-tail out of here and let you folks fight over a dead man's boots!"

"Scat!" cried Ann Lee. "You're overdue some other place!"

"No. I'm sticking until I get things straight. Why old Early Bill Cole should make me his heir, I don't know and can't guess. But he might have had his reasons. I never knew him, I never even saw him. But one thing sticks out like a sore thumb: His name was Cole, and I'm Cole Cody! How's that happen? Must be that we're related, or something—"

He reached into his pocket, groped a minute and dug up a small, flat key—and did little Ann Lee's eyes all but start from their sockets!

"There!" said young Cody. "There's the key to the mystery, as the feller says—Maybe! Who'll bring me a lock for my key?"

Ann Lee had a way, all her own, of getting from the place where she was to the place where she wished to be, that was like nothing else on earth.

And with her cherished carpetbag clutched tight. She got it open, she ran s hurrying hand down into it, she plucked out an old, black iron box. An iron box with two locks, as anyone might see.

"If your key fits one of these locks—This one! Try it!"

Cole Cody chose to drive her wild. He tossed his key ceilingward, caught it and played with it, and he laughed at her.

"So that's it, is it?" he jeered at her. "A strong box with two locks, and you've got a key for one, and are going clean crazy like Pandora and Blue Beard's wife, trying to burglarize it! And no can do—without the other key! Mine! Well," and he never spoke more drawlingly, "there's no hurry, is there? How about waiting until tomorrow? Maybe it might be best to wait until my wound heals over! That's an idea!"

And he tossed his key again, caught it and shoved it back into his pocket. And he could have sworn that he heard Aunt Jenifer giggle!

Ann Lee opened her hand and showed him a key very much like his own. She tossed it up, just as he had done, and caught it; she held it between her thumb and finger—and sneered at him. And how little Ann Lee, when she put her mind to it, could sneer!

Ann set the box down hastily, and shot her key into the proper lock. When the mechanism gave its satisfied responsive click, she looked up at him triumphantly. Little Ann Lee could crowd a lot of things into one swift glance: I've done it, Mister! How about you? Just four-flushing?

Cole Cody wondered, himself. Well, here was the time, to find out about things. With Ann watching his slightest move, as though she suspected him of being able to accomplish any weird sort of sleight-of-hand, not trusting him; with both the lively Aunt Jenifer and the sardonic Rance Waldron pressing close, he shot the key home.

It fitted the lock.

JESUS THE BREAD OF LIFE

LESSON TEXT—John 6:8-14, 30-35.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life.—John 6:35.

Spiritual truth becomes understandable to us as it is put in the language of our daily life. Jesus was the Master Teacher of all times, and made use of graphic figures to present the message of salvation.

He spoke of the wind, of water, and in this lesson of bread. Even a child knows about such things and understands the good news. Bread is still the staff of life. It speaks of life and health, of satisfaction and strength.

Beginning with the five small barley cakes (and two fishes) which a provident little boy had taken with him into the wilderness, Jesus preaches by miracle and by precept of eternal things. One is glad that a bright lad was more thoughtful than all the adults that day, for he provided the occasion for the miracle and the message.

I. Daily Bread (vv. 8-13).

The great multitude had followed Jesus to the other side of Galilee where He had gone to rest. They sought Him out and He had compassion on them—these sheep without a shepherd (Matt. 9:36). That interest was first spiritual, for "he began to teach them many things," but it was also practical in the realm of daily life, for He saw that they were physically hungry.

His appeal to Philip revealed the lack of faith which at times afflicted the disciples. They knew they had the Son of God in their midst, and yet they were bound by the matter of dollars and cents, of portions and —well, they just wished Jesus would send these people away. That would solve the problem. Oh, yes, "there is a lad here," but what he has amounts to nothing.

All this was perfectly natural. They talked just like most of us do when we are up against a similar problem. But the point is that they (and we too!) ought to realize that "little is much when God is in it." If we let Christ have all that we have and are, it will be adequate for every need.

Are you worrying about your lack of money; your inability to do things for Him? Are you limiting God when He would like to take over for you and multiply it by His blessing?

Notice that though there was plenty, there was none to waste. What was over was gathered up. God never encourages waste. Perhaps we in America may learn that lesson the hard way in these days—but having learned it let us not forget it.

II. Heavenly Bread (vv. 14, 30, 31).

The people (probably incited by the religious leaders) after their first surprise at the miracle, sought Him out in the temple and demanded a greater miracle. Jesus never put much dependence on those whose faith rested on miracles, and we do well to be careful of those who must have something spectacular going on all the time if they are to be interested.

They contrasted His miracle of one meal with the repeated miracle of the daily manna—the bread from heaven—under Moses. Jesus makes it clear that He is not in competition with Moses, for the manna came not from Moses but from God. Those who seek signs and wonders had better get their eyes off such things and get them on God who is the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

Their plea for heavenly bread gave Jesus the opportunity to tell them about the true bread from heaven.

III. The Bread of Life (vv. 32-35).

Feeding the body is important, but the real need of men is for spiritual food. Daily bread is a food that perisheth (see v. 27), but the "meat that endureth unto eternal life" is received by faith in Christ (v. 29).

Instead of a sign, or the passing blessing of daily sustenance, Jesus presents Himself as the bread of life which will eternally satisfy the deepest hunger and thirst of the human soul.

Those who teach that Christ is but our example, giving Himself as the spiritual bread to those who by development of character are seeking to be like Him, should read verses 47 to 51 of this same chapter. Here He makes clear that by the giving of His flesh in the death of the cross everlasting life comes to the believer.

It is only the man who eats of this bread, who by faith makes himself partaker of the death of our Lord, that can have eternal life.

This must be done in the right way—the way of faith. The people said, "Lord, evermore give us this bread" (v. 34). One wonders whether some of them did not say it scoffingly, and others perhaps still with the thought of daily bread for their bodies. Among them, however, were surely some earnest souls who that day saw the light of eternity through His wonderful words about the bread of life.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Wake Up and Shine . . . for a Hearty Breakfast!
(See Recipes Below)

Winter Breakfasts

Though the wind may howl moanfully and the icicles crackle coldly at your window these mornings when you arise to meet the day and all its tasks, a hot, well-balanced breakfast is bound to bring you to the alert in double quick time. Fruit or fruit juice will wake you first, then eggs, hot cereal, rolls or flapjacks will do the rest toward getting you on your way.

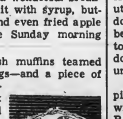
Citrus fruit crops are especially good this winter and will be at your breakfast service with all their rich vitamins, minerals and health-giving qualities. Their sparkle and freshness will give you a new start these busy mornings.

Vitamin Cereals.

It's a wonderful idea to follow up the fruit course with one of those quickly prepared hot cereals which are so rich in vitamin B1—that important vitamin you need daily for preventing nervousness, fatigue and restlessness.

There are several ways of doing up the hot cereals. The quick-cooking wheat and oat cereals may be readily prepared along with the rest of breakfast—in just a few minutes' time. If you have a deep-well cooker on an electric range you can place the cereal in glass jars along with dried fruits you are able to obtain, turn on the unit overnight, and have fruit and cereal ready-to-eat.

Don't hesitate at cooking the quick-cooking cereals longer—they are improved in flavor and more palatable if you give them a few extra minutes.



Coddled Eggs.

Coddled or soft cooked eggs are made by bringing a sauce pan of water to a good boil. Then turn out the heat, transfer into it the eggs with a spoon. Cover and let stand 5 to 10 minutes depending upon the consistency of egg you desire. This is a good way to fix eggs—you can place them in the water while you're getting the rest of the breakfast.

Change Your Breakfasts.

Fried mush is a wonderful breakfast food; serve it with syrup, butter and honey, and even fried apple rings—for a late Sunday morning feast.

Toasted English muffins teamed with poached eggs—and a piece of broiled ham in-between will work wonders toward getting the family on its way out of bed.

Packaged pancake mixtures will speed up the tempo at breakfast time. Serve them with butter or vitaminized margarine—honey and butter syrup, melted together, or dark corn syrup flavored with a maple extract are all that could be desired, luscious indeed.

No, I haven't forgotten omelets! For a fluffy omelet allow 3 eggs for 2 people. Separate eggs, and beat each separately. Add ½ tablespoon cream to yolks, salt and pepper, then fold in stiffly beaten whites. Heat butter in skillet, pour in eggs, cover and cook over low heat until mixture puffs, about 8 minutes. Uncover and finish cooking in slow oven (325 degrees) about 20 minutes. Fold over and serve on warm platter.

Omelet Variations.

If you have leftover ham, sprinkle a few tablespoons of minced ham over omelet while it is cooking. For a jelly omelet, spread a tablespoon of jelly over surface of omelet before folding it over—after it has finished cooking completely. For special occasions, spread sauteed chicken livers before folding omelet.

Freshly baked rolls with swirls of brown syrup and whole pecans on top are bound to make your breakfast a real pleasure. Make the rolls in the afternoon—reheat for breakfast, for these won't dry out:

Butterscotch Pecan Rolls.
(Makes 3 dozen)

1 package yeast, compressed or granular
¼ cup warm water
¾ cup milk, scalded, cooled to lukewarm
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
¼ cup melted shortening
2 eggs, well beaten
About 4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 cup butter, softened
1 cup brown sugar, packed firmly
1 cup pecan meats

Pour ¼ cup lukewarm water over yeast, add 1 tablespoon sugar, stir, let stand about 5 minutes.

Dissolve salt and remaining sugar in milk. When lukewarm add yeast and blend with 2 cups flour. Beat very thoroughly. Next, add eggs and shortening. Mix well and beat three minutes. Add remaining flour enough to make a smooth dough. Knead lightly on board about 5 minutes. Use only enough flour to keep dough from sticking. Dough should be kept as soft as possible. Grease top and let rise until doubled. Fold dough down again and let rise again until doubled.

To shape: roll dough into oblong pieces until ¼ inch thick. Spread with butter, brown sugar and nuts. Roll as for jelly roll. Cut into 1 to 1½-inch slices. Use muffin tins, add ½ spoonful of butter, and a few nutmeats to each pan. Place rolls of dough, cut side down on each pan. Let rise again until double. Bake about 12 to 15 minutes in a hot (400 to 425-degree) oven. Remove from pans immediately.

Quick Coffee Cake.

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1¾ cups flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter and sugar. Add egg and beat until light. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk and beat for several minutes. Add vanilla and pour into a greased, shallow pan. Spread with topping and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven 25 to 30 minutes.

Topping:
2 egg whites
1 cup brown sugar
Nutmeats

Beat egg whites stiff. Fold in sugar. Spread on batter and sprinkle with chopped nutmeats.

Lynn Says:

Saying it Briefly: Saute minced onion and green pepper with leftover meat and enclose in pastry squares. Bake until crisply brown and serve with gravy.

Alternate slices of sauteed eggplant and slices of leftover meat in casserole. Pour over it some tomato soup, sprinkle with grated cheese, heat, and presto! Your main dish is ready!

Boil large onions, scoop out center, fill with hash, and heat, serve with gravy or tomato sauce.

Scoop out centers from potatoes, mash potatoes, mix with ground, leftover meat, refill, heat and bring to the table.

Private—Naw, you can have it. You saw it first.

No Indication

An Irishman, driving a donkey-cart in the middle of a narrow road, heard continuous hooting behind him. He looked round and saw a powerful car following in his wake.

He continued on his way, and the car behind continued to hoot. After a mile or so the road widened sufficiently for the big car to draw level.

"Why didn't you make room for me to pass?" asked the infuriated driver.

"How should I know you wanted to pass? You weren't going any faster than I was," was the reply.

Sportlight

By Grantland Rice

DISCUSSIONS lately have been flowing with the length and turbulence of Midwestern rivers concerning the names of all-around stars.

In these arguments, many of them started in army camps, we have had such names as Jim Thorpe, Bronko Nagurski, Sammy Baugh and many others.

As a composite star, we have just heard from an old friend we'd like to enter in this competition. In any mass formation of prominent celebrities his name might be swept aside.

Grantland Rice

Here are his qualifications — a 168-pound ploughing, hard-hitting fullback at Vanderbilt around 1908—high-class college boxer —professor of English at Amherst—author of five volumes of extremely high-class verse, largely sonnets—now, in addition to his English teaching, in charge of boxing at Amherst along the lines of war training.

His name is David Morton, one of Dan McGugin's favorite football players and one of Amherst's best-liked professors.

Dave Morton couldn't hit the line with Thorpe or Nagurski, or pass like Baugh. But he was still 168 pounds of crash and smash.

But neither of these men could box with him—and neither could write his sonnets from "Harvest," "Ships in Harbour" and other published works.

And I have an idea none of these could teach English at Amherst with quite the same effectiveness.

Strong for Boxing

Here is a letter from Davé Morton that explains itself—

"I welcomed your emphasis on boxing for soldier training in a recent column. (I'm running the boxing at Amherst.) All you say about parry and thrust and feinting is true. Plus two other things. Keeping on balance—set for offense or defense—every second under all conditions.

"Discovery (for beginners) of the surprising margin of endurance and vigorous action after being hurt. The uninitiated don't know they have it. They learn this from boxing.

"These two things go into the list of wartime dividends from boxing experience.

"At Amherst boxing is compulsory now for every student. I have 150 a week, taking instruction and mauling one another around. They like it, for the most part, and all of them want what it gives—conditioning, co-ordination, skill in offense and defense, capacity for absorbing punishment.

"Don't let anyone tell you the college student is soft. I take eight or ten hours a week (and other things around the jaw and body) learning that that is an exploded myth. He's willing—and he's determined to learn how to give and take, and to be skillful as well."

Boxing's Worth

When over 60-year-old Tony Biddle is willing to meet a bayonet fighter with bare hands—when Tommy Loughran takes the bayoneteers on with boxing gloves, you get the main idea.

There is still another idea that can be added to this list, brought out by another old friend known as Jack Dempsey.

Lieutenant Dempsey could never hit a line, throw a pass or even take time to read a sonnet, much less compose one.

But the Old Manassa Mauler had another good reason for boxing's worth.

Jack Dempsey

"The big help," Jack says, "is the confidence it brings to these fellows. They seem to think they are dubs at the start. And most of them are—don't know a right hand from a left hand. But after two weeks, when they find they can take a punch and can throw a few, they are different guys. They look you in the eye in a different way. I've seen some of these boys hurt from a punch, and I made them stop for a rest. They don't like to be stopped. They want to prove they can get hurt and still keep swinging. And I'm now talking about clumsy-looking starters who couldn't even chin themselves twice when they came to camp."

Untapped Mines

This country is full of possible stars and potential athletes who have never had a chance to prove their place in the shining sun of competition.

There has been entirely too much concentration on the few who, as football players, fighters or baseball players, could attract crowds at the gate.

Some stars had more color than others—although they may not have been better athletes. The build-up always has been important.

Farm Topics

Production Now Is Farmers' Weapon

Survey Shows Good Crop Lands Limited

Generals know that this war can't be won just by relying on luck. Victory will be achieved by careful strategy and relentless action.

Neither can farmers win their share of the war on a gamble. Production is their weapon. Production must be planned for victory. Farm strategy is based on balancing output so as to turn out the right things at the right time through efficient use of American farm resources.

Many believe America has plenty of good farm land. But surveys show that good crop lands are sharply limited. Of the present area of 530 million acres available for crops, only 340 million acres can be classed as really good land. The rest is too steep, too rough, too shallow or too infertile for profitable cultivation.

Labor, machinery and materials are short now, too. These conditions make it imperative for wartime agriculture to adjust itself to producing needed crops with maximum efficiency.

U. S. farmers can't afford to grow large quantities of crops not vitally needed. With present acreage and the large carry-over in storage, there is an abundance of wheat, for instance. Boosting the wheat output now would not be a contribution to the nation's war effort. Consequently production goals for wheat called for a 12 per cent decrease in acreage. Land thus released from wheat can be used for food and fiber more urgently needed.

Dairy products, especially milk being hydrated for shipment all over the world, is figuratively "pouring" from millions of U. S. farms.

More milk products, eggs, and meats are vitally necessary for war needs now. The goal for milk is an 8 per cent increase.

Reports from farmers indicate they will probably meet the production goals based on anticipated needs of the United States and the United Nations. Some plantings may fall below goal levels, as in the case of peanuts and flaxseed for oils. But this is partially offset by soybean plantings in excess of goals.

This adjustment to wartime needs is being accomplished through acreage allotments, marketing quotas, farm program payments, commodity loans, and farm price supports provided by the department of agriculture.

After the war, the farm program machinery must be geared to the post-war problems of agriculture to protect farmers from the gigantic surpluses, depressed prices, and wholesale bankruptcies which followed the First World war.

Through adjustment, farmers will marshal their forces for abundance in peace as they are doing now for victory.

Treatment for Grubs

Cattle infested with grubs (sometimes called "warbles" or "wolves") should be treated in the following way: Mix a powder containing one part of 5 per cent rotenone content derris or cube powder and two parts of wettable sulphur. The powder should be applied to the back of the infested animal with a shaker and rubbed in lightly with the hand. Other methods of control are a derris or cube wash, or the use of a power sprayer in distributing a rotenone-sulphur mixture over the backs of the animals.

Keep Brood Sows Gaining

Brood sows should be kept gaining at the rate of about one pound per day up to farrowing time. Difficulty in farrowing, pig eating, and poor milk flow are often traceable to inadequate rations. A good ration includes a pound of oats per sow daily, a small amount of protein supplement such as tankage or soybean meal, free access to legume hay and enough corn to put on the desired gain.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess

PADDY THE BEAVER AND SAMMY JAY BECOME FRIENDS

PADDY THE BEAVER floated in his pond and grinned in the most provoking way at Old Man Coyote, who had so nearly caught him. Old Man Coyote fairly danced with anger on the bank. He had felt so sure of Paddy that time that it was hard work to believe that Paddy had really gotten away from him. He bared his long cruel teeth and he looked very fierce and ugly.

"Come on in; the water's fine!" called Paddy.

Now, of course this wasn't a nice thing for Paddy to do, for it only made Old Man Coyote all the angrier. You see, Paddy knew perfectly well that Old Man Coyote has no love for the water, while Paddy lives in it most of the time. So, knowing that he was perfectly safe, he just couldn't resist the temptation to say some unkind things. You know he had had to be on the watch for days lest he should be caught, and so he hadn't been able to work quite so well as he could have with nothing to fear, and he still had a lot of work to do to prepare for winter. So he told Old Man Coyote just what he thought of him, and that he wasn't as smart as he thought he was or he never would have left a footprint in the mud to give him away.

"Let's be friends," said he.

When Sammy Jay, who was listening, and chuckling as he listened, heard that he flew down where he would be just out of reach of Old Man Coyote, and then he just turned that tongue of his loose, and you know that some people say that Sammy's tongue is hung in the middle and wags at both ends. Of course, this isn't really so, but when he gets to abusing people it seems as if it must be so. He called Old Man Coyote every bad name he could think of, and if there are any bad names Sammy doesn't know of no one else knows them. He called him a sneak, a thief, a coward, a bully, and a lot of other things.

"You said I warned Paddy that you were trying to catch him and that that was why you failed to find him at work at night, and all the time you had warned him yourself!" screamed Sammy. "I used to think that you were smart, but I know better now. Paddy is twice as smart as you are.

Mr. Coyote is ever so sly;
Mr. Coyote is clever and spry;
If you believe all you hear,
Mr. Coyote is naught of the kind,
Mr. Coyote is stupid and blind;
He can't catch a flea on his ear.

Paddy the Beaver laughed till the tears came at Sammy's foolish verse, but it made Old Man Coyote angrier than ever. He was angry with Paddy for escaping from him and he was angry with Sammy, terribly angry, and the worst of it was he couldn't catch either one, for one was at home in the water and the other was at home in the air, and he couldn't follow either. Finally he saw it was of no use to stay there to be laughed at, so muttering and grumbling he started for the Green Meadows.

As soon as he was out of sight Paddy turned to Sammy Jay. "Mr. Jay," said he, knowing how it tickled Sammy to be called "mister," "Mr. Jay, you have done me a mighty good turn today, and I am not going to forget it. You can call me what you please and scream at me all you please, but you won't get any satisfaction out of it because I simply won't get angry. I will say to myself 'Mr. Jay saved my life the other day,' and then I won't mind your tongue."

Now this made Sammy feel very proud and very happy. You know it is very seldom that he hears anything nice said of him. He flew down on the stump of one of the trees Paddy had cut. "Let's be friends," said he.

"With all my heart!" replied Paddy.

Ton-to-the-Acre Tobacco Made on Experiment Farm.

New burley tobaccos developed at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station produced more than a ton of leaf to the acre, in tests made at the Station the past season, on land free from black root-rot disease. Grown under ordinary farm conditions and on common tobacco land, they produced 25 to 30 percent more than common kinds of burley.

Ky. 16, a root-rot resistant variety now widely grown in Kentucky and other states, yielded 2,168 pounds to the acre. Eighty-four percent of it graded as smoker tobacco.

Ky. 41A, another root-rot resistant burley variety, produced at the rate of 2,089 pounds to the acre. Eighty-seven percent of it was smoker grade.

Ky. 33, an early-maturing tobacco resistant to root-rot and fusarium wilt, produced 2,144 lbs. to the acre; and Ky. 19, another new root-rot resistant variety, yielded 2,238 pounds to the acre.

Two other varieties developed at the Experiment Station, Ky. 52 and Ky. 48-7, which are resistant to black root-rot and mosaic deseases, produced 1,559 and 1,579 pounds, respectively, with 87 and 80 percent smoker. Although the yield of Ky. 52 is only that of common varieties it produced tobacco of exceptional quality.

J. C., a root-rot resistant variety being developed at the experiment station at Greenville, Tenn., produced 1,767 pounds to the acre, in tests at the Kentucky Experiment Station. Other varieties tested at the Kentucky station last year produced as follows: Barnett, 1,575 pounds; Warner, 1,576 pounds, and Kelley, 1,682 pounds. These graded from 82 to 84 percent smoker tobacco.

Right now you have an opportunity to cash in on high milk prices. Many farmers are "cashing in" by adding Wayne I-Q Dairy Feeds to their grains and roughage. They know that milk producing cows need extra minerals and vitamins, and that Wayne I-Q Dairy Feeds are made to supply just the right combination of these nutrients. No matter what combination of grains and roughage are available, we can outline a profitable feeding plan for you.

IT PAYS TO FEED WAYNE

She needs their extra nutrients and vitamins at an early age to help fit herself for a long life and high production.

Feed Wayne I-Q Complete Calf Feed for four months, then Wayne I-Q Fitting Ration to aid in bringing her to full development before freshening. That's the program that has helped produce many prize-winning heifers and heavy milk producers.

Ration Board Members Serve Without Pay

The fact that members of local War Price and Rationing Boards serve entirely without pay and are contributing much of their time and energy to the war effort was emphasized today in a statement by R. E. Brugh, chairman of the local board.

"Some people are impatient when they have to wait awhile for services or are critical of the board's operation if they cannot immediately obtain all the information that they want," R. E. Brugh said.

Everyone must remember that his neighbors and friends who are serving on rationing boards are trying to do the best possible job under conditions not always pleasant.

"Price Control and rationing have vital parts to play in winning the war. They affect everyone of us, and some people will be hit more than others. Members of the local board have no voice in the establishing of new regulations—we are simply here to see that they are carried out as equitably as possible in our own board area.

"Many times we lack sufficient help and of course our staff is constantly beseiged with inquiries. Board members do their best to keep abreast of regulations and amendments and are willing at all times to answer questions to the best of their ability.

"It will be very helpful to the successful operation of price control and rationing in this community if citizens will remember that the board is composed of their friends and neighbors and is doing all it can do to carry out the objectives for which it was established."

Wanda Lee Lykins

Little Wanda Lee Lykins, age 2 years and 7 months, died at St. Elizabeth Hospital Wednesday night of Trachea Bronchitis. She was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arine Lykins who live on J. W. Conley's farm.

Funeral services were conducted at the Christian church Friday afternoon, Rev. S. B. Godby officiating, after which the body was laid to rest in the church cemetary.

Chambers and Grubbs had charge of funeral arrangements.

Sympathy of all goes out to the bereaved family.

Rationing to Mean Fair Distrubution.

With food rationing to start sometime in February, so that everyone will get his fair share, folks are wondering just what the food situation is. Home economists at the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics have this to say:

There will be an ample supply of cereals for people at home as well as for lend-lease use, even though the crop this year should be short. The supply of fats and oils is not as large as last year, but larger than in pre-war years. Sugar supplies may be smaller than last year because of transportation difficulties.

More sweet potatoes and dried beans are in prospect for use because of a big carry-over. Should the white potato crop be only average, there will be fewer potatoes avaibable than last year.

The supply of fruits and vegetables will depend on weather, labor and transportation. There will be more home canning than ever before. Gardeners will be urged to plant vegetables with the most food value.

Poultry and egg production will be increased, but so will overseas shipment; hence there will be less for home consumption. Fish supplies will be smaller. Meat will be rationed so that everyone will get his fair share. It is expected that the total supply of milk will be the same, but civilians will probably get less because of large shipments being sent over-seas.

No Extra Sugar For Curing Meat.

Extra sugar will not be given for the curing of meats as was done for canning, it is announced. Since the amounts of sugar required are small, farmers are asked to use sugar from the table supply, or to substitute syrup or honey to sugar cure their pork this year.

From one to one and a half pounds of sugar to 100 pounds of trimmed meat will probably be enough, say home economists at the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Or, in place of sugar, two and a half pounds of honey, sorghum or corn syrup to 100 pounds of trimmed meat may be substituted. Select the sweetening the family likes best. Ready-mixed curing mixtures that contain sugar are sometimes sold by locker plants that do custom curing.

The plain salt cure may also be relied upon. The hams may not be liked as well as when sugar-cured, but they will keep satisfactorily.

Records Broken In Christmas Seal Sale

The Boone County Christmas Seal Sale, sponsored by the Boone County Protective Association, all Boone County schools cooperating, has gone over the top acording to a statement released by R. V. Lents, chairman of the committee in charge. The gross receipts were over $500. This is an all time record for the sale of Christmas Seals in the county.

The county retains 65% of the gross receipts. After the expenses of the sale have been deducted, the net receipts will be used to aid tuberculosis patients and those suspected of having the disease.

R. V. Lents, Principal of the Constance School is in charge of the Seal Sale in Boone County. All the school children in the county aiding in the campaign.

Mr. Lents has requested this paper to thank all the school principals and pupils that took part in the sale of the seals, and stated that he especially wished to thank the county newspapers for the many columns of publicity given to the campaign, and all the purchasers of the seals.

Wm. Crow sold his 130 acres on Hempling Pike to John Gaiser of Covington, Ky.

Joe Ruelso of Silver Grove, Campbell County sold his 24 acre farm to Charles White of Bellevue, Ky.

All sales were made by Rel C. Wayman.

Miss Mary Bell Alexander of High School Court has returned from a very enjoyable visit with Rev. J. H. Tally, Mrs. Tally, Jimmie and Miss Martha D. Tally of Covington, while there she attended the Youth Conference held in Salem Church, Newport, Ky. also attended services at Epworth Church Sunday morning.

Boone County Home Nursing Class

The Bullittsville Home Nursing Class work will be completed next Tuesday, February 2nd, when the examination is taken. The classes have all been held in the nice comfortable home of Mrs. Bessie Hill, and we all appreciate this kind hospitality very much. We have had everything we needed to work with. The attendance and interest has been good.

There is now time for the instructor to conduct a class in some other section of the county. A desire has been expressed by some persons for this to be at Florence. Any one interested will please communicate immediately with Mrs. Jane Utz, Mrs. George Morith, Mrs. R. C. Eastman, Mrs. Mabel G. Sayers or Miss Elizabeth Lowery.

The new text book, which has just been put out by the National Red Cross is interesting and up to date in every way, giving a good understanding of emotional, and mental health, as well as physical.

During the past eighteen months Home Nursing Classes have been taught in the following communities in Boone County: Burlington, Union, Hebron, Belleview, Constance, Hamilton, Verona, and a large class of colored people from all parts of the county.

Walton and Petersburg have not had this work, and it is hoped they will make a request for a class in the near future.

Mrs. Reamey Simpson spent several days recently with her son, Horace Simpson of Maysville.

BOY SCOUTS MEAN BUSINESS

"Toughen up, Buckle down, and Carry on to Victory", is the Boy Scout major task this year. Their 1,570,000 members are in the conflict to the hilt on the home front, doing everything boys of Scout age can do to help win the war speedily and a just peace permanently.

Urgent Need For Tin Cans

The need for tin is so urgent that we must save every tin can. Cincinnati has been named as one of the tin can collection centers which has been definitely set up. It is up to each community to arrange for a local collection center where cans can be stored until enough are gathered to make a truck or car load.

You will not be paid for cans as they bring just about enough to pay for hauling. All old cans which have not been properly prepared had better be sent to the dump as the plants can only use those which are properly prepared.

It is also up to each community to get all their waste fats and old silk and nylon hosiery into some collection center.

Any store where hosiery is sold will be glad to collect your old worn out-clean silk and nylon hosiery. Rayon is not wanted at present—but some cotton on the silk and nylon hosiery does not prevent it's being used.

Watch your local papers for dates of tin can collections.

In Walton, the Walton Lumber Company will receive tin cans until enough are gathered to send a load.

The Walton Advertiser will receive your clean, silk and nylon hosiery.

Morgan Lee Black

Morgan Lee Black, 79, passed away Monday, Feb. 1 at his home in Hamilton, Boone Co., after a short illness.

He was born August 9, 1863 in Gallatin Co. His wife, Elizabeth Smith Black preceeded him in death 40 years ago. Mr. Black was a member of the Beaver Baptist church.

Funeral services were conducted at the Chambers & Grubbs Funeral Home, Wednesday at 2:30 by Rev. Godby of Beaver, with burial in Beaver Baptist church cemetary. He is survived by two sons, Omer and Claude of Union R. D., four grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Chambers and Grubbs were in charge of funeral arrangements.

Pinhookers Grab Clinton Tobacco.

Fearing gas and tire rationing would interfere with getting their tobacco to the regular markets, growers in Clinton county turned their leaf over to pinhookers. Approximately half of the tobacco in the county was sold to pinhookers at around 30 cents a pound. Farm Agent Guy F. Boyd estimates farmers lost $35,000 as a result.

Get Odd-Jobs Done Now, Advises Agent.

That this is the time for farmers to get certain jobs out of the way has been pointed out to farmers by Agricultural Agent Walker J. Reynolds of Jackson county. The application of phosphate, the repair of farm tools, farm fencing, spreading barnyard manure, and preparing enough fuel to run through the crop year are some of the jobs that can best be done in this in-between season, said Mr. Reynolds. Then every effort in the growing season can be given to the production of food.

Word has been received from Mr. and Mrs. Rod Hughes and son Jack from 462 Poinsetta Ave., Clearwater Beach, Clearwater, Fla. that they are enjoying the fine fishing and sunshine. Mr. Hughe's health is greatly improved.

4-H Clubs Organize Victory Projects

Boone county 4-H Clubs this coming week will begin an intensive drive to enroll every rural boy and girl between eight and twenty years of age in a 4-H Victory Project according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent, and Mary Scott Moore, Home Demonstration Agent. The county has been given a goal of 845 members which according to available figures represent over 90% of all boys and girls of club age in the county.

The 4-H Victory project will stress production for victory and certificates will be awarded on accomplishments with less attention to record books. The projects will include garden, corn, seed hemp, castor beans, hogs, beef cattle, sheep, dairy, poultry, food clothing and labor service. The labor service project is a new project in which the boy or girl will be given credit for 150 hours of farm or home work with a record on what and where work was done.

The ability of 4-H club members to produce was shown the past year when 338 members in the county produced products valued in excess of $27,723.50.

The ministers' Associatin of the state and county have promised their support in calling to the attention of the people this coming week the importance of boys and girls work in the war effort.

Every boy and girl of club age is urged to join the local 4-H club in his or her community and to carry out a victory project in 1943. Enrollment cards can be secured at the county office for those who are unable to attend local meetings.

Thomas Named News Room Head

FRED THOMAS

Fred Thomas, the news writer behind several of the Middle West's outstanding radio newscasters, has been appointed editor of the news room of WCKY, Cincinnati, L. B. Wilson, president and general manager, announced.

Thomas is the creator and writer of the oldest late night news broadcast in the country, and wrote the newscasts for Paul Sullivan, Peter Grant, Jay Sims and Arthur Reilly during the past nine years when they broadcast from Cincinnati.

Through the new WCKY news room editor, the Middle West listening audience was brought stylized newscasts. His news summaries have served as a pattern throughout the nation and have been polled in the first five among local and network news broadcasts.

Thomas will edit local, national and world news as chief of the WCKY news room, which is being expanded under a new coverage policy, Mr. Wilson said. Rex Davis will continue as chief of the newscasting staff.

Community Leaders Plan War Program

Boone County farm leaders in a series of community meetings held the past week streamlined their 193 farm program plans to render greatest service to the war effort according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The planned programs involve less of demonstrations and record keeping and more of the carrying out of efficient practices know to increase production.

More efficient use of pasture and hay crops were listed first as the most important means of increasing both meat and milk production. Five pounds of good pasture have been found equal to one pound of corn, seven pounds of good pasture equal to 1 pound of soybean meal and 3½ to 4 pounds of good hay equal to 1 pound of cottonseed meal. Greater use of simple home grown rations will be used and have been found equally good to high priced complicated rations. Salt, ground agricultural limestone and steamed bone meal have been found sufficient for all supplement minerals requirements.

Hogs raised on clean ground, free from worms are finished at $8.00 to $10.00 per head or approximately $60.00 per litter greater profit.

Poultry practices include clean chicks from flocks free from B. W. D. and Leukemia or Range paralysis. The lantern and electric brooders will be used more widely, clean ground and abundant use of home grown feed with plans for remodeling with home equipment many of the poorly equiped houses will be used.

Sheep and lambs are to be fed for most efficient production and lambs marketed at heavier weight. Sheep will be treated for the necessary control of stomach worms and purebred rams will be used to improve the weight and quality of lambs.

The program involves greater use of cover crop pastures of wheat, barley, Balbo rye and vetch, improved water supply, home gardens, increased acreage of tomato and other commercial truck crops. A goal of 100 acres of hemp, caster beans grown by 4-H and Utopia club members, a 10% tobacco acreage increase and heavier yields per acre through use of manure, phosphate, cover crops and complete fertilizer.

Farmers in town communities have already appointed committees to work up cooperative exchange of labor to crush agricultural limestone and do other important farm work. Plans also have been made for greater use of custom power machinery to help relieve the labor shortages.

Plans Progressing In Book Campaign

Plans for The Victory Book Campaign in Boone County are progressing under the leadership of Miss Mary Bess Cropper. The list of precincts chairmen is not yet complete, but all persons will have the opportunity to contribute books they may have, which will be suitable for our men in Service.

Continue to select the "Books for Our Defenders", and you will be notified where and how to contribute them. The Drive ends March 5th, and it is hoped that Boone County may surpass its record of 1173 volumes given last year.

No magazines may be accepted in this Drive, its purpose being to collect books for our soldiers, sailors and marines as a supplement to the library services maintained by the Army and Navy; and to provide reading matter for the U. New United Nations Attacks Predicted As Leaders Determine Grand Strategy; Frenchmen Reach 'Military Accord'; 'Push Germans Out of Russia': Stalin

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL

"The President, Prime Minister and the combined staffs having completed their plans for the offensive campaigns of 1943, have now separated in order to put them into active and concerted execution." Official communique at Casablanca.

STRATEGY:
On a High Plane

When the initial surprise of one of the war's greatest stories — the Roosevelt - Churchill "unconditional surrender" meeting at Casablanca in French Morocco—had died away, the world waited expectantly for the carrying out of the principles of grand strategy laid down by Allied military leaders.

The Roosevelt-Churchill rendezvous was the definite tip-off of big things to come. The Allied leaders made it clear that their countries would dig to the bottom of their resources—if necessary—in order to carry out the extermination of Axis war power as quickly as possible.

From a gleaming white villa near Casablanca came the great news. But only after complete secrecy had officially ended. Correspondents regarded the meeting as one of the best kept secrets of all time. Virtually the entire war staffs of both nations participated in the dramatic 10-day discussions which ended with a press conference. But the presidential air voyage was shrouded in such secrecy that even some cabinet members did not know Mr. Roosevelt was out of town.

No one doubted but that further important developments would stem from the meeting. One of the most widespread predictions is that the North Africa-Mediterranean area will soon be organized into a separate theater of operations. Thus far the United States forces in that area have been part of the European theater. Separation of Africa and the Mediterranean Basin from the European theater might well be an important factor in the Allied offensive campaigns of the year.

Frenchmen Meet

One of the most important achievements of the conference was the bringing about of a meeting between Gen. Charles de Gaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud. Those leaders of the Fighting French and French Africa announced that they were in complete agreement regarding the liberation of their homeland. But it was regrettably clear that any merging of the two movements or any political alliance between them was far from being realized.

Offensives Will Tell

While the decisions made by military leaders are secret, observers indicated that concrete results would become apparent with new Allied offensives this spring.

The basic questions settled appeared to be these:

1. The first great effort must be to drive the Axis entirely from North Africa and free the Mediterranean supply line.

2. If he has not been chosen already, a supreme Allied commander in Europe will be named.

3. The anti-submarine warfare and air war against Europe will be stepped up.

4. Europe will be invaded in one of three ways: Across the Mediterranean, a frontal attack on the channel coast, or a conquest of Norway.

5. Aid to Russia and China will be stepped up as much as possible.

Of immediate interest to the United Nations is the naming of a supreme military commander. The name of Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the American army, is most frequently mentioned. Many observers believed he had already been decided upon to head the command.

RALLYING CRY:
For Russians

"I declare my appreciation to the command and to the gallant troops. Forward to the routing of the German invaders and their expulsion over the boundaries of our motherland." So declared Josef Stalin in an order of the day broadcast by the Moscow radio.

His words, urging the Russians to throw the Nazis out of their country, became the rallying cry of the Red army as it pushed forward in the big offensives aimed at Kursk, Kharkov and Rostov. After the fall of these strategic points there were still miles of hard battling ahead, but for the first time since the Nazis started their invasion of Russia there were definite signs that Stalin's plea was not idle thinking.

For everywhere along the far-flung front—from Leningrad to the Caucasus—the Reds added momentum to their drive. Russian military quarters estimated that 40 per cent of the Axis effectives had been knocked out by the Red winter offensive.

At the same time diplomatic circles revealed that United Nations air and sea supply lines to Russia were getting much better protection than a few months ago because losses on these routes have dropped sharply. One recent U. S. convoy was reported to have reached Russia without loss of a single ship. It was indicated that close U. S.-British - Russian co-operation was making this possible.

FARM PICTURE:
Incentive Plan

Under terms of the new "incentive" program as announced by Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard, U. S. producers stand to pick up an extra 100 million dollars in subsidy payments to be awarded for meeting or exceeding greatly expanded farm production goals.

Applicable to soybeans, grain sorghums, peanuts, sweet potatoes, flax and dried peas, the program would pay growers of these crops extra benefits for each acre on which they exceed 90 per cent of their goal—up to 110 per cent of that goal. These are products which are badly needed in the war effort to meet deficiencies in vegetable oils and proteins for animal feeding and human consumption.

Wickard stated further that added labor and materials will have to be available to farmers if they are to meet the goals of the program.

'Land Army'

As a means to this end Secretary Wickard and Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt released their plans for the mobilization of a volunteer land army of 3½ million farm workers. These would be gathered from ranks of women, the unemployed, clerks, and nonwar workers from cities and towns.

Aimed at relieving the expected farm manpower crisis, which experts predict will reach its peak in mid-summer, this land army would be gathered by the joint activities extension agents of the department of agriculture and by the field offices of the War Manpower commission.

More than 12 million farm workers will be needed at the height of the farm season, said Wickard. He pointed out that the total farm labor force in December, 1942, was 8,900,000.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

SAVING: Maintenance of the Office of Price Administration has cost each American only 90 cents during the past year, but has saved each citizen $180 during the same period, Chester K. Hayes, of the Chicago regional office of the OPA, said. One of his examples: Consumers are paying only seven cents a pound for sugar whereas they paid 35 cents during the last war.

TRANSPORTATION: Joseph B. Eastman, director of defense transportation, has called upon taxicab and bus companies to prepare plans immediately for mileage curtailment in case of emergency. He has requested operators of 10 or more vehicles to submit three plans: For elimination of 10, 20 and 30 per cent of all presently operated vehicle miles.

RATIONING:
Limit Set

With the beginning of rationing but a few weeks away the Office of Price Administration established a five-can-per-person limit as the amount of canned vegetables and fruits which householders might have on hand, without penalty, at the beginning of the point system. This was a drastic cut from the eight to ten cans which it had previously been expected would be allowed.

When the plan gets under way, persons who have more than the allowable limits will have coupons torn out of their canned goods ration book up to the point value of the goods held in excess. This will be based on one eight-point coupon for each can over five per household member.

Excluded from the count of five cans per person will be cans containing less than eight ounces.

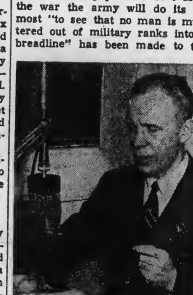
ARGUMENT:
Gets an Airing

For weeks Washington has reports of unannounced differences of opinion between Rubber Administrator William Jeffers and other government and military officials over priorities for the synthetic rubber program. Finally the dispute was brought into the open when Jeffers, in a Baltimore address, lashed out at army and navy expediters in war plants.

Congress decided to investigate his charges and Donald Nelson, war production chief, admitted the fact that a tift in government ranks had resulted over this issue. Most Washington sources knew that President Roosevelt would be required to step in as arbiter in the dispute.

The quarrel centers around steel priorities for synthetic rubber plants. Army and navy officials believe that these plants should be built only in direct relation to the military needs of steel for the production of such items as high-octane gasoline, airplanes, escort vessels and merchant ships. Jeffers contended that the production efforts could be worked out in conjunction with one another and without hampering progress in his synthetic rubber program.

LEND-LEASE:
Extension Sought



Congress is already considering the extension of the lend-lease act by another year—to June 30, 1944. This early action has been taken to insure an uninterrupted flow of war materials between the United States and our fighting Allies.

Though there are some verbal outbursts expected on the role of Harry Hopkins in the program, even his republican minority leaders in congress predict approval of an extension for the plan. Two years ago when it was first introduced the United States was not at war and there evolved one of the greatest legislative battles of history over passage of the measure putting the idea in motion.

Representative Sol Bloom introduced the new measure just one day after Edward R. Stettinius Jr., lend-lease administrator, reported to congress on how the eight billion dollar distribution of aid was made to our Allies under terms of the program from March 11, 1941, to the end of 1942.

DRAFT:
In Reverse

A heartening promise that after the war the army will do its utmost "to see that no man is mustered out of military ranks into a breadline" has been made to the nation by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson.

ROBERT P. PATTERSON
"Draft system in reverse."

Speaking in Chicago, Patterson advocated a post-war selective service system "in reverse" to function as a job placement agency. He explained that war department records catalog each man according to occupation and the demobilization plan would be to inform men about to leave the army of job opportunities in their own fields.

REVOLT:

That France's spark of independence has not been extinguished completely by the cold brutality of Nazism was proved when angry Frenchmen fortified their homes in the old port district of Marseilles, firing on German soldiers who ordered them to evacuate the district. German authorities had ordered the evacuation apparently as a defense measure against possible invasion from North Africa. The move was made after Nazi officials brought up tanks, field guns and infantry.

ARMY'S SIZE AND LABOR PROBLEMS

Manpower Boss Paul McNutt has been sessioning with the Truman committee regarding certain problems which touch the lives of everyone. They include size of the army, where we will get labor for farms, and whether the army shall be used in mines and industry.

Senators on the committee were impressed both with the gravity of the problems McNutt placed before them, and his general views regarding them.

McNutt revealed that Undersecretary of War Patterson had been talking to him about a total armed force of 11,000,000 to 15,000,000 men. This included not merely the army, but the navy, the coast guard and the marine corps—everything except the merchant marine.

However, McNutt pointed out that shipping facilities and submarine warfare seriously limited the number of troops which could be sent abroad and supplied. The figure he mentioned must remain a military secret, but he indicated that with Hitler's U-boats working overtime around North Africa, it was going to be difficult to maintain a very large army in North Africa.

In addition to North Africa, he pointed to the problem of supplying other war fronts in the Pacific, together with Russia and England.

As a result, McNutt doubted the feasibility of a world's record army now. He was all for giving the military and navy what they wanted so long as it could be transported to the combat zones, but he opposed a huge army which would eat its head off at home, especially in view of the fact that morale deteriorates when an army is kept idle.

At one time, McNutt said, a large army at home was considered necessary to protect the United States. But now military experts felt this danger greatly lessened, though a certain number of reserves must be trained.

Army and Industry.

McNutt was asked a great many questions about farm labor, especially by Senator Truman of Missouri. He replied that the army had been unwilling to let men go home on furlough to help with the crops because this hurt morale. However, he said the army was working on a plan to send army units into farm areas, in battalions or companies, and have them help with farm work on an organized basis under army command.

Though the matter was not discussed in detail, it seemed to be the unspoken feeling of the committee that too big an army going into industry and agriculture on an organized military basis might come close to developing a militarized system in the U. S. A. similar to that against which we were fighting in Europe.

Only one member of the committee, Senator Hatch of New Mexico, felt that the armed forces should be given free rein to go ahead and build up tremendous strength not subject to civilian check and supervision.

Other committee members expressed the view that it was only natural for any military leader to want the army to be the biggest in the world; so a civilian check-rein by the White House or congress was necessary to balance farm labor and industry against armed strength.

Finally it was decided that the most important problems to lick before increasing the army to world-beating proportions was the submarine and shipping.

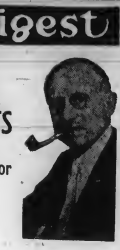
OFFICIALS SAVE GAS

Some few Washington bigwigs are careless about gasoline rationing, but they are exceptions. Most Washington officialdom is scrupulously careful.

The chief justice of the United States, for instance, is riding a truck. Chief Justice Stone has discarded his private car as a means of getting to and from the Supreme court, and instead hitch-hikes in the delivery truck which runs errands for the court. In addition, Stone is one of the walkingest members of the court.

The White House uses 11 cars now, against 15 a year ago, and these includs trucks for the White House mail, as well as cars for the President and staff. White House Secretary Marvin McIntyre now rides to work in a Ford instead of a Packard.

Vice President Henry Wallace last fall abandoned his 16-cylinder limousine in favor of a humble five passenger sedan. Every morning he walks the five miles from the Wardman Park hotel to the Capitol, and rides home in the evening.



Speaker Sam Rayburn uses his official car sparingly. He often walks from his apartment on DuPont Circle to Seventh street, where he takes a street car to the Capitol.

Senator Thomas of Oklahoma gets to work on foot or by bus. The other day a Capitol clerk gave him a lift from a bus stop on 16th street.

Milo Perkins, chief of the Board of Economic Warfare, shuns the use of his official car in driving from home to office. Instead, he has joined a car pool with six other BEW members who live in the same section.

'Hirohito Now' Strategy Gains New Proponents

New Line of Argument Developed in Favor Of Immediate Action Against Japanese Empire.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street. N-W, Washington, D. C.

Some weeks ago the story of the real purpose of the visit to America of Madame Chiang Kai-shek was told in these columns. Since then it has been confirmed by unofficial statements credited to "Chinese quarters"—that her mission was a show-down fight for an immediate offensive against Japan. In the interim two things have taken place. The Chinese government has let it be known unofficially that it realizes that America is so occupied elsewhere that a drive on Japan with China as a base cannot be expected at the moment. This would seem to be a retreat. It may be only a demarche, for suddenly, from several other quarters including Australian and Dutch with many American voices echoing in between, the demand for "Hirohito Now" action is being heard.

It may be team work.

The Chinese course so far is this: Chiang Kai-shek, diacouraged because of the futility of his pleas for additional supplies and help and America's failure to replace certain supposedly unsympathetic American representatives in Chungking, he ordered the Chinese military mission to the United States to come home. At the same time stories appeared to the effect that China felt that she was not being given a position of equality among the United Nations when it came to strategy and overall planning.

Chiang Kai-shek.

Polite Chinese

Then the head of the Chinese mission was called to the White House and it was explained that if he withdrew at this moment it would embarrass the United States—would he please take a nice long trip investigating American war-plants until the disturbance blew over. Perhaps he had the promise of more of the products of these plants. But that has not been made public. In any case, the Chinese, noted for their politeness acquiesced. A little later Britain and the United States signed treaties with China relinquishing their extraterritorial rights there.

But no sooner had this step been taken than suddenly voices, unofficial to be sure, but fairly strident, began asking if this "Hitler first" strategy was really sound? Couldn't Britain and the United States divide our efforts and still conquer?

By the time this reaches print there may be similar statements from official sources down under, or from the vitally concerned Dutch, but meanwhile, either self-generated or systemetically inspired, continual calls for action in the Far East now are being heard.

Of course, this is not new. There were similar demands which had to be silenced by official utterances from Roosevelt and Churchill nearly a year ago which, if they had not sufficed alone, seemed effective when bolstered by the launching of the American and British expeditionary forces in Africa.

Airplane's Role

By a change in the face of the war, I refer particularly to the role the airplane is to play. Aircraft is a vital factor in offensive and defensive warfare, but it has been demonstrated that airpower alone doesn't win and hold. This has been proved by the success of the convoys which have "gotten through" in the face of terrible onslaughts by the Luftwaffe. Two things have served to cut down the airplane's offensive power. First, there is the improvement of anti-aircraft guns and second, increased experience in anti-aircraft warfare. I talked to a British naval officer who had been aboard two convoys which fought their way to Murmansk and three that weathered the fierce attacks in the Mediterranean taking supplies to Malta. He emphasized the fact that green gun crews could not meet the onslaught of the dive bomber. Trained crews could.

I talked with an American naval officer who had been through Coral sea and the battles in the Solomons. He said that the anti-aircraft defense of our most modern warships was such that fighter plane defense was hardly necessary, that time and again it had been proved that this new equipment could raise a wall of fire which rendered air attack by the Japs futile.

Now, how does this affect the "Hirohito now" argument?

This way: We cannot leave Japan alone until we are quite ready and then expect to finish her off with an overwhelming airforce. As this is written, in spite of the constant and terrific bombing by Allied planes, the Japs have been able to complete and operate an airbase at Buna, the nearest Jap outpost to Guadalcanal. And further, the Allies, in spite of mass raids, devastating to ordinary buildings, have not been able to destroy the German submarine bases and submarine plants.

Navy and Land Troops

We must therefore depend on our navies and our land troops for the final destruction of Japan. And, it is argued, every day that Japan has to increase her fortifications, every day that she has to exploit the raw materials of her conquered territory, the harder it will be to beat her.

It is further argued that Germany cannot be absolutely beaten without terrific losses on our side, once she retreats within her own borders, a tight area, and can operate on a consolidated and shortened front.

She can be starved out. Therefore the argument is: Continue to move in through the rim of occupied countries until an iron blockade is formed about the Reich, but meanwhile begin an all-out offensive in the Far East; first, with the capture of enough of Burma to get an inlet to China, then, perhaps through the rest of Burma or Thailand move into China, re-arm, reinforce her, send in our own troops and attack Japan with China as a base.

It that is not done now Japan may be able to isolate China, may be able with silver bullets to win some of her provinces to puppet independence and completely paralyze that valuable ally and block off entrance through her territory, so it is argued by the "Hirohito now" advocates.

War-Weary Europe

The argument presented by the same proponents against waiting until we have finished "Hitler first" is two-fold: When Germany finally falls it will leave Europe and its people, especially its fighting manpower, so war-weary that it will be hard to interest them in a war half way around the world. We may get less help than we need for the job.

Second, the process of reaching into Japan island by island, is a slow process as we have found at Guadalcanal and on New Guinea. The northern half of New Guinea, a long-held Japanese stronghold, will be harder to conquer than the part now won back by MacArthur's men. We know that the Japs will not surrender. We know that in some places, like the Netherlands Indies, where a large part of the population is at best indifferent, the Japs can live off the land.

It would mean fighting every inch of the way against "no surrender" troops while the main Japanese armies were moving into China, fortifying the gateways to the continent.

Those are some of the arguments we may expect to hear frequently these days. Madame Chiang Kai-shek, when she recovers, may find it easier to be insistent upon aid than her husband's unsuccessful military men in Washington were.

Meanwhile the going in Tunisia is tough and the military men are inclined to say, "one field, well tilled" is enough of a job for them at present.

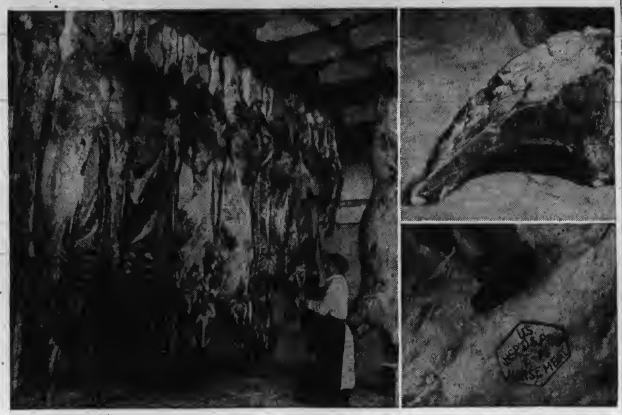
SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Between 25 and 33 per cent of the road service calls answered by AAA clubs are in response to tire trouble—flats. Battery problems across the country ranked second number of road calls for help.

American synthetic rubber will fill 90 per cent of the country's rubber needs, within two years of Pearl Harbor, according to a rubber chemist. This will be a speedy transition from natural rubber. Germany which started synthetic rubber development prior to 1914 can now only take care of 75 per cent of its rubber needs with synthetic.



Rubber tired trucks have been hauling about 12 per cent as many ton-miles as the railroads, OPT officials say.

Until gasoline rationing was applied as a brake, the car owners of the country were wearing off 750,000 pounds of tread rubber from their tires every day, a government statistician asserts.

TO YOUR Good Health

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

RECRUIT MUST TELL ALL

When a recruit is being examined for the army, he should not hesitate to tell the examining physician his whole medical history. Unfortunately, unless he has had some definite ailment or injury, he may fail to mention his "attacks of indigestion" which he has blamed on eating the wrong foods or eating when tired or excited. He may feel that if he makes mention of these trifling attacks, the examining physician may get the idea that he is malingering, "swinging the lead." The result is that within a few weeks or even months of army life, he is brought before a medical board and sent to hospital for observation and treatment.

By failing to tell of his attacks of indigestion or bringing a certified statement of these attacks from his physician to the army medical examiner, he may put the country to considerable expense and himself to much inconvenience.

I am writing this because a report from Dr. J. M. Sgrellis, in the British Lancet states that of 247 cases of indigestion reported in one division 131 had definite organic disease of the stomach and first part of small intestine (duodenum) and were discharged from the service as permanantly unfit. The remaining 116, after investigation and a short course of treatment, were returned to duty. Dr. Smellie states that when it has been definitely learned that a soldier has ulcer he should be discharged from the army "and immediately returned to civilian life where rest, diet and tranquility of mind are possible. Before enlistment these individuals were leading useful lives in the service of their country and should be returned to such service. In the army they remain a burden to themselves and to others."

Most physicians and physicians who have had much to do with "indigestion" cases in civil and army hospitals will agree with Dr. Smellis, that a chronic indigestion patient is a real liability.

The thought, then, is that family physicians and patients themselves should have no false sense of duty, but should state by certificate and in person if there is a history of acute attacks or chronic symptoms of indigestion present.

Keeping Abdominal Muscles Developed

As youngsters when we wanted to show one another how strong we were we tightened the upper arm muscle and the whole strength of the body was supposed to be in proportion to the size of our upper arm muscle.

I went with an older brother to sea Sandow, the strong man, and my brother pointed out the ridges of muscles across the front of his abdomen.

"That's what shows the strength of a man," my brother told me. "If you see those ridges stand out, it shows the man is strong everywhere. Why, Sandow's abdominal muscles are so hard he uses them for a washboard!"

I believed this at the time and in a sense have always believed it, because the strength of the abdominal muscles has so much to do with the general health of the body, the proper working of the heart, lungs, stomach, liver, intestines. Well developed abdominal muscles give the body the proper posture—abdomen is drawn in, chest stands out, head is arect—thus anabling all the organs in chest and abdomen to have room to work.

A report from a European physician points out that actual disease of the organs in the abdomen can be caused or aggravated when the organs fall downward due to lack of support by the abdominal muscles. This falling down of the abdominal muscles is called ptosis. By examining 100 bodies in which these organs were down low, he found that the distance tha organs had dropped was in proportion to the weakness or waight of abdominal muscles.

Now it is not difficult to keep the abdominal muscles daveloped sufficiently to hold organs in place. It requires just a little thought and a little exercise daily. At all times we should try to stand and sit erect; stand as tall as we can. The exercise is "trying" to touch the toes, keeping knees straight. The slightest bend of tha knees puts the work on the legs.

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JESUS AFFIRMS HIS DEITY

LESSON TEXT—John 8:12, 25-36, 56-59. GOLDEN TEXT—He that hath seen me hath seen the Father.—John 14:9.

"Tha Ligbt of the World Is Jasus!" Who does not ramember with what delight we as children sang, "Coma to the light, 'tis shining for thee . . . The light of tha world is Jesus."

How precious was tha truth that thus flooded our souls. Jesus is the ligbt. Just as tha sunlight sheds its glory on an awakening world at dawn, so He sheds abroad the light of God in the hearts of men. As this portion of God's Holy Word is studied and taught, may the light break forth on many a soul caught in the bewilderment of this dark world.

But that is only one of the graat thoughts around which our lesson centers. As Jasus here reveals Himself as divine, we consider four simpla words, each fraught with rich meaning.

I. Light (v. 12).

The text says: "Then spaka Jesus." When? Just after He had silenced the hypocritical accusers of a woman taken in sin, and had spoken the word of peace to her troubled soul. She was to "go and sin no more" because she had mat Him who is the light of the world. They that follow Him "shall not walk in darkness"; they are the children of light, they have the very light of life shining in their hearts and lives.

Not only does Jesus light the believer's heart, but this light shines into all the dark corners of this wicked world, exposing sin and hypocrisy, and showing tha way back to God.

II. Salvation (vv. 25-30).

"Who art thou?" That is the question every man must ask and answer as he considers Jesus. Evan neglect is an answer—a rejection.

The answer of Christ in these verses goes to the very baart of the matter, for He takes tha people right to the cross of Calvary. Whan they had crucified Him, they would know. Did not the centurion say: "Truly this was the Son of God" (Matt. 27:54)?

It is trua today that no man knows Christ until he knows Him as the crucified Saviour. Teacher, Example, Guide—all these He is—but they are not enough, for we sinners naed a Saviour. May many today follow the example of vaise 30.

III. Freedom (vv. 31-36).

Free! Four latters, but what a dapth of meaning! Chains have fallen off, prison doors are opan. Tha one who was bound is free.

But hera wa are concernad with an aven mora important libarty, tha freedom of tha soul. Many thera ara who boast of their independenca but who are naught but slavas. Jasus said: "Whosoever commiteth sin is the servant of sin" (v. 34), not its master.

How shall thay be freed? Note three things in thesa verses:

(1) A condition, "If ye continua in my word." This maans not only a profession of faith, but a daily appropriation and realization of His truth in life.

(2) A promisa, "Ya shall know the truth." The philosophies of men profess to be a seeking aftar truth, but bow few thera are who look to the ona place where it can be found—in Jesus Christ.

(3) A result, "The truth shall make you frea." Truth always sats free. Men are enslaved becausa, as in some foreign lands, they have not had the opportunity to learn the truth or becausa they have rajected it.

Men profess to seek truth in thair rasearch and in the process of education, but without Christ they cannot have real truth. Educational systems which rule Him out are deficient and lead to bondage rather than freedom.

IV. Eternity (vv. 56-59).

Taking up thair statement that they were Abraham's children (see vv. 33, 37), Jesus enters into the sharpest controversy with the unbelieving Jews of His entire aarthly ministry. They were claiming kinship with a great man of faith who in his day had looked forward to the coming of Christ (v. 56). Now He was bera, and instead of receiving Him as their Messiah they were ready to kill Him.

Not only did they claim Abraham as fathar, but also God. Jesus told them that in their sin and unbelief they were of their "father the devil." It is possible, then, to be very religious, to follow the traditions of one's fathers, and yet to be children of the devil.

All this led up to thair sharp rebuke in verse 57, which denied to Christ anything but an earthly existence and which led Him to the statement of His aternity. He identified Himself definitely and clearly with the Eternal One—the great I AM of Exodus 3:14.

Christ is God, and is therefore "infinite, eternal, and unchangeable in His being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness and truth" (Westminster Catechism).

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

Blouse and Jumper.

HERE'S a juvenile jumper outfit which has extra prettiness—in the soft, curving lines of the jumper and in the round Peter Pan collar and short puffed sleeves of the blouse. Any little girl will look "nice as pie" in it—yet it is very practical and can be made at next to nothing cost.

She—Whew, I wonder how many there are on a five.

To Good Use

"Your daughter has a great many admirers," said Mrs. Wilkins.

"Oh, yes," raplied Mrs. Bilkins, "she puts nearly all her window curtains on the rods with her old engagement rings."

Could It Be?

Mrs. Banks—Well, I admit that I was outspoken at the Civilian Defense meeting today.

Mr. Banks—I don't believe it. Who outspoke you?

Up and Doing It!

"That pretty girl seems to be having a good time!"

"H'm, yes—her fiance, a young medical officer in the army, is coming home to marry her next month."

"Well, she certainly seems to have solved the problem of what to do till the doctor comes!"

Something went wrong in the kitchen and the pie crust was as hard as a brick. The mess wag sent it back with a message: "Give us the tools and we'll finish the job!"

Plenty Cause

"What's the matter?"

"Oh, my husband is so absentminded. After breakfast he left a tip on the table, and when I handed him his hat he gave me another tip."

"Well, that's nothing to worry about. Just force of habit."

"That's what worries me. He kissed me when I gave him his overcoat."

Stocked Cellars Eliminate Worry.

Rationing of canned foods is not worring homemakers in Kentucky who have well stocked storage cellars. For example, at meetings of homemakers' clubs in Boone county, where Mrs. Mary Scott Moore is home agent, memus using home-grown canned and stored foods were prepared. One such menu consisted of hot tomato juice served with whole wheat sticks, chicken pie made with a combination of chicken and canned vegetables topped with a whole wheat crust, raw carrot curls and turnip wheels for finger salads, and a dessert of baked spiced pears and cookies made with syrup instead of sugar.

Makeshift Substitutes FOR FUSES ARE Dangerous

Penny Used as Fuse Is Cause of Blaze

A penny, used to bridge a burned-out fuse, Monday was held responsible for the early morning fire that drove the [redacted] family out into the street in night clothing and caused $1,000 damage to their five-room frame residence at [redacted] West Daggett. Roof of the house at [redacted] West Daggett caught fire as a brisk breeze carried burning embers to it, and firemen estimated damage there at $250.

Assistant Fire Marshal Owens announced the cause of the fire, which was reported at 6:33 a. m.

A Blown Fuse Should Be Replaced Only With a New Fuse of Correct Size

The fuses on your electric circuits protect you from the hazards of fire. When a "short" or overload causes more electricity to flow through a circuit than it can carry safely, a right-size fuse will burn-out or "blow," preventing the wiring from overheating and protecting electrical equipment from further damage.

For maximum protection, blown fuses should be replaced only with new fuses of correct size. (15 amperes is right for most household branch circuits.) Never put a penny behind a fuse or use other makeshifts and never use a fuse of too large an amperage. To do so is to invite danger and costly damage.

It's a good idea to keep extra fuses of right size on hand and to learn how to use them, if you do not already know how.* Then you can restore service quickly without waiting for a serviceman. And you'll be helping to save precious rubber by eliminating a trip by a service truck.

WHAT MAKES FUSES BLOW

Blown fuses are usually caused by damaged or loosely-connected cords, defective appliances or circuits overloaded with too many appliances and lights. Before replacing a blown fuse, disconnect cord or appliance suspected of causing the trouble. Have it repaired before using it again.

HOW TO TELL A BLOWN FUSE

Notice thin metal strip under glass. If this strip or link has melted and shows a gap, or if glass is scorched and you cannot see link, fuse has blown and should be replaced with a new fuse of correct size. (If your fuses differ from type shown, ask for specific instructions.)

Farmers Prepare to Produce All the Food Needed.

Better management and the use of more machinery will enable Kentucky farmers to make all the increases in production wanted this year, says Dr. Roy E. Proctor of the State College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Farmers are making careful plans, says Dr. Proctor. They are planning their crops and their livestock production so as to make the best use of feeds and labor.

Dr. Proctor stresses better use of machinery. In many neighborhods there is a sufficient supply of equipment, if it is fully used, he thinks. It may be necessary for many farmers to rent machinery, or hire its owners to use it to seed, cultivate or harvest crops. In other cases, equipment will be exchanged, or labor traded for machinery.

Many farmers will use more horses and mules this season, in order to use larger machinery. Practical short-cuts will be developed and labor-saving devices used.

Where more livestock can be handled, it is suggested that it may be found on near-by farms, where neighbors have more stock than they can care for.

Farmers are doing much solid thinking and planning this winter, Dr. Proctor has found. They want to produce all they possibley can to help win the war, and to make money with which to buy bonds, pay debts and build up reserves for a rainy day.

Inflation prices in Italy have brought the price of good farm land to around $2,000 an acre, and poorer land is proportionately expensive.

Of the imported foreign laborers in Germany, 25 per cent are women, and they are forced to work from 13 to 15 hours a day, many in unhealthful occupations.

Customs officials on the Texas-Mexico border remove coffee stamps from rationing books of Americans who seek to import coffee from Mexico.

In Polish ghettos, established by Nazis, as many as 1,000 people are forced to live in one house and single rooms hold up to 13 persons.

A large portion of the warm-water panfish produced in Federal fish hatcheries goes to stock farm ponds to provide local fish food.

The dies used by the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co. of Chicago in building the nation's first streamlined trains are being scrapped for metal.

ON THE HOME FRONT
—with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THIS colorful afghan was made by clever fingers from the best parts of old woolen garments put together with odds and ends of bright yarn. Even trousers and fitted jackets yielded strips of the size required.

By holding the goods up to the light it is easy to find the unworn parts. These are cut out roughly:

washed with mild soap in lukewarm water; rinsed with a little soap in warm water; and pressed while damp. The pieces are then cut accurately according to the measurements given here. Single crochet stitch is used around all pieces, and the sketch shows how the pieces are sewn together.

THE STORY SO FAR: Ann Lee and Cole Cody, beneficiaries under two wills made by Early Bill Cole of the King Cole Ranch, arrived simultaneously at the Ranch to be greeted by Rance Waldron. Ranee, posing as Old Bill's nephew and only relative, made it evident they were not welcome at the Ranch. Each was determined to stay, however. Later, during an argument, Ann accidentally shot Cole. It was then they discovered Old Early Bill had made two identical wills, one leaving all his money and the King Cole Ranch to Ann; and the other giving the same money and property to Cole. However, before his death Old Bill had sent them each a key to a box.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER X

Two old porch-sitters from Bald Eagle came skallyhooting out to the King Cole Ranch. They shared what they agreed to call a hunch. Likewise, both were scorching with curiosity. Having talked spaciously of the two newcomers, a pretty girl by name of Ann Lee and of a lean, long individual name of Cole Cody who had brought the stage in, having discussed these two at full length —Queerly, they didn't even mention Aunt Jenifer to each other, though both had taken full cognizance of her—they were impelled to travel out to the ranch at an unearthly hour, to take stock of conditions there.

They arrived early, just in time to see four people gathered about a table with an old black iron box centering their attention.

"Aha!" the two old porch-sitters said simultaneously within themselves, and came barging in.

Ann emitted a small, shrill squeal of delight.

"Doctor Joe! Oh, Doctor Joe, I'm so glad and grateful you came! I'm amongst enemies, cruel, horrid men that would steal a girl's last penny. You come watch, Doctor Joe!"

And Cole Cody, seeing the Judge, said a warm,

"Howdy, Judge. Come guard my interests, won't you? They're not only shooting me up, they're trying to steal my mess of pottage. Keep the eye peeled, will you Judge? And I'll buy the drinks."

They got the box open. And, all credit to little Ann Lee and some small credit to Cole Cody, they didn't grab. Their eyes, though, did grab.

They saw, first of all, two long, sealed envelopes.

"Well, Mr. Cody," said Ann, and looked and sounded very brave, "the top envelope is addressed to William Cole Cody. If you care to lift it out, I'll take mine!"

Underneath was the one addressed to her. She snatched it, ran her excited eyes over it, flaunted it in his face. Then she tore it open as fast as any envelope was ever opened in all the world, from the time of Rameses, if they had envelopes then, to this current Anno Domino year. Her eyes, racing faster than light travels, that rapid traveler, were shining. A glance told her the tale, the fairy tale, the story that she knew would be there! "To Ann Lee I give and bequeath—all my belongings — the properties known as the King Cole Ranch—" and so forth—

"Come, hurry, Doctor Joe!" she cried. "You were right! Look!"

Cole Cody nailed the Judge with his eye.

"Hey, Judge!" he called cheerily. "Step over, will you? We maybe are going to need arbitration, and I pick you for my sponsor! Ten per cent of the net proceeds, if any, goes to you. How about it? Let's both ride lucky!"

"What in the world is this?" exclaimed Ann Lee. She waved a sheet of paper; there was a bank note pinned to it. "Listen! It says: 'Little Ann Lee, I sort of kind of liked you. You were mighty sweet to me, little Ann; you were like a flower and I bet you make yourself a lot of trouble though, but all live gals do such! Do me a favor, will you? I made me a bet with a crazy galoot name of Josephus Daniel Dodge, generally known far and wide, mostly in low dives and disgraceful places, as Doc Joe. I made the old fool a bet, five bundred dollars that me, I'd outlive him. And here I am as good as dead already! Wouldn't that make you mad, lit—' "

She began to cry, dabbing furiously at her eyes. But she jerked her head up and let the tears run as they darn well pleased, and kept right straight on reading:

"Wouldn't that make you mad, little Ann Lee? Well, it makes me mad, but I lose and I pay. Here's five hundred dollars. Suppose you hand it over to Doc Joe and tell him that anyhow I'll get me my laugh, sitting up on a big white cloud with nice pink trimmings and playing 'Home Sweet Home' on my harp, while I peek down pretty soon and spy on him sizzling down in hell! Thanks, little Ann—and you keep your hair on, and maybe you'll ride lucky! Yours, Bill Cole."

"I'm damned," said Cole Cody softly.

He held up a similar sheet of paper, bank note attached. He read,

"Hi, Bill Cole Cody! Sorry I missed you; couldn't wait, having other places to go. Now look here, kid, I sort of liked you; anyhow we had fun together. So you remember old times and do me a kindness, same as I'd do you at a pinch. I made a bet with a dirty dog, name of Arthur Henry Pope, commonly known in and about Bald Eagle as the Judge, five hundred bucks that I'd outlive him. I just simply got tired waiting for the old fool to die, so, dammit, kid, I lose and here's the five hundred, and you hand it to the Judge for me, and tell him it was fun dying, just that that way I could make sure him and me would never, never-no-more meet up again—for he's hell-bound along of Doc Joe, and me I'm always for the High Places! Yeee! On handing it to him look out be don't claw your hand off, the money-grabbing old coyote. And tell him I hope him and Doc Joe, barging into town to get drunk together, both chokes to death. Luck, kid. Yours, Bill Cole."

And Bill Cole Cody, no sissy like Ann Lee, didn't weep. He blew his nose and glared stormily.

"I—I don't understand," gasped Ann. "I never in all my life once even laid eyes on Mr.—Mr. Early Bill!"

"Me, too," said Cole Cody. "He says here—It's a funny thing. I never knew Bill Cole, never saw him!"

The Judge and Doc Joe looked at each other.

"Don't you kids be fooling yourselves," Doc Joe said crustily. "I don't mean any disrespect to the dead—or do I? Come to think about it, I never could see why a dead dog was any nicer than a live one. Well, be that as it may, and no disrespect meant, old Early Bill Cole was a jackass if ever there was one, a no'count rambling wreck of wickedness and sin; the same dirty dog he names this here gent, Mr. Arthur Henry Pope. Just the same he wasn't no liar. If he says to Miss Ann she was sweet to him, then she was sweet to him, and somewhere he knowed her. If he says to this young Cody that they had fun together, well they did. Am I right, Judge?"

"I'm just hoping that some day I'll find out who did that for old Bill."

"Right as rain, Doc," said the Judge. "Hell taking old Early Bill to the contrary notwithstanding, you're right."

"What's all this about wills?" said Rance Waldron, as sharp as a new tack.

"You shut up!" cried Ann Lee. "You and your wills! We're talking about—" She spun on her heel like a small whirlwind. "Doc Joe! Here's your five hundred dollars! Golly! Here—here's your five hundred dollars, Doc Joe!"

"Thanking you kindly, Miss," said Doc Joe, and took his rightful winnings.

"Well," said Cole Cody, "here's yours, Judge. Like Early Bill says, I'm hoping you and Doc Joe choke to death."

The Judge cleared his throat, accepted the bank note, cleared his throat again. Beyond that, being both lawyer and banker, he would not go.

"But, like I was saying," Cole Cody went on, "having done with wishing, here is the tall, straight and shining fact of the matter. I've got in my hand a legal-looking paper. It calls itself a will, last will and testament. It gives and bequeaths and etceteras, all his belongings and properties and accessories—with some to wits and some more etceteras — the King Cole Ranch thrown in—to a certain gent name of William Cole Cody, which is me! And could you tell me, Judge, without straining yourself—whose time is it right now to laugh? To laugh, my good friend and counsellor, like a whole pack of hyenas? Mine? You're sure shouting! Haw!"

Rance Waldron was as interested as any. More interested than the others, from the look of him. He said, speaking smoothly,

"I might help you folks out, maybe. My uncle—Mr. William Cole, you know—was pretty old. What's the word for it? Senile? It's my thought that he was dying and was out of his head—what you call non compos mentis—in plain English he was as crazy as a bed-bug when he wrote those wall-eyed wills. He told me—Hell's bells, he told me fifty times that all he had was going to be mine! Now here's Miss Lee and here's Mr. Cody, both of them saying they've got a will, giving them the whole shooting works! That sounds kind of funny, don't it? It might pay to see how these wills were dated, and how they were witnessed and all that. Whether, maybe, they were made while the old man was dying, and was so clean off his nut that both wills are worth about—"

He did a nice job of snapping his fingers.

Cole Cody laughed.

Ann Lee smiled; it was a tight little, slight little, bright little smile that spelled Triumph.

When no one else seemed to have anything to say, Aunt Jenifer spoke up brightly.

"Have all you gentlemen had breakfast?" she asked. "Wills and things, you know, can wait longer than appetites."

Before departing with Doc Joe, ths Judge had cleared his throat a couple of times and had gone so far as to say,

"Speaking of evictions, seems to me as though Cal Roundtree might just possibly be within his rights to throw out the whole kit and caboodle of you. But as to any of the rest of you evicting anyone else —well, I reckon it would have to be like the Irishman playing the fiddle, by main strength and awkwardness. Better sit in at a poker game and play for it." And in baste the Judge caught up with Doc Joe, and a cloud of dust showed the way the two had taken—each with an honestly earned five hundred dollars in his jeans.

Old Early Bill's house was big enough to accommodate a score of people; consequently its present inhabitants, little Ann Lee and Aunt Jenifer, Cole Cody and Rance Waldron could all dwell under the one roof without running into each other all the time.

Thus for a time the big house was divided against itself, and all was outwardly peaceful in atmosphere reeking with watchfulness and suspicion. Rance Waldron was locked up in his own quarters, ostensibly concerning himself with various papers and accounts he had found here. Ann devoted hours to investigating the house.

As for young Cole Cody, he left the house as soon as he had stowed his few belongings in his room, and went down to the outbuildings along the creek, by the barn, seeking Cal Roundtree.

He was sitting on a log that had been hauled up to the woodpile, smoking contemplatively, with his wreck of a black Stetson pulled down over his eyes. His head came up with a snap as he heard footsteps.

"Mind if I perch alongside you?" demanded Cody. "I've just had a long walk and am sort of legweary."

"Squat," said Cal Roundtree. Cody lowered himself to the log and reached for his own papers and muslin bag of fine-flaked tobacco, Roundtree eyeing him narrowly all the while. "What's on your mind, Cody?" he asked bluntly.

"Plenty," Cole Cody told him, and licked his cigarette and lighted it. "I think I own this outfit now; I'm not sure of anything. That girl up at the house—"

"She's the prettiest specimen of the girl species I ever clapped eyes on, and in my time I've seen some of 'em cute enough to take prizes. And she's got as much spunk as anybody needs, with maybe a mite extra thrown in."

"She's not bad looking, that's a fact," agreed Cody without enthusiasm. "As for spunk, she's got as much temper as you'd find in two wild cats with their tails tied together. What I was going to say, here's a funny mix-up: I think I own the place and she thinks she owns it. On top of all that, there's that Rance Waldron fellow who puts in his claim."

"You see," Cole Cody continued, "I never knew Early Bill Cole. Or if I did know him, as Doc Joe and the Judge seem to be sure of, then I didn't know I knew him. Maybe that's hard to get, but that's the only way I can put it."

"He was a queer old rooster," said Cal Roundtree. "I guess I knew him about as well as anybody ever did; I worked for him for sixteen years, and out on the range we slept together more than once, and we et together and got mad at one another. He was, to my notion, the finest man that ever walked in a pair of boots or forked a horse or got drunk or played cards or gave his money with both hands to folks that was in want, and he didn't ask any questions about their pedigree. Yep, I knew old Early Bill as well as anybody on earth."

"Somebody shot him?"

"Yes. I'm just hoping with all my hope-machinery that some day I'll find out who did that for old Bill."

"Tell me about it; all that you know."

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Give Cupid a Break . . . Bake Him a Cake
(See Recipes Below)

Valentine Notes

Along about this time, even though it isn't spring, there's a note of precious sentiment that gets into the atmosphere. Perhaps it's those bits of bright red and lacy paper the children have been pasting into heart shapes, the rhymes they've been making. Yes! Valentines!

Cupid has a way of darting into this season and winning us over—even if only with a cardboard arrow springing out of a froth of red and white paper cutouts of hearts. Why not plan to give yourself up to a party with a Valentine theme?

Let's make it simple but festive for even simple gayety will do loads for your morale. Except for the cake in today's column which is a wee bit party-ish, the rest of ingredients in the party are streamlined to save your time.

Our color scheme for the holiday runs into red-and-white, so our main dish is going to be a variation of the old favorite chicken and cranberries.

Jellied Chicken and Cranberry Loaf.
(Serves 6)

1 tablespoon gelatin
2 cups well seasoned chicken broth
6 small thin slices chicken
2 cups minced chicken
Cranberry mixture

Soften gelatin in a little broth, add remaining broth and heat until gelatin is dissolved. Pour a little into the bottom of an oiled 1-quart loaf pan. Divide remaining gelatin between 1 cup dark and 1 cup light meat of chicken. Add alternating layers of chicken and cranberry, chilling each layer thoroughly until set before adding the next.

Cranberry Mixture.
(For Chicken Loaf)
1 pint cranberry juice
1½ tablespoons gelatin
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of cayenne
Juice of ½ lemon
1 cup minced celery

Soften gelatin in a little cranberry sauce; dissolve over hot water. Add remaining juice and seasonings. Cool and add celery.

Since the main dish is a combination salad and main dish—if served with a lettuce or watercress garnish and mayonnaise if you want it, balance the menu with some attractive assorted sandwiches. Sandwiches should be light snacks for this type of party, so we'll fall back on the old standby, cream cheese.

Cream Cheese Rolls.

Mix 1 package of softened cream cheese with 1 tablespoon of mayonnaise and a dash of worcestershire sauce. Blend thoroughly. Take thinly sliced white bread, trim off crusts, and spread with cream cheese mixture. Roll, cut in half and brush with melted butter. Toast in broiler until evenly browned.

Other good cream cheese combinations, using heart or diamond-shaped bread slices, include cream cheese and apple butter or cream cheese and currant jelly or raspberry jam.

Hot muffins that pull no nutritional punches would be good foil for the cool, smooth jellied chicken and cranberry loaf. Try these:

Graham Gems.
½ cup flour
1 cup graham flour
¼ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 egg, well beaten
¾ cup milk

Sift the flour. Sift again with salt and baking powder. Add egg and milk and beat only until mixed with dry ingredients. Bake in small, buttered muffin tins in a hot (400-degree) oven for 20 minutes.

A delicious mouth-watering cake to top off the party is just the thing you need to make it a success:

Cupid's Cake.
1¼ cups egg whites (about 10)
1¼ cups sifted sugar
⅞ cup sifted cake flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Measure egg whites and place in a bowl. Sift and measure sugar and add flour. Add half of sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt to flour. Sift 5 or 6 times. Beat egg whites until frothy, add cream of tartar, beat until egg whites are slightly stiff but still glossy. Fold in sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time. Fold in sifted flour a little at a time. Fold in vanilla and pour into a hot pan that has been set in a hot oven, 425 degrees, while cake is being mixed. Bake in a hot oven 20 to 23 minutes or until cake springs back when touched. Invert pan to cool cake.

Frozen Strawberry Filling.
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 package fresh-frozen strawberries
1 cup whipping cream

Add boiling water to gelatin, stir until dissolved. Break strawberries into separate pieces, add to gelatin and stir carefully. The cold strawberries will cool the gelatin and at the same time thaw the syrup around the berries. If strawberries are thawed, cool gelatin before adding strawberry mixture. Whip cream and fold in ½ cup of whipped cream into strawberry mixture.

With a sharp knife cut out center of cake with a sawing motion, leaving a 1-inch shell around top of cake. Lift out center of cake and tear off pieces of center to fill hole at bottom of cake left by tube. Use this extra cake and put into filling or frost small pieces and roll in coconut. Pour strawberry filling into cake. Frost outside of cake with remaining cream. Part of this frosting may be used through a cake decorator tube to add valentines to sides and swirls to top of cake as shown in picture above. Put cake in refrigerator for ½ hour or long enough to set filling. Serves 10.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: It looks very much as though you will cook what you can find with more foods announced as to become rationed. Canned and frozen foods along with meats will be less easily available.

Fresh fruits and vegetables are to be unrationed so keep your budgetwise and marketwise eyes cocked for bargains. Turnips, carrots, beets, citrus fruits and apples will appeal to wise menu makers.

Canned soups which you obtain and pay more for now are usually more concentrated and you can get more food value from them. You'll like using dehydrated soups, too, the chicken-noodle combinations being winners.

Plan to pack whole wheat flours and dehydrated pancake mixes into your shopping bags. The former will help you get vitamin B in the diet, while the latter is a fine time-saver.

SPEAKING THE TRUTH

New Maid—How do I say it, ma'am, "Dinner is ready," or "Dinner is served"?

Mrs.—If it's like yesterday's, just say "Dinner is burnt!"

Knows His Mother!

Teacher—How much would your mother pay for two quarts of berries at 30 cents a quart?

Billy—About 50 cents!

Teacher — I'm afraid you don't know your arithmetic!

Billy—You don't know my mother when it comes to beating down the grocer!

Rationed Hoarding

Garage Man—Check your oil?

Driver—No thanks, I'm taking it with me!

New Army Recipe

Sergeant—Why, chef, you look as if you've been through an explosion!

Camp Cook—I have. I just tried this new recipe.

Sergeant—I don't get it. It just says add baking powder and beat.

Camp Cook—Oh, that's what it is! I thought it said add blasting powder and beat!

What No Bull?

City Boy—Look at that big animal snorting and bellowing at us!

Dad—That must be one of those "fresh cows" the farmer was telling us about!

Poor Prospect

Father—So your new boy friend is one of the big guns in industry?

Daughter—Sure, he's been fired seven times that I know of!

Scotch Joke No. 999

Did you hear about the Scotchman who took his girl for a ride in a taxi? She was so beautiful he could hardly keep his eye on the meter.

Remember This Slogan

Matches have heads but no brains. You have both. Be sure and use them.

FREE JEWELRY

Willy—Girls ought to ride on the street cars as much as possible.

Tilly—Why?

Willy—Because the conductors give you a ring with every fare.

Sporting Patient

Doctor—Do you want me to look you over?

Patient—For what?

Doctor—For five dollars.

Patient—Doc, if you find five dollars on me, I'll split with you.

Expert Navigator

Passenger—How do you remember the way back to the field when you're so high in the clouds?

Pilot—That's easy. I just remember the shape of the clouds!

("I feel sorry," Judge Landis remarked with a wink, "for you baseball writers who won't get to Florida or California this spring.")

Judge, you can send us to the equator,
Mexico City or Baffin Bay.
North Pole or South Pole's our alma mater,
Where we can loaf as the others play.
We can keep cool as the rookies scramble
In the hot sun where the pelicans dream—
We can keep warm as the ice bergs ramble—
We are not trying to make some team.

The Hall of Fame

Baseball's Hall of Fame has come to a rather abrupt pause lately. But as long as this institution looks back to the past, minus any use of oil or rubber, apart from any priorities, there is no reason now why it shouldn't be brought back to life.

My friend Bob Stedler, a veteran from the Buffalo Evening News, a sporting writer who knows what it is all about, has brought out the best new nomination in sight.

Grantland Rice

The name is Jimmy Collins, in my mind the greatest artist that ever played third base, one of the top infield artists of all time. Jimmy Collins, starring for 19 years, was in many ways the greatest ballplayer Boston ever knew.

Collins had speed, smartness, grace. He revolutionized the art of playing third base.

As Bob Stedler writes—"He was the first third baseman to break up the deadly bunting attack of McGraw, Keeler and Jennings from the old Baltimore Orioles."

I happen to know what McGraw, Keeler and Jennings thought of Collins. In their minds there was no one else even close.

Great Third Basemen

In the last 40 or more years, I've seen many great third basemen come and go.

In this list I can give you Jimmy Collins, Art Devlin, Buck Weaver, Bill Bradley, Frank Baker, Pie Traynor and a few others.

Pie Traynor was one of the greatest. Pie was the leading offensive star. And Pie, with Bradley, Devlin and others, could play third base. But Collins was the fastest and most graceful of them all. Jimmy Collins was to third base what Hal Chase was to first—and Larry Lajoie to second.

Pie Traynor

Jimmy made all the hard plays look easy and simple.

On the offensive side, Collins batted well over .300 with the dead ball for six years.

On the defensive side, he was the fielding champion of both the National and American leagues.

As the late Jack Doyle told me shortly before his death—"I have seen them all for nearly 50 years. There was only one Jimmy Collins. He was the top and the true artist."

All-Graceful

If I had to pick an all-graceful team it would be along these lines—

Catcher—Johnny Kling of the Cubs.

Pitcher — Walter Johnson of Washington.

First base—Hal Chase of the Yankees.

Second base—Napoleon Lajoie of Cleveland.

Shortstop—Herman Long of Boston.

Third base—Jimmy Collins of Boston.

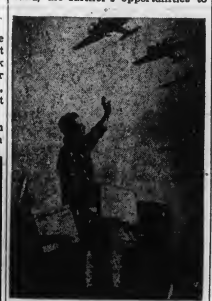
Outfield—Speaker, DiMaggio and Terry Moore. These were artists. But outside of Lajoie and Speaker, no one in this list belongs above Jimmy Collins, the Boston manager who led his team in a winning assault in the first of all-world series games back in 1903 when Boston beat Pittsburgh, headed by Hans Wagner, Tommy Leach, Deacon Phillippe, Sam Leever, Jesse Tannehill, Lefty Davis and one of the best ball clubs of all time.

Ask Hans Wagner or Big Bill Dineen. Ask anyone who ever played with or against Jimmy Collins.

Belated Tribute

In the first vote for the Hall of Fame, Collins polled one of the highest votes and just fell short of the nomination. Then the old guard began to fade as younger fellows came along with only a faint memory of the past.

They began to forget about Jimmy Collins, only remembering the stars they had seen.



In my opinion, it would be a crime to leave Jimmy Collins off the roster that belongs to baseball's Hall of Fame.

Farmers' Problems Now Exceed Others'

He Must Supervise His Three Main Jobs

The farmer's problems in this war are much more difficult than those of most other people, says Roy E. Moser, extension economist of the Massachusetts State college extension service. This is due mainly to the fact that the farmer must finance both his job and his home at the same time. The majority of people work for someone else and their jobs are financed for them. On the other hand, the farmer's opportunities to be of service equal those of any other group.

The greatest production of all time which is planned to fill needs that have been determined in advance: That is the American farmer's answer to the challenge of war.

The production of essential foods is equally as important as the production of planes, guns, and ships. And it will continue to be important long after the roar of battle has stopped.

Mr. Moser outlines three main jobs of farmers in the present emergency.

The farmer's first and most important job is to make the farm produce its maximum of essential foods in spite of labor shortages, lack of machinery, and other problems.

The farmer's second job is to get his debts in shape by reducing present debts to a safe basis. Moser points out that there is no conflict between the reduction of debts and the war bond program. Income paid on debts does not compete with the war bond effort.

His third job is to invest in war bonds when debts have been reduced completely or to moderate amounts. It is imperative that farmers as well as other citizens eliminate unnecessary spending and loan these savings to the government by investing in war bonds.

Agriculture in Industry

By FLORENCE C. WEED

Cereal Straws

"The time is coming when the farmer will become the supplier of the materials used in industry." This forecast was made by the late Francis P. Garvan, first president of the Chemical Foundation Inc.

Cereal straws are a fine example of the industrial possibilities of farm products. For years, they have been used in making paper and more recently in making fiber board. Most of the 84 million tons of straw is produced in Kansas, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Wheat straw is the most important industrially and about 575,000 tons are used for paper and paper board each year. Wheat straw yields the best quality product although some rye and barley straw may be combined with wheat without altering the quality. One problem is that of collecting it economically from individual farms.

Straw has a long history as a paper making material being first used in Germany in 1765. In the United States the first straw paper was made in 1828 by William Magaw of Meadville, Pa. The industry still continues in this country and science has developed several improved pulping methods to lower costs and improve the product.

Rural Briefs

Moderate but definite improvements were apparent in the food situation of the United Kingdom from the spring of 1941 to the outbreak of war in the Pacific, according to British nutritionist reports.

The use to which land is put and the treatment it receives are among the primary factors governing farm income, agricultural experts point out.

PADDY THE BEAVER AND SAMMY JAY TALK THINGS OVER

PADDY THE BEAVER sat looking thoughtfully at the aspen trees he would have to cut to complete his store of food for the winter. All those near the edge of his pond had been cut. The others were scattered about some little distance away. "I don't know," said Paddy out loud, "I don't know."

"What don't you know?" asked Sammy Jay, who, now, that he and Paddy had become true friends, was very much interested in what Paddy was doing.

"Why," replied Paddy, "I don't know just how I am going to get those trees. You see now that Old Man Coyote is watching for me it isn't safe for me to go very far from my pond. I suppose I could dig a canal up to some of the nearest trees and then float them down to the pond, but it is hard to work and keep sharp watch for enemies at the same time. I guess I'll have to be content with some of these alders growing close to the water, but the bark of aspens is so much better that I—I wish I could get them."

"What's a canal?" asked Sammy abruptly.

"A canal? Why, a canal is a kind of ditch in which water can run," replied Paddy.

Sammy nodded. "I've seen Farmer Brown dig one over on the Green Meadows, but it looked like a great deal of work. I didn't suppose that any one else could do it. Do you really mean that you can dig a canal, Paddy?"

"Of course, I mean it," replied Paddy in a surprised tone of voice. "I have helped dig lots of canals. You ought to see some of them back where I came from."

"I'd like to," replied Sammy. "I think it is perfectly wonderful. I don't see how you do it."

"It's easy enough when you know how," replied Paddy. "If I dared to I'd show you."

Sammy had a sudden idea. It almost made him gasp. "I tell you what, you work and I'll keep watch!"

Paddy watched him go with a puzzled and disappointed air.

he cried. "You know my eyes are very sharp."

"Will you?" cried Paddy eagerly. "That would be perfectly splendid. You have the sharpest eyes of any one of whom I know and I would feel perfectly safe with you on watch. But I don't want to put you to all that trouble, Mr. Jay."

"Of course I will," replied Sammy, "and it won't be any trouble at all. I'll just love to do it." You see it made Sammy feel very proud to have Paddy say that he had such sharp eyes. "When will you begin?"

"Right away, if you will just take a look around and see that it is perfectly safe for me to come out on land."

Sammy didn't wait to hear more. He spread his beautiful blue wings and started off over the Green Forest straight for the Green Meadows. Paddy watched him go with a puzzled and disappointed air. "That's funny," thought he, "I thought he really meant it, and now off he goes without even saying good-by."

In a little while back came Sammy all out of breath. "It's all right," he panted. "You can go to work just as soon as you please."

Paddy looked more puzzled than ever. "How do you know?" he asked. "I haven't seen you looking around."

"I did better than that," replied Sammy. "If Old Man Coyote had been hiding somewhere in the Green Forest it might have taken me some time to find him. But he isn't. You see I flew straight over to his home in the Green Meadows to see if he is there, and he is. He's taking a sun bath and looking as cross as two sticks. I don't think he'll be back here this morning, but I'll keep a sharp watch while you work."

Paddy made Sammy a low bow. "You certainly are smart, Mr. Jay," said he.

Gladys—Oh, didn't you know? Bob writes those descriptions of missing people for the police.

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

David King, president of Verona 4-H Club represented Northern Kentucky on W L W's Everybodys Farm Hour 4-H Enlistment program last Saturday at 1:15 P. M. David has an excellent 4-H club record and did a splendid job on the radio program.

Boone County 4-H Clubs are for a record 4-H Victory Project Enlistment Program this week and next. The County Extension agents and adult leaders are meeting with all the boys and girls in the schools to assist in organizing victory war projects groups. Those boys and girls who can not carry livestock, crops or home projects will be enlisted in the 150 hour labor in farm or home work projects.

4-H Club members are going all out in food and fiber production and home food selection and preparation and clothing work in 1943.

The amount of work in the war effort our boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 20 years is great. Every parent is urged to cooperate fully in our boys and girls war production program for this year.

O. D. Perkins Appointed Assistant County Agent.

Mr. O. D. Perkinson of Trimble County has been appointed assistant agent of Boone county effective February 1st. Mr. Perkinson has been herdsman of Walnut Hall Stock Farm of Lexington for the past 16 years. He is a graduate of the University of Kentucky. He, wife and son, Morris moved to Burlington on Tuesday afternoon of last week.

Crittenden Doctor to Locate at Walton

Dr. H. F. Mann of Crittenden has sold his property at Crittenden and plans in the near future to locate in Walton.

Dr. Mann is no stranger here, he attended high school at this place and located as he has been, has done work here at different times the past 24 years.

Dr. Mann is a public minded citizen as well as a first class physician and surgeon. We feel that his coming to our town will be an asset. Dr. Mann plans, to take a short post graduate course at Mayo Clinic before re-locating.

INCENTIVE PAYMENT PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

To further encourage maximum war production, incentive payments are being offered to farmers to assist them in producing maxium amounts of essential farm crops. The payments being offered by the U. S. Department of Agriculture will be based on crops including soybeans, Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, grain sorghums, and dried beans as well as designated fresh vegetables for market. The designated fresh vegetables includ beets, cabbage, carrots, green peas, Lima beans, onions, snap beans, and tomatoes. The amount of payment varies with the crop grown.

"The purpose of this incentive payment", explained Mr. M. D. Royse, Chairman of the Kentucky USDA War Board, "is to encourage farmers to an even greater production. Farmers are having difficulty in obtaining labor to produce the crops needed when the cash income from the crops will not pay for the labor used in planting, growing, and harvesting the crops. Wages are higher and machinery is less available for the production of the needed crops. We must produce to the limit of our resources to accomplish the job that is before us. Every country the Allies liberate must be fed. It is up to the farmers of this country to produce that food."

REGISTRATION

Registration for Ration Book No. 2 will be held in the school buildings at Walton and Verona on Tuesday, February 23rd-Wednesday 24th—Thursday 25th and Friday 26th, each day from one to 5 P. M., only on Friday the Registration will continue until 9 P. M. at the Walton School.

W. F. COOP, Supt.

Cpl. Lewis W. Shields, Co. C. 72nd Bn., 15 Trng. Regt. U. S. Army of Camp J. T. Robinson, Arkansas, arrived in Walton about noon Tuesday for a short visit with his many friends here. He was the Basketball Coach and teacher in the Walton-Verona school for three years, before leaving for the Army. Cpl. Shields is enjoying his first 10 day furlough, spending some time at his home in Elizabeth, Ind. before coming to Walton. He is looking fine—Army life seems to agree with him.

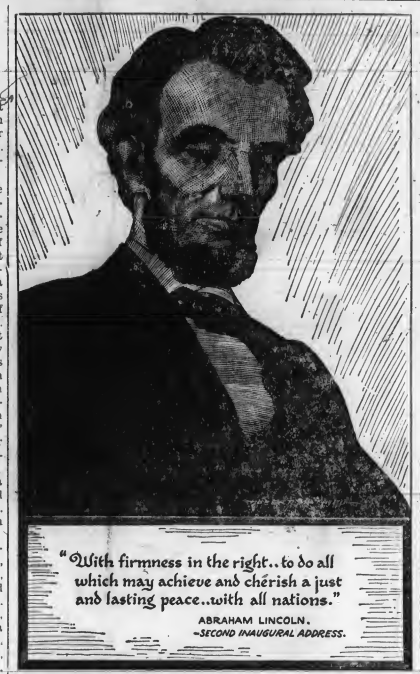
Specialist to Addresss Utopia Club Members.

Carl W. Jones, older boys and girls club specialist will address Boone County Utopia Club members at their next meeting, Thursday, February 18, at 8:30 P. M., according to Margaret Allen, publicity chairman.



Plans have also been made to have a speaker on farm machinery repair and on the 1943 garden program. The Utopia club in 1943 will hold bi-monthly meetings and will attempt to have special speakers on timely subjects at each meeting. All older boys and girls (19 years up) are invited to attend meetings and take part in the years program.

Elden Wayne McClure of Camp Chaffee spent the week-end with relatives and friends in Walton and Verona.

Names of Donors on Honor Roll Board

The citizens of Walton are indeed proud of the Honor Roll for the Service Men and Women which has been erected on the city owned lot just opposite the City Building. This project was sponsored by the Walton Woman's Literary Club and is the gift of a number of our public spirted citizens, namely: Mr. and Mrs. Ed Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Mann, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Vest, Elliott's Hardware, Dixie State Bank, Robert's Grocery, Stephen's Resturant, Alan H. Gaines, Robt. E. Brugh, Clyde Chipman, Dr. D. L. Maddox, Robt. W. Jones, Aleen C. Connor, D. L. Workers Named In Book Campaign

The following list of workers in the Victory Book Campaign has been announced by Miss Mary Bess Cropper, County Chairman. The names of Buildings following the workers' names show where the books will be collected.

Belleview, Marian Rogers, Churches; Bullittsburg, Mrs. Albert Pfalzgraf, Church; Bullittsville, Mrs. Charles Engle, Engle's Store; Burlington, Mrs. Herbert Snyder, Churches and Court House; Constance, Mrs. Paul Craven, Churches; Hebron-Constance Road, Mrs. Albert Rogers, Hebron School; Petersburg, Mrs. Justin Dolph, Mrs. Dolph's home.

All precincts of the County do not yet have their chairmen, because so many people are now working at other things, but it is hoped to have the list completed before the end of the week so that it may be published in the next issue of this paper.

The Campaign has three more weeks to run, and due to gas rationing, it may not be possible for a house to house canvas to be made. However, this is everyone's job, and it is up to each one to see that all his suitable books are turned in to his local chairman. The ministers of the County are cooperating in the Drive, and they may also be contacted when there are books to be contributed.

Many of our boys are in Service in isolated places where there are no library facilities except what is furnished by the Government, and this is your chance to provide a little enjoyment for their leisure time. No magazines may be accepted and the following is the type of books suggested as most suitable: Adventure, Aviation stories, Historical novels, Humor, Mystery, Sports, Western, Grammars, Mathematics books, Up-to-date technical books, Accounting, Shorthands, Business and Salesmanship, Well illustrated books of all types, Geography, Travel (of the last ten years"), Biography and History.

Be careful in making your selection of books to give, so that none will have to be discarded later. When in doubt, be guided by the slogan "The book you really want to keep is a good one to give."

Keep 'em Reading.

The meeting date of the Local Division of the Women's Society of Christian Service (formerly called the Ladies' Aid) has been changed from Saturday following the second Sunday to the third Thursday of each month. Members please note, the next meeting will be on Thursday, February 18 at the church. Covered dish luncheon at noon.

Woman's Society of Christian Service Engaged in Course of Mission Study.

The Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church is engaged in a course of Mission Study. Mrs. E. B. Wallace the Secretary of Education and Study is in charge and the classes are being held in her home each Tuesday afternoon begining at 2:30 P. M. The topic of study is "Latin America" both in the U. S. A. the Islands that lie between and in South America. Not all members of the W. S. C. S. are participating in the study but those who are find it most interesting.

A most pleasant week-end was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Ransom of Verona, when the three son's of Mr. Ransom were home together. Mr. Francis A. Ransom of Washington D. C. who had not been home since returning from California, Henry C. Ransom of Chattanooga and Mr. and Mrs. James E. Ransom and daughter of Louisville.

Named to County Ration Board

The appointment of Mrs. Della B. Dils, as the Community Service Member of the Local War Price and Rationing Board was announced today by Mr. R. E. Brugh, chairman of the Board.

This appointment is in line with a new plan established by the Regional Office of Price Administration wherby community service activities and consumer relations in each local board area will be supervised by a board member.

"The selection of Mrs. Dils for this important job means that prompt and accurate information concerning rationing and price control will be disseminated in this community," Chairman R. E. Brugh said.

Miss Martha Wilson Now Lt. in Women's Army Auxiliary Corps.

Mrs. Ward Rice received a very interesting letter from Miss Martha Wilson, now in Des Moines, Iowa.

Miss Wilson graduated from Officers Candidate School, Tuesday morning, so now it is "Lt. Martha". She was the youngest member in the class and deserves much credit for continuing her studies. She said, "I wouldn't have given up my chance for the world, in spite of all the work, it is really worth it."

Miss Wilson's many friends extend congratulations.

Her brother was wounded in Africa and is now in a Base Hospital.

POULTRY SCHOOL DATE CHANGED TO FEB. 17th

The Boone County annual poultry school data has been changed to Wednesday, February 17th according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The meeting will begin at 10:30 a. m.—E. W. T. and close at 3:30 p. m.,

Last year Kentucky was called upon to produce 16% more eggs for the war effort. Poultrymen exceeded this goal by producing 28% more eggs. This year poultrymen have been called upon to produce 16% more eggs than last years goal, 8% more chickens and 20% more turkeys.

The school will be devoted to discussions and plans for exceeding this years goal. The feed situation along with better chicks, disease and parasite control, housing and management under war conditions will be discussed. Jim Humphrey, poultry specialist from the college will be a principal speaker on the program and he will be assisted by a number of leading Boone County poultrymen.

Each homemakers club will be represented at the meeting with one or more poultry and Live at Home program leaders.

The poultry school is held each year just before the spring poultry work starts. All poultrymen are invited to attend and to take part in the meeting. The meeting will be held at the county agent's office in Burlington.

Corp Walter D. Vest arrived home Tuesday from Ft. Benning, Ga. to spend 10 days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Vest. His many friends are pleased to see him looking so well.

Farm Bureau Elects Directors

The Boone County Farm Bureau elected directors in a meeting at Burlington, Monday afternon of last week for each community in the county. The 1943 directors are as follows: Constance, C. L. Hempfling; Hebron, Chas. B. Beall; Petersburg, John J. Klopp; Grant, W. H. Presser; Burlington, H. E. White; Florence, Geo. Heil; Hamilton, J. C. Acree; Walton, S. D. S. Ranson; Verona, W. W. King; New Haven, Joseph A. Huey.

Thirty-four members were reported to have paid dues into the newly formed county organization. They are H. E. White, Wilton Stephens, B. W. Southgate, Chas. B. Beall, Joel Gray, Lloyd, D. McGlasson, Lloyd Sieckman, J. C. Bedinger, E. Y. Randall, Beckam Shields, John E. Crigler, O. W. Chinn, Ben F. Bedinger, E. A. Martin, J. C. Acre, T. H. McCaffrey, H. R. Forkner, O. R. Russ, W. W. King, S. D. S. Ranson, C. Liston Hempfling, Chas L. Hempfling, Shirley Fergerson, L. H. Thomas, John J. Klopp, Geo. Heil, Joseph J. Schwartz, W. H. Presser, Joseph A. Huey, Raymond Hightower, H. L. Crigler, Elmer Kirkpatrick, Chester L. Tanner, and Chas. W. White.

Plans were made to have the president of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation address the next meeting. This meeting will be a dinner meeting in which all members, their families and others interested in Farm Bureau work are einvited to attend. Members appointed on the program committee for this meeting are J. C. Acree, Joseph Huey, H. E. White, H. R. Forkner, and Shirley Ferguson.

Lloyd Siekman was appointed chairman of the purchasing committee. A number of farmers were interested in the cooperative purchase of a car load of fence at a considerable saving to the members. This plan of purchase will be distinct and separate from the regular activites of the organization but such activities will be sponsored on any needed form problem.

NOTICE—FUEL OIL RATION

All applications for Fuel Oil ration MUST be made before FEBRUARY 17th, as there will absolutely be no more registrations after that date until April 1st, 1943. If your Coupons sheets expired December 31, 1942 you must register before that above date or you will not be able to get anymore ration before April 1st, 1943.

Bone County War Price and Rationing Board No. 8.
R. E. Brugh, Chm., Walton, Ky.

Ration of Canned Foods to Start

Residents of Boone County are reminded by R. E. Brugh, Chairman of the local War Price and Rationing Board, to begin preparing for the rationing of canned foods which will begin March 1st.

The OPA has announced that beginning February 20, there will be a "FREEZE" of sales to the public of the foods to be rationed to permit retailers to prepare for the new program. The "FREEZE" period will be the week of February 20, and during that week WAR RATION BOOK TWO will be issued to everyone.

Foods to be rationed under the point system at the start will be Canned and Bottled Fruits, Vegetables and Juices, Canned Soups, Frozen Fruits and Vegetables and all Dried Fruits.

Residents of Boone County are urged by R. E. Brugh, NOT to buy more canned goods than they need between now and the beginning of rationing. Hoarding, he pointed out, defeats the whole purpose of a rationing program and means that the hoarder is trying to get a bigger share of scarce items than his friends and neighbors.

Farm Bureau President Speaks at County Meeting

Alex H. Calvert, newly elected Kentucky Farm Bureau president will address Boone County Farm Bureau members, farmers and their families in a county wide dinner meeting at Burlington school in the near future. The dinner will be served by Burlington P.-T. A. and the exact date will be announced in the very near future.

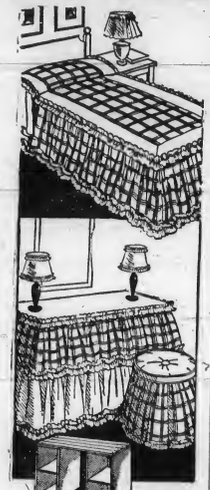
Boone county farmers are showing increasing interest in Farm Bureau activities and are much interested in the state and National Farm Bureau programs. Most farmers are appreciating that today and in the near future the farmers must have a strong farmer organization to represent farm interests.

Motorist Urged to Have Tires Inspected

Motorist were urged again by Mr. Brugh, chairman of the Local War Price and Rationing Board, to have their tires inspected before March 31 as provided under the mileage rationing regulations. Mr. Brugh said he understands relatively few passengers cars drivers have obtained the Official inspection.

It is absolutely necessary to have tires inspected and the certificate signed by the inspector, in order to be eligible for tire replacements, and renewal of your gasoline ration be emphasized. All applications and renewal for gasoline must be accompanied by your tire inspection sheet or you will not be able to receive your gasoline ration, so BE SURE to send your tire inspection sheet with your application. These can be mailed in to the Board and your books will be mailed back to you in a few days before your present ration books expire.

Deputy Collector At Court House



A Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue will be at the Court House, Burlington, on February 24th and 25th to assist taxpayers in preparing their Income Tax Returns.

This service is free and all persons whose gross income, if single, is $500 or more, or if married and gross income being $1,200 or more, should contact this man on one of these dates, if you are unable to prepare your own return.

A fine is imposed for failure to file even though no tax is due, if your gross income is sufficient for filing. It is suggested that a taxpayer list his income and expenses on a sheet of paper before coming to Burlington, and bring this list with him.

Many people are required to file returns this year who have never filed before on account of the lowering of exemptions. Mark these dates on your calendar if you require assistance in preparing your return.

Cow's Grave on Map

The only animal whose grave has ever been designated on the map of its country is Buzoe, a pet cow that died of old age in the Gibson desert of Australia in 1876 while she was with a party mapping the territory, says Collier's. "Buzoe's Grave" was indicated on the original chart and, consequently, the place was included on many maps of Australia published in the past 60 years.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Point Rationing Scheduled for March 1; Solomons Fit Into Jap 'Empire Plan' But U. S. Armed Forces Will Not Agree; Treasury Favors Pay-as-You-Go Tax

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

RATIONING: New Date Set

Office of Price Administration officials have established March 1 (or a few days later) as the beginning of nation-wide rationing of canned and frozen foods on a point basis. As announced several weeks ago these goods include canned, bottled, and frozen fruits and vegetables, soups, juices, chili sauce, catsup and dried fruits.

Retail sales of these items will be stopped on February 21 and during the eight days following that date a country-wide schoolhouse registration will be conducted for the distribution of ration book No. 2. Blue stamps in this book will be used for the canned goods rationing and the red stamps for meat rationing. (Meat rationing is at present scheduled to begin about April 1, although this may be changed.) Further details of the registration for book two and its use are to be announced by local OPA offices.

One member of each family may register for the entire household for ration book two. Book No. 1 must be presented at the time of registration and "excess" canned goods on hand as of February 21 must be declared. OPA has previously ruled that each member of the household may have five cans of eight ounces or larger on hand at the time of registration and still escape having coupons removed from the new book.

OTHER RATION DATES

Feb. 20—Expiration date for Period 3 fuel-oil coupons which became valid Dec. 23.
Feb. 28—Final date for first inspection of tires for "B" or "C" passenger car card holders and for commercial vehicles.
March 13—Period 5 fuel-oil coupons, good to Sept. 30, become valid.
March 15—Last valid date for No. 11 sugar coupons, good for three pounds.
March 31—Final date for first inspection of passenger car tires for "A" card holders and motorcycles.
April 12—Expiration date for Period 4 fuel-oil coupons.

STRANGE QUESTION: From the Nazis

"Where is the place you surrender?"

This was a strange question indeed for the once-proud Nazi soldiers before Stalingrad to be asking the Russians, but it was what the Reds reported their enemies were asking as they continued to flock in—victims of the relentless Soviet drive to free the once-besieged Volga city.

Dispatches described the condition of the Nazis as "cold, unshaven, and distraught." But the citizens of Stalingrad wasted little pity on their captives. Too well they remembered the long days and nights that the Nazis pounded and ruined their city with bombs and shells.

In a single day 16 generals and a field marshal (Frederich Paulus, chief Nazi army official in the area) were surrendered along with hundreds of other smaller fry. Even the German radio admitted that these losses at Stalingrad were among the most serious of the entire war.

Elsewhere the Russians continued to gain ground or at least hold their recent gains. In the Leningrad sector the "escape corridor" before the city was widened and in the Caucasus the drive for Rostov strengthened as new thrusts on the middle sector headed fresh for Kursk and Kharkov.

WAR NEAR CLIMAX: Says Finn President

In a statement slanted for the United Nations, President Risto Ryti told his Finnish parliament that "the war is approaching a culmination point," and expressed hope that "the Allies will understand Finland's position," dispatches from Helsinki reported. The dispatches said that Ryti did not mention Germany, Finland's ally in the war against Russia.

PACIFIC TOUR: And Jap Bombs

Returning from a 20,000-mile trip to the Pacific front, during which time he was twice under Japanese air attack, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox told United States newsmen that "I think there are darn good prospects of an air attack on Tokyo." Knox was accompanied by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, and Adm. William F. Halsey Jr., commander in the South Pacific.

SOLOMONS: Japs Try Again

The importance of the Solomon Islands in Japan's scheme for an expanded empire was forcibly demonstrated again when the navy announced another major Jap effort to retake the islands.

Even the earliest communiques announced that American forces engaged the enemy in what may be the greatest air-sea battle of the Pacific to date.

A U. S. marine looks over a handful of bones—all that is left of a Japanese warrior to whom fate had given a one-way ticket to Guadalcanal. The new Jap drive on that area indicates its importance to the enemy's grand strategy.

Exaggerated Japanese claims of United States losses were spiked early by a navy spokesman, who added that "increased activity on the part of the Japanese indicates a major effort to regain control of the entire Solomons area."

One communique, making no reference to the Jap assault, said an American destroyer had shelled a number of barges at enemy-held Cape Esperance, on the northern tip of Guadalcanal. Those barges might have been used in new landings or in coastal troop movements by a desperate enemy.

A week before the outbreak of the battle Navy Secretary Frank Knox described the American hold on Guadalcanal as secure, predicting that the remnants of organized Jap resistance would be wiped out in 30 days. The United Nations were hopeful but not all were convinced.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO: Treasury Style

Flatly opposing the Ruml plan to skip payment of last year's income tax, the U. S. treasury department has nevertheless come out in favor of the enactment of a pay-as-you-go withholding tax set-up. As presented to the house ways and means committee by Randolph E. Paul, treasury general counsel, this plan would provide for the withholding of 19 per cent of pay checks (after deductions). This would be in addition to the 5 per cent victory tax, already in effect.

Tentative Exemption Schedule

If the treasury 19 per cent withholding tax plan is carried out some schedule of deductions to allow for dependency, etc., would have to be set up to simplify computation of the tax. Here is a tentative weekly exemption schedule which has been suggested:

Single Person $11.00
Married Person 26.00
Additional Dependent .. 5.00

The Victory tax of 5 per cent would also still have to be paid. Deductions for this are a nen-dependency basis, allowing a flat $12 per week exemption.

Stressing the need of prompt action by congress, Paul said that the 19 per cent withholding tax would be equivalent to the 1942 6 per cent normal tax and 13 per cent surtax on the first bracket, and would simplify collection and unnecessary refunds. By the "first bracket" he meant the first $2,000 of taxable income after deductions.

It was indicated that while the treasury did not believe last year's income taxes should be "forgiven" if the new plan is put into effect, the government would admit that these taxes should be deferred and paid up gradually rather than doubling up this year.

WAR BOND SALES: Hit New High

Last month, the treasury has announced, war bond sales totaled $1,240,444,000 to set an all-time monthly record. Previous high month was January, 1942, when sales touched $1,080,546,000 in the first full month of bond sales after the beginning of the war. Total sales since the introduction of War Bonds in May, 1941, amount to $12,934,611,000. Of this amount, 98 per cent are still held by their purchasers.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

CROWN PRINCESS MARTHA

The crown princess of Norway is now a full-fledged member of the "Short-Snorters Club," with such other distinguished personages as Winston Churchill and Henry A. Wallace.

It happened as the Princess Martha was returning by clipper from England to her home in Maryland. The stewardess on the plane asked if she were a member of the club, which requires every member to carry a marked $1 bill as a certificate of membership. She was not. Whereupon other passengers promptly presented their dollar bills—token of membership in the club—for the princess to sign.

She wrote her name in ink, "Martha, Crown Princess of Norway," across a dozen dollar bills that day, as the plane soared over the Atlantic. There were 14 passengers, and she signed for all except her lady-in-waiting, Ragni Ostgaard.

The plane had been some time out of England before the passengers realized they had a princess aboard. She appeared on the passenger list simply as "Mrs. Brown." But someone recognized her from pictures, and the word got around.

While most of the passengers played bridge, the princess read a book. At night she tucked herself into the little sleeping compartment, lower berth, while the lady-in-waiting climbed into the upper.

She chatted with passengers as if she were merely Mrs. Brown, and when the trip was over, passenger Fred Williams of the British air ministry remarked:

"She's quite the most charming lady I've ever met."

HURLEY AND TIMOSHENKO

When friends asked Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, just back from Russia, to explain the Marshal Timoshenko's mysterious disappearance from the limelight, Hurley dodged the question as follows:

Timoshenko is the George Washington of Russia. Washington retreated all the way from Boston to Yorktown. He lost one battle after another, but he figured that as long as he had his army intact, and the vast reaches of North America to retreat into, he might lose the battles but he would win the war.

And he kept on retreating until he was able to spring the trap on Cornwallis at Yorktown.

Timoshenko also followed the retreat strategy—from Kharkov to Rostov to Stalingrad—but kept his army intact. He is a tremendous figure in Russia. His name is stamped on the hearts of the people.

LATINS LOVE RUSSIA

Latin American fear of Communism has long kept those countries from recognizing the Soviet Union. But Soviet military successes have persuaded the Latins that the Soviets will emerge among the victors in this war and will be a power to deal with.

Thus some of the countries below the Rio Grande are coming around to diplomatic recognition of the Soviet government.

Cuba is sending Dr. Aurelio Concheso, ambassador to Washington, to Moscow to open a legation, which will later be in charge of Dr. Raoul Herrera-Arango, also from the Washington embassy.

Mexico is sending her minister counselor from the Washington embassy, Dr. Luis Quintanilla, to become minister to the U. S. S. R.

Foreign Ministers Gabriel Turbay of Colombia and Alberto Guani of Uruguay are in Washington today, where they will discuss with Soviet Ambassador Litvinoff the establishment of missions in Russia. Colombia recognized the Soviet in 1936, but has never sent a minister.

It's also reported that Ecuador and Venezuela plan similar action. Thus far, however, Colombia is the only country on the South American continent which has recognized the Soviet Union.

There are substantial possibilities for trade between Russia and Latin America after the war, and some of the Latins are getting on the band wagon.

Note: Argentina, the only Latin American country not to break with the Axis, is scared sick over the prospect of a Russian victory and the danger of communism.

Nazi Submarine Menace Is Allies' Chief Problem

Pre-Fabricated U-Boats Said to Boost German Output; 'Vanishing Luftwaffe' Puzzles United Nations' Military Observers.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

"It will be a long and bitter war."

That was the remark of the Australian minister of defense in a recent interview. Two days later, I heard a general, who had visited many fronts, make a similar statement. You have heard the same prediction made from dozens of officials. And the strange thing is, it is usually preceded with an account of Allied successes. Nothing but a "but" stands between the enumeration of victories achieved and the prediction of the long, hard road ahead.

Since this perplexed me, I tried to get a concrete answer from various persons as to just what lies on the long, hard road. Out of the answers, two obstacles stand out, the submarine and the story of the "vanishing Luftwaffe." Only recently has it been definitely revealed that the enemy's greatest and most effective weapon is the submarine. For a long time, the British permitted only the most general statements regarding the sinking of Allied or even neutral ships by U-boats. Lately, because it was realized that the people were in ignorance of the extent of this menace, more detailed statements have been made, although still no figures are given out.

We know that America is building ships faster than American ships are being sunk. We know that the margin between launchings and sinkings is very narrow. And we know that launchings alone do not really balance sinkings but for hell because the enemy sinks loaded ships—valuable cargoes are destroyed—trained men net easily ar immediately replaceable are killed or at least taken out of action for long periods—gaps are left in the war effort with each lost cargo.

When I was in Berlin covering the outbreak of the European war in 1939, I heard a great deal of talk about Germany's counter-blockade, how the Nazis could fill seas with their U-boats. There was much talk of the great numbers which could be produced by the American method of the assembly line. I had no idea how much truth there was in those statements. Then in the months that followed, not much was said about the U-boats. For a period when they were operating on our coasts, America was conscious of their presence but when they were driven out of sight of our shores, they were driven out of mind as well.

Nazi Boasts Largely Confirmed

Now we learn how great their depredations are on the shipping lanes where they converge in the eastern Atlantic, confirming to some degree the German boasts which are sounding again. It is stated by British naval observers that the Germans are pre-fabricating the subs, making the parts in factories scattered all over the Reich and assembling them in great underground caverns hewn out of the rock or covered with concrete on the shores of the Bay of Biscay in France.

Therein lies a clear and simple explanation of the Allies' greatest problem, the chief obstacle on the "long, hard road."

The second obstacle may be a fancied one but it is real in the minds of many. The unknown is usually more terrible than the known and perhaps this one is at least partly myth but no hard-headed realist can afford to underestimate the enemy's potentialities.

Those who believe this "obstacle" exists, say it is hidden behind the mystery of "the vanishing Luftwaffe."

According to military men, there are at present very few German planes on the Russian front. I heard a recent estimate of one-seventh as many as a year ago.

There are not many German planes over Africa—the Allies have at least achieved parity in air power. Where is the German Luftwaffe? Its presence darkened the skies of Europe once—has it really vanished? Been used up? Worn out? The factories which turn out replacements all destroyed by Allied bombers? Is its necessary fuel and lubrication exhausted? Some people think that this, at least to a large degree, is true. But that explanation does not seem reasonable.

German Advances In Synthetic Gas

We know that Germany has made remarkable advances in the manufacture of synthetic gasoline and oils. We know that some oil has been retrieved from the Maikop oil fields in Russia, new ones developed in Austria.

If Germany is not yet starved of gasoline and lubricants, if the Luftwaffe has not really disappeared from the earth, its absence from the air may have another meaning. We know that in spite of the heavy German losses in men and material in Russia, Germany still has a large and powerful army. Possibly over 300 fully equipped divisions—trained men.

It is estimated that aside from soldiers engaged in Russia and North Africa, the garrisons in the occupied countries, there must be a striking mobile army of a million men and more. Of course, these are estimates but they are not overestimates. And besides this army there is the "vanished Luftwaffe." The assumption is that this great army like the airforce is resting, conserving and building up its strength for one of two things: either a long, last stand defense of the borders of the Reich or one more powerful offensive.

Meanwhile, we know that every day that Japan is allowed to occupy the rich possessions of her stolen empire, she is nesrer to the exploitation of their resources, the development of which will make her stronger. And every day she is left undisturbed by a major attack, she is able to increase her fortifications, wear down the Chinese and spread her "silver bullets" among the less loyal war-lord followers on the fringe of Chiang Ksi-shek's central army.

There are two factors which make the road ahead a hard one—the present successful operation and the rapid replacement of the German submarine flotilla and the probability that Germany is holding back a powerful army and air force either for another telling blow or to defend its strongly fortified terrain.

Ideologies— Put Them on Ice?

As I go wandering round the town taking a look in every quarter—with apologies to Wan-Eyed Reilly—I have acquired data in the last few days that have convinced me that we will have to expunge the word ideology from the bright lexicon of war, if we are going to win.

I have observed three places where the Ideologies have gotten in and done more damage than a buffalo moth in an overstuffed sofa.

Of course in North Africa—it may be the climate or the rainy season—ideologies have done some of their most devastating work. I have conversed with an army officer, an official, who knows that terrain and also what it produces, a newspaper philosopher and a radical—all of them look at the situation on the shores of the Mediterranean a little differently. The official explains that the politics are very important—the radical, happy over the success against all Fascists, but infuriated over using them even to help defeat themselves, shouts—"We should have shot Darlan the day after he served his purpose." "Well," remarks the official, "somebody did, didn't they?" The army officer calls the whole controversy a backyard row that will be forgotten as ground dries up and the Allies get a few victories.

But the correspondent philosopher paused to analyze.

He said: "You have heard that one thing that greatly improved the morale in the Russian army was making the officers supreme and removing the authority of the commissars which were originally placed at their elbows. You know the Russian officers could make no move without the okay of the commissar and yet the officer was responsible if anything went wrong. Now, the officer has the final word—many of the former commissars who had military training have become officers.

The Swedish Labor federation reports that the number of strikes, and workers involved, during 1942, was the lowest ever recorded. Only 24 strikes, with some 1,922 workers involved, were reported. The number of lost working days totaled 94,000. Only three times before in the history of Sweden's labor, have there been a less number of working days lost through strikes.

Rather Late Hour to Be Changing Instruments

The street musician was tired, and the motorist agreed to give him a lift to the next town.

As they were racing at terrific speed down a hill, the motorist suddenly shouted above the noise of the car: "What instrument do you play?"

The musician shouted back: "The violin!"

The driver crouched over the steering wheel, peering ahead. He yelled: "That's a pity!"

"Why is it a pity?" demanded the musician.

"It's a pity you don't play the harp!" yelled the motorist. "The brakes won't work!"

Soybeans Deplete Land's Nitrogen

Fertilizing, Rotation Counteracts Losses

How to fertilize soybeans is a question that faces hundreds of thousands of farmers since the war's demands have so greatly increased the production of this crop.

When soybeans are grown for hay or grain, they are definitely a soil-depleting crop, according to B. E. Yoder, chief agronomist, Ohio Agricultural Experiment station.

Results of tests covering 22 years at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station revealed that a 25-bushel-per-acre soybean crop removed 25 pounds of phosphorus and 30 pounds of potash per acre from the soil.

In other words, soybean grain removed 1½ times as much phosphorus and twice as much potash as did corn grain from the soil.

In spite of the fact that the soybean is a legume, it breaks down soil organic matter and depletes the land's nitrogen supply even in generously fertilized rotations at rates almost identical with those caused by clean-cultivated row crops.

Obviously the nitrogen fixed by the plant is transformed into protein in the beans removed from the soil. Soybeans leave behind in the soil only half as much root residue as corn grown on the same land. The haulm is likewise high in a carbon residue similar to that of any other straw.

Farmers should offset the degrading effects of the bean's on the soil's fertility by means of soil building practices.

Soybeans should be fertilized. Experiments thus far have failed to show that soybeans respond to direct fertilization.

That's chicken from U. S. farms, 7,000 pounds of it for one meal, these seamen of the galley crew are preparing.

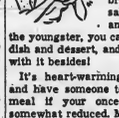
The first step in fertilizing soybeans is to be sure the land is generously supplied with active calcium and lime. Next increase the rate of fertilizer application to wheat, corn and other crops grown in rotation. Soybeans should be confined to the most fertile fields on the farm, so that production goals may be attained on the smallest possible acreage of land. They should be planted on the most level fields to minimize erosion and wherever possible on the contour.

In fitting soybeans into a rotation system, it is always best to substitute this crop for one of the other row crops or small grains. Soybeans should never be substituted for soil-building sod crops.

Up in Smoke

Burning of pastures and meadows costs farmers millions of dollars each year in soil losses and decreased yields of grasses. Experiments in Kansas show that the yield of bluestem grasses was cut 48 to 88 per cent depending on the time of burning. Fall burning was most injurious. Oklahoma tests show that where wooded pasture was burned the runoff was 28 times as great and soil loss 12 times as great as for areas not burned.



Serve Shrimp Casserole, Save Meat
(See Recipes Below)

Warm Welcome!

These are days when families are divided and diminished, and there comes the urge to say to the neighbor, come take "pot-luck" supper with us. Thus, your neighbor will bring over some salad and muffins . . . and herself and the youngster, you can make a main dish and dessert, and have company with it besides!

It's heart-warming to visit, too, and have someone to help with the meal if your once-big family is somewhat reduced. Most people welcome a visit now and then with just one of the ordinary meals—and pot-luck is the perfect answer.

Your first must-not with pot-luck is do not fuss. Just get together on who is to bring what—and have what you ordinarily would have. Your plans need not be made with campaign-like precision, simply do it on the spur of the moment, since this makes for spontaneity.

Let's take it easy on meat with some grand casserole dishes—including this on shrimp and crabmeat with a crisp, corn-flake crust:

Baked Shrimp Salad.
(Serves 6 to 8)

½ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup minced onion
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup cooked crabmeat, flaked
1 cup cooked shrimp, cleaned
1 cup mayonnaise
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
2 cups corn flakes
¼ cup butter

Combine all ingredients and mix well together. Place in individual shell dishes or one large casserole. Cover with crushed corn flakes, dot with butter, and sprinkle paprika over top. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) about 30 minutes. Serve with lemon.

Spaghetti's a fine dish to serve at pot luck. Should hamburger supplies be low, try some of Sunday's leftover chicken in the sauce.

Spaghetti With Chicken.
(Serves 6 to 8)

1 8-ounce package spaghetti
1 onion, cut fine
1 small clove garlic
2 tablespoons fat
2½ cups cooked tomatoes
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon sugar
Dash of cayenne
1 cup diced, cooked chicken
¾ cup grated cheese
1 cup mushrooms, sauteed

Cook spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and place in a greased casserole. Saute onion and garlic in hot fat until tender but do not brown. Add tomatoes, salt, pepper, sugar and cayenne. Heat to boiling, then add chicken, mushrooms, and pour over spaghetti. Toss with fork and sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven about 30 minutes.

For ease in serving, and ease on your budget serve your salad course with the hot bread and skip dessert! It's a smart and simple note in budget suppers:

Wilshire Salad.
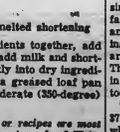
(Serves 8)

1 head lettuce or romaine
4 slices pineapple
1 grapefruit, peeled and sectioned
1 red apple, sliced
¼ pound grapes, cleaned
1 orange peeled and sectioned
Mayonnaise



Line salad bowl with lettuce or romaine. Arrange fruit in an orderly but pretty pattern, alternating slices of pineapple with apple, and orange sections with grapefruit. Sprinkle halved grapes (seeded) over whole of bowl, or place clusters of grapes among other fruit. Serve with mayonnaise.

You can take the B-r-r-r- out of winter by serving a delicious hot bread that breaks open like a twink and when spread with butter is the answer to perfection!

Apple-Walnut Muffins.
(Makes 12 medium)

2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
3 tablespoons sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons mild salad oil
1 cup raw, grated apple
½ cup broken walnut kernels

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Combine egg, milk and salad oil and add to flour mixture, stirring only until mixed. Fold in apple and nuts. Drop by spoonfuls into greased muffin tins, filling ⅔ full. Bake in a hot (425-degree) oven for 20 to 30 minutes, according to the size of the muffins.

It's a pleasure to bring freshly baked bread to the table because it's a sign you have gone to the trouble of trying to make the meal as good as possible. You'll like the following nut bread both for table or lunch-box use.

If you're using this bread for the lunchbox, slice it thinly, spread with cream cheese, blended with apple sauce, or cream cheese with crisply fried, drained and crumbled bacon.

Brazil Nut Quick Bread.
(Makes 1 5-by-8-inch loaf)

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup sugar
1 cup chopped Brazil nuts
1 egg
1½ cups milk
3 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift dry ingredients together, add nuts. Beat egg, add milk and shortening. Stir quickly into dry ingredients. Pour into a greased loaf pan and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven 1 hour.

Lynn Says:

No Waste, No Want: Rationing and decreased supplies of food have diminished our leftover problem, but not entirely done away with it. That's why I'm passing on these thoughts of what-to-do:

Use cooked meat or fish seasoned and moistened with cream in between the omelet. Vegetables, put through a sieve moistened with cream, butter or gravy are good, too.

Stewed tomatoes go together with scrambled eggs. Especially nice is a rating scrambled eggs get with minced tongue, chicken or ham. Use them if you only have a half a cupful.

Sweeten fruit juices with sugar and thicken with one tablespoon of cornstarch. Yes, mighty good on hot puddings—cottage, apple, or brown betty puddings!

JESUS HEALS A MAN BORN BLIND

LESSON TEXT—John 9:1-38.
GOLDEN TEXT—"One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see."—John 9:25.

The love of Christ is seen in its full beauty against the background of man's hatred and unbelief. Last week we saw Him coming away from the stones with which his enemies sought to kill him. As He passed by He had the time and the compassion to stop and help a man who had been born blind. His disciples, afflicted in some degree with the speculative tendencies of their time, saw in this blighted life only an illustration of a theological theory about sin.

But Jesus, by a loving and gracious act, stirred in the heart of the man that faith which caused him to obey—to go, to wash, and to see (v. 7). The enemies of Christ were not willing to believe even what they now saw to be true. Their stubborn unbelief shut the door to blessing for them, but the blind man received three things by faith:

I. Healing (vv. 18-23).

The argument with the man's parents hinged on one point—he had been healed of his blindness. The parents were unwilling to risk excommunication by discussing the matter, but they did know that he had been blind and now could see. That was clear.

An experience like that is impossible to deny. The healing of the soul of man in regeneration is also a stubborn fact which deniers of God's Word and God's grace are unable to meet and overcome. The one who was blind and now could see had no questions about the deity of Christ and His saving power. What is more, he was not afraid to testify. He could "speak for himself" (v. 21).

Note the difference between the three classes here: Blind and stubborn unbelief (v. 18), faith too fearful to speak (v. 22), and the assured faith of the one healed. That is our next point.

II. Assurance (vv. 24-34).

The appeal of the Jews in verse 24 based on their statement: "We know that this man is a sinner," reminds us that there is no knowledge so absolute (and so absolutely wrong) as that of ignorance backed by self-conceit.

They said they knew, but did not. The man had complete assurance by faith and by experience. He did not argue (v. 24), he simply restated his healing. "I was blind—now I see." When they evaded that reply (for they dared not meet it), he thrust deep with the convicting fact that God does not perform His miracles in response to the prayers of a wicked man. That was too much for them, and they cast him out.

Even as the stupidity and stubborn willful unbelief of our Lord's enemies grew step by step, so also did the healed man's assurance grow as he testified. First he called the Lord "a man called Jesus" (v. 11); then "a prophet" (v. 17), and then at last, "the Son of God" (vv. 35-38).

Standing true to Christ and speaking for Him means growth in faith, in knowledge and in grace. It may mean persecution and even exclusion, but remember that when the man was cast out by the haters of Christ, he met Christ. "His excommunication was a promotion. He went from the synagogue to the Saviour" (Scroggie). And that is our third point.

III. Fellowship (vv. 35-38).

He did not know Jesus. He had heard His voice, but he was blind then and had not seen Him. He probably did not know where to find Him. Then, too, he was now an outcast under the disfavor of the authorities, and even his friends would fear to be seen with him.

But Jesus sought him. Ah, that's the glorious difference between our Lord and those who look at the outward appearance of things. He went to find the man who now needed fellowship, instruction and encouragement.

He had sought the man out to heal him, now He sought him again to help him spiritually. We need to learn of our Lord that we are not to wait until the sin and suffering of men force themselves upon our attention and force us to do something. We are to go out into the highways and the hedges and urge sinners to come to Christ. We have failed in this. We have built churches and expected the people to come, instead of going where the people are, and bringing them the gospel. The war is teaching us some lessons in that connection, but we are none too quick to learn and to act.

There is a beautiful touch in verse 37. Dr. Maclaren points out that when speaking to the woman of Samaria, Jesus said: "I that speak unto thee am he," but to the man who had just begun to see He said: "Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that speaketh to thee." The Christ who gave sight, now gives Himself to be seen.

YOUR rag bag contains the best possible material for making attractive pads for chairs and foot stools. These may be hooked in the same manner as rugs are made. Cut or tear old materials into strips and draw loops through either burlap or canvas with a rug hook as shown at the left. Either cotton, wool, silk or rayon may be used. The strips may be cut from three quarters to one and one-half inches wide, according to the weight of the material and how fine you wish the work to be. If some color is desired that you do not have on hand goods should be dyed to carry out your room color scheme.

You will find it easy to outline a simple flower design with wax crayon. Many people do successful hooking without a frame. Keeping EXTRA FUSES handy can shorten "homemade blackouts"

You may go along for months or even years without having any trouble with the fuses on your electric circuits. But when one does burn out because of a defective appliance cord, overloaded circuit or some other cause, it may happen at night, so it pays to be prepared.

You can save yourself annoyance from "home-made blackouts" by keeping extra fuses on hand and knowing how to use them. Then you can restore service quickly without waiting for a serviceman, who may be delayed in answering calls because of wartime restrictions on the use of cars and trucks.

Be sure to buy only fuses of correct size (15 amperes is right for most household branch circuits) and keep them handy where you can find them when you need them. Better stock up now as the scarcity of metals may limit the supply. Extra fuses for your electric circuits are even more important than a spare tire for your car.

We'll gladly show you how to locate and replace a burned-out fuse if you'll phone our office. We can't make a special trip for this purpose, but we'll answer your call as quickly as possible on a regular trip.

KENTUCKY'S LIQUOR BILL

For all Intoxicating Liquors. Year ending June 30, 1942.

28,658,696 gallons consumed - 10.05 gallons per capita

$66,696,905.75 spent by the drinkers - $23.43 per capita

Total whiskey consumption tax for the year was $2,906,746.05. Dividing this sum by $1.20, the state tax per gallon, we have 2,422,288 gallons. .85 of a gallon or 3.4 guarts per capita for the state's 2,845,627 people.

Taking an average retail price of $3.50 per quart, Kentucky's drinkers spent a total of $33,912,032.-00. for the 9,689,152 quarts of whiskey consumed. Doubtless, if all the sales per glass at 15c to 40c and fancy drinks could be figured, the total amount would be much higher.

The above does not take illicit or moonshine liquor into consideration. Authorities place this as high as 50% of all liquor consumed. Two years before Harlan county voted dry, an investigation by George T. Stewart of the State Alcoholic Control Board, revealed that 65% of all liquor sold there was illicit liquor. Before Caldwell county voted dry, police records in Princeton revealed that out of 60 men convicted for drunkenness in two months, 58 had gotton drunk on moonshine and only two on legal liquor.

The 3.4 quarts per capita consumed in the year ending June 30, 1942 showed a decrease compared with the 3.7 quarts for the year ending June 30, 1938. However, the consumption tax in 1938 was $1.04 compared with $1.20 in 1942. The state's population was 2,614,589 in 1938 compared with 2,845,627 in 1942. Thirty-two counties were dry during the year ending June 30, 1938 compared with 52, with a total dry population of 850,540 the year ending June 30, 1942.

The total beer consumption tax for the year ending June 30, 1942 was $1,234,233.28. Dividing this sum by $1.50, the state tax per barrel of 31 gallons we have 822,849 barrels, totaling 25,508,319 gallons or 102,033,276 quarts. 35.8 quarts or 8.95 gallons per capita for the 2,845,627 people in the state. (The per capita for 1938 was 7.8 gallons.)

With one-half of the above gallons of beer sold from the barrel in 8-oz. glasses at 5c and the other half from 12-oz. containers at an average price of 15c, Kentucky's beer bill last year was $30,600,607.-75. Probably more.

The total wine consumption tax for the year ending June 30, 1942 was $182,022.35 At 25c, the state tax pr gallon, we have 728,089 gallons or 2,912,356 quarts - .25 of a gallon or 1 quart per capita consumption. Averaging 75c per quart, Kentucky's wine bill last year was $2,184,266.00

If illicit liquor was figured in, it is generally conceded that Kentucky's liquor bill would be nearer $30.00 for every man, woman and child.

Kentucky's 10.05 gallons per capita consumption of all intoxicating liquors is one of the lowest in the Union and considerably below the National average of over 14 gallons per capita. This is doubtless, due to the constantly increasing dry territory.

For this staggering sum of $66,696,905.75 squandered for poison slop, the state received $9,157,255.-20 as her share of the tainted boodle. Cities, villages and counties paid out uncounted millions to take care of the drunks, paupers, criminals and insane. Other millions were worse than wasted through wrcks caused by drunken drivers. Thousands of homes were broken, causing untold misery and suffering. Vive and disease multiplied. Reputations, character and lives blasted and thousands of our best youth made drunkards. For all this tragic wreckage the law-defying liquor outfit got the money, the public the headache, and the taxpayers the bill. Are we follish or just plum crazy?

THE STORY SO FAR: Arriving simultaneously at the King Cole Ranch, Ann Lee and Cole Cody discovered Old Early Bill Cole had made two identical wills, one leaving all his money and the King Cole Ranch to Ann; and the other giving the same money and property to Cole. However, before his death, caused by a gun-shot wound from an unknown assailant, Old Bill had sent them each a key, which, to their amazement, they now found fitted two different locks on an old, black iron box. Opening the box they found two envelopes, each containing a five-hundred-dollar bill and a letter directing payment of the money to Doc Joe and the Judge in settlement of a lost bet. Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XI

Cal Roundtree told the story of Early Bill Cole very simply.

Cole Cody asked,

"When he came to making a will, then, he knew what he was doing? He wasn't delirious?"

"Not Early Bill," vowed Cal Roundtree. "When he stood up, aiming to die on his feet the same way he had lived, his old head was as clear as a bell. You could see it in his eyes. He had a pair of eyes like an eagle's."

"Then how in blazes was it that at one and the same time he gave all he had to me—and gave the same everything to Ann Lee? I've seen both wills, man, and that's how they read!"

Cal shook his head. "He was having him his fun, I reckon. Old Early Bill, come rain or shine, was always a great hand for having him his own fun in his own way." He thought a moment. "Say! It might be that this way he was making sure that you and Miss Ann would marry each other! Maybe that's the way he wanted it!"

"Then you're wrong about him not being crazy," snorted Cole Cody.

They sat silent a little while, soaking in the sunshine. Presently they fell to talking of this and that as men, strangers to each other and thrown together, will, and so it chanced that the attempted stage robbery of the day before was mentioned. And so Cal Roundtree learned that the attack had been made against Bucktooth Jenkins, and that Jenkins was now lying in bed at Bald Eagle, pretty well shot up.

"Did they get the money Bucktooth was carrying?" Cal Roundtree asked anxiously.

"They didn't get anything, unless one of them got a bullet in him. I couldn't be sure, it was that dark. We all wondered what Bucktooth was carrying that they wanted."

"He was carrying ten thousand dollars in hard and folding money," said Cal. "It was money he had gone to collect for Early Bill, and he was bringing it home. I know because Early Bill showed me the letter Bucktooth had wrote him; the letter said he had collected all right but was staying over a couple of days to visit some relations of his at the old trading post down over by Tilton; said he'd be along on yesterday's stage, bringing the ten thousand bucks with him. But how the devil did anybody else find out about it? Bucktooth ain't a man to gab. Early Bill showed me the letter because when it come he was near blind with pain, and he just snapped at me like this, 'Oh, hell, it ain't anything if it's from that fool Bucktooth. Just about whether he did as I told him or fell down on it. Here, read it to me, Cal,' and he stuck on to that, same as usual, 'If you can read!' So I read it, and left it lying on his table when he chased me out to bring him a drink."

"You left it on the table, huh? He probably left it on the table.—What do you know about this Rance Waldron hombre anyhow?"

"Nothing. Except I don't like the way he wears his face."

"He could have found the letter and acted on it.

"About it being Waldron, I bet it was! He's been in and out of Bald Eagle a time or two, and from what I hear he ain't got a two-bit piece to his name. And I wouldn't put him above hog-stealing. But where he'd find a side-kick in a game like this, him being a Johnny-come-lately hereabouts, I wouldn't know."

"Just who is Bucktooth Jenkins, anyhow? How come that Early Bill sent him on an errand such as that?"

"Bucktooth has been old Bill's handy-man for years. He lived in that little shack over yonder." Cal pointed to one of the several small adobes half hidden by the low drooping branches of a live oak. "He's a good man and game, and always carried out orders the way he got 'em. Later I'll be riding into town to see how he's making out. If he gets well he ought to be back here, no matter who owns the place."

"I'd sort of like to look the ranch over, to see what it's like," said Cody wistfully. "But I suppose, the shape I'm in, a horse would shake me plumb to pieces."

"I'll hitch up the buckboard, if you say the word, Cody. A buckboard can go most any place, you know."

It was while they were giving the matter thought that a man came riding to them from the country road, ignoring the ranch house and striking straight for the two on the log. First Cole Cody recognised the palomino, then the rider, and waved. Here came little Porfirio Lopez whom he had left last night in town.

Porfirio's white teeth gleamed in a wide grin as he pulled his horse up in front of them.

"Light down, Porfirio," invited Cody, "and make yourself at home."

Porfirio swung down lightly, was introduced to Cal Roundtree who shook hands without getting up to do so, an unnecessary effort anyhow, seated himself beside his amigo Cole Cody, and the three chatted. Porfirio had come, it appeared, for more than one reason: He wanted to visit the grave of the poor old Senor Beel Cole; he meant to pick some wild flowers by the creek and place them there with his own two hands. Also, he had thought that he might find his amigo Cole Cody here. Third, his heavy black brows drawn down like the shadow of a thundercloud, he wanted to poke his nose into things here, to find out things for himself, to be like a hunting dog, maybe to learn what cabrone it was who had shot Early Bill.

"I would kill him like that!" he exclaimed and crushed an acorn with the high heel of his boot.

Cody explained to Cal Roundtree all about Porfirio.

"He sold his little ranch to come here. I'd like him to stay a while. If I take over, he's on my pay roll. Anyhow he might hole-up here a few days?"

Cal shrugged.

"Me, not owning the place, I can't hire a man," he said. "Likewise,

"Run, if that's what you got in your hearts."

not owning it, I've got no rights chasing a man off. As far as I go, Porfirio is welcome to stick around until his feet itch to be traveling."

Porfirio smiled. "But I do not travel on my feets, Senor!"

"It's a darn shame," said Cole Cody, half smiling and half inclined to sigh over the thing, "that the old boy can't be with us, watching all the little merry hell he's kicked up."

Cal sat silent a little while, gently stirring the dirt with the toe of his boot.

"It's not a day for sitting still," said Cody, and stood up. "That's a great idea of yours, Cal, about the buckboard."

"Suits me," said Cal. "Here we go."

He roped two lively young bays in the corral, harness-broke, and after a minor tussle with them got them harnessed and hitched to the buckboard while Cody held the reins. Cal took the reins into his own hands as he climbed up over the wheel, said to his team a quiet, "Run, blast you, if that's what you've got in your hearts," and swung them into the sketch of a road leading down into the valley. Porfirio Lopez, not to be left alone with his thoughts and problems, rode alongside.

It was a glorious morning such as early summer, still brushing fingers with springtime, brings to this land of gentle hills and small valleys under the steep and rugged barrier of the blue mountains, and the breeze blowing in their faces was sweet with the resinous incense of pines, the spicy whiff of sage, the "green smell" of rich young grass and wild flowers and the many green things growing.

It was nearly noon when they returned to ranch headquarters. Cole Cody left Porfirio and Cal Roundtree taking care of the horses, and made his way slowly up to the house. He was tired from the trip which no doctor would have consented to, and his present yearning was for a quiet room with a bed in it. Passing a window he got a glimpse of little Ann Lee; their eyes met fleetingly and he marked in passing that her eyes looked bigger than ever and that her face was very serious. He lifted his hat and went on to his corner of the house; he had no way of telling that she had been shocked by the deadly pallor of his face, its haggard, drawn look—and by her stabbing realization that it had been her hand to make him like this. If he should die—

The afternoon passed lingeringly. There was so much to think about, so little to do about any part of it. For the most part, Cole Cody lay in his room, fatigued and weakened by his jaunt in the buckboard; Rance Waldron kept to his rooms, seldom emerging and always, as Aunt Jenifer took pains to note, leaving a locked door behind him. Aunt Jenifer herself did a bit of snooping all over the place but mostly in the neighborhood of Waldron's quarters. As for Ann Lee, she sat in the patio dreaming dreams of the future, thinking of the immediate past, mourning about her benefactor, Early Bill.

Not long after the lamps were lit all gathered around the dining table when Aunt Jenifer rang the hand bell for supper. Again the meal was excellent and attacked as at dinner; again conversation died aborning. In fact, had it not been for Aunt Jenifer's few cheery remarks, there would probably not have been so much as a "Please pass the potatoes," remark. At the end of this feast of silence and flow of distrust, Cole Cody again said some sort of polite thanks and went to his room. After Cody's departure, Rance Waldron sat a little while over his coffee, smoking a cigarette, and made some small endeavor to be agreeable. Aunt Jenifer did not like the man, and made him the curtest replies before she got up to clear the dishes away; Ann Lee seemed absent minded; she said, "What did you say?" twice to remarks of his; he was not long in saying his own good night and going to his room.

Ann Lee patted a yawn; they had been up early, it had been quite a day and she was sleepy already.

"Go to bed, Kitten," said Aunt Jenifer. "I'll do the dishes and follow along in two shakes."

Ann carried her lamp through quiet empty rooms where shadows seemed to come out of corners and from under tables and chairs, and scurry away like frightened things. In her room it was very still, and the starshine came in through the iron grilles of her open windows. She drew the shades down, undressed and slipped into her nightgown and into her big bed almost with one gesture and passed gently from daydream to the land of night's dreams.

And Aunt Jenifer, as wide awake as any cat at any mouse hole, sat for a long while on the green bench, and her head was tipped at an angle that indicates the head's owner is listening intently for the slightest sound. Thus an hour passed; and the night was still. At even the slightest sound, she started; when she heard the faint creak of a board within the house, she clutched the edges of her bench with both hands, ready to spring up. But she knew the way of old houses; how in the night for no reason on earth that she knew, the ancient floorboards would creak like that; sometimes she had treated herself to the thrill of thinking, "There goes a ghost!" Now she just sat back and continued to wait.

Long ago little Ann Lee was fast asleep, or she would have been out here seeking her. Aunt Jenifer stole out of her secret place and crept like an agile small shadow out to one of the big live oaks not more than 50 yards from Rance Waldron's outer door. Under the thick branched tree, heavy with young foliage, it was black dark; here she established herself, seated on the ground, leaning back against the gnarled trunk.

At last even Aunt Jenifer began to yawn and her eyelids to grow so heavy that it required pounds of effort and the final exercise of her will power to get them lifted. But when at last she heard the sound she had waited for so long, her eyes flew wide open of their own accord and she was as wide awake as a child early on Christmas Eve.

The creaking this time was no ghostly creaking; it told of a door being slowly opened on rusty hinges. It was the door from one of Rance Waldron's rooms. And the steps she heard were no ghostly tread; two men, with the door softly closed and locked after them, were coming out, and one of the men walked scuffingly as though he dragged an injured leg after him.

She hid as best she could behind the dark old oak tree, peering out to see what she could see. The night was clear and there was light enough for her to be sure of two things: One of the men was a stranger to her, and he was hurt or sick. The other man was helping him along, and was Rance Waldron. She sniffed. "As though he could fool me, with someone hid in his part of the house. Well, I know now it's a man and not some fool girl he's hiding out."

She strove with all her ears to hear what was said between them, but they spoke a few words only those in lowered voices. She saw them move, one man lurching and the other supporting him, toward the group of ranch buildings at the foot of the slope, and furtively she followed them. She saw that Waldron had a couple of horses hid in a willow thicket just across the creek; she watched him help his companion up into the saddle; she saw them ride away, heading north, and hastening, then she turned and ran back to the house.

Sportlight

BY GRANTLAND RICE

IF THERE has been a part of sport badly overdone, the prize goes to the length given to spring training in the major leagues.

This applies especially to the long list of exhibition games played along the route back home.

If owners and managers don't know this, the ballplayers do. Few ballplayers facing a 154-game schedule can handle 35 extra games without going stale. Two weeks' training should be plenty if the ballplayer keeps in fairly good condition through the winter.

Grantland Rice

I've heard several club owners and managers admit this, but they feel they must string along with the others, largely through alleged publicity values.

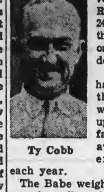
Training at home through a shorter period isn't going to hurt the quality of play.

The Case of Ty Cobb

I asked Ty Cobb one year why he had held out so long. "Money had nothing to do with it," he said. "I simply didn't want to wear myself out with too much spring training. Take my season in 1911. I held out that year and finally reported at Terre Haute on April 6. This left me about ten days to get ready. That year I batted .420 and stole 96 bases. I was still fresh and feeling good through the last week, where some of the others had gone stale."

Cobb handled fewer training days than any other big-time ballplayer.

This partly accounts for the fact that he was able to move at top speed for 24 years.



Cobb kept in condition by hunting most of the winter. His legs were always ready to give him the transportation he wanted.

If Cobb had reported late in February or early March, season after season, he would have lost at least four years from his playing time.

For Cobb only knew how to play the game one way—at top speed.

Exceptions

I'll admit, Cobb was an exception. So was Babe Ruth. One of the all-time sporting marvels is the way Babe Ruth carried his 240-pound system through 20 seasons on a brace of slender ankles.

Ty Cobb

Each year you had the feeling those thin ankle props were going to crack up, considering the fact that Ruth also averaged at least 30 exhibition games each year.

The Babe weighed 253 pounds the year he collected his 60 home runs, from 15 to 20 pounds over his normal displacement.

"I had enough left that year to hit 'em a little harder," the Babe tells you. And he also feels certain he could have added a husky batch of extra homers if he hadn't been called on for so much exhibition play.

It has always been my belief that major league seasons start too early and last too long.

The season should be condensed, adding the necessary doubleheaders to fill out.

In Shape

There is no reason why a ball club can't get in good shape in its home town in three weeks' time.

It might not be quite as sharp the first week or two, but it will be better off from July on.

Baseball's main problem this next season isn't going to be a matter of training.

It is going to be a matter of getting enough ballplayers to round up a squad.

If this part of the problem can be handled, it is more than probable that both pennant races will be closer and better.

Year after year we've seen the American league pennant race over by early August.

This means two months of waste action so far as general interest in the pennant is concerned. It is like playing out the bye-holes in a golf match.

National league races have been closer, but for the last two seasons they have been strictly two-team contests.

This means that 13 out of the 16 big league clubs might as well be selling peanuts after July.

Closer Race

There is a chance under the new order that a greater number of teams will be better matched and that cities outside of New York, Brooklyn and St. Louis will have a chance to look at home clubs that are parked within reach of the top.

At least, some of these teams won't be 40 and 50 games away from the front.

The closeness of the race will bring a new interest to baseball—one that is needed.

Texas Flower

The bluebonnet, official flower of Texas, was earlier called buffalo clover, wolfflower, and the "rabbit"—"el conejo"—the last because of the white tip's resemblance to a rabbit's tail. It was given its present name because it suggests a woman's sunbonnet.

Stationary Clouds

Clouds sometimes remain stationary for such long periods that they are given individual names. One example is a large, low formation that appears over the Rock of Gibraltar and does not move for as long as 12 days.

Because it is created by moist winds from the eastern Mediterranean, it is known as "The Levant."

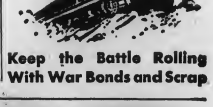
SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Reclaimed rubber is the product resulting from the processing of scrap rubber. It is prepared from used rubber articles that are cleaned, purified and made plastic for re-use in rubber manufacturing.



Crude rubber in 1899 was selling at $2,200 a ton. At the 1925 high was selling at $2,750.20 per long ton.

Engineers have designed the tires for one of the army's jeeps to resemble the camel's tread, nature's provision for support on shifting sand.

A commercial user of tires reported that an Ameripol synthetic rubber tire used on a light truck returned over 35,300 miles before it was recapped. This tire, with 21 others, was placed in test service early in 1941.

A 35,000-ton battleship required 162,000 pounds of rubber.

Jobless Benefit Payments are Lowest Since Benefits Were First Paid in January 1939.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb—(Special) Executive Director V. E. Barnes of the state Unemployment Compensation Commission today announced that during 1942 unemployed Kentucky workers received a total of $2,380,148 in jobless benefit payments, the lowest annual figure since benifits were first paid in January, 1939.

This figure brought to $14,830,815 the total amount of jobless benifits paid by the Commission from January 1, 1939 through December 31, 1942 and left a net balance of $52,241 378 in the Commission's benifit fund as of that date.

Jobless workers in Jefferson county received $856,980 during the year, or more than one-third of the entire state total. Twenty, or one sixth of the counties, received $1,806,438 or approximately three-fourths of the state total. They are, in addition to Jefferson, and ranked according to payment amount, as follows: Fayette county, $132,496; Boyd, $92,644; Graes, $72,231; Daviess, $70,390; Muhlenberg, $61,318; Franklin, $37,379; Pike, $36,482; Hardin, $6,012; Christian, $34,479; Floyd, $32,546; Harlan, $31,999; Edmonson, $31 494; Warren, $29,877 and Perry, $29,714.

Ranking lowest in total payment amount were Gallatin county, with $74, and Elliott county with $232.

December benefit payments totaled $106,420 an increase of 7.4 per cent over November's figure of $99,100.

Farmers Must Get In Touch With their County Agricultural Board When They Decide to Purchase Farm Machinery.

Louisville, Ky., Jan.—This is a reminder to farm residents in Kentucky that they must get in touch with their County Agricultural War Board when they decide to purchase farm machinery or equipment. According to H. Dale Rue, District Manager of the War Production Board, many farmers have been making application to their local rationing boards or to the War Production Board, due to a misunderstanding of requirements.

"Farmers should remember", Rue said, "to get in touch with the Agriculture War Board in their home county whenever they wish to purchase any type of machinery or equipment for the farm or farm home".

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

A 4-H club in Simpson county is making articles to use in food production, such as chick feeders, hog troughs, hand scoops and self-feeders.

Two-thirds of the strawberries grown in Mulenberg county last year were Aromas and one-third were Blakemores.

Twenty-two 4-H club members in Boyle county are feeding 49 calves, exceeding last year's number by 17.

Homemakers' clubs in Hardin county made cookies for the U. S. O. during the holidays.

Arvin Bros. of Christian county seeded Ky. 31 meadows fescue and found that it withstood freezing and thawing better than did rye grass.

In Hopkins county, the labor shortage is so acute that farmers will probably have to reduce their farming operations.

Sixty-two women in Webster county reported reading books secured through the homemakers' clubs.

The Four-mile 4-H club in Harlan county reported that 100 percent of its members had bought war stamps and bonds.

Burlington Home Destroyed by Fire

Fire of an unknown origin routed the family of Galen Kelly, cashier of the Burlington Bank, from his home about 10:30 p. m.

The blaze which began in the attic of the home in the heart of Burlington spread with such rapidity that there was no effort made to extinguish it by the Florence and Hebron fire departments.

Loss of the building and its contents was estimated at $7,000. The home had recently been remodeled by Mr. Kelly, with a new heating plant., new bath and new hot-water system installed. It was said to be one of the finest homes in the town.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly fled from the house clad in their night clothes, with only overcoats to protect them from the sub-zero temperature. James Senour, father-in-law of Mr. Kelly, who has been a semi-invalid from a stroke, was carried from the home by his son-in-law and H. R. Forkner, Boone County Farm Agent, who lives across the street.

Senour was taken to the home of Dr. Harold Keeney, Erlanger, a relative, where he is now staying. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly went to the home of Mrs. Jess Eddins, Burlington, sister of Mr. Kelly.

Neighbors succeeded in saving some of the furniture on the first floor of the home before the roof caved in.

Sunday, February 21st Is Woman's Day at The Christian Church.

On Woman's Day, Sunday Feb. 21st, Dr. C. H. Plopper, Disciple Missionary to China, will be guest speaker in the morning worship hour. Dr. Plopper is, at present, Professor of Missions at Transylvania College, Lexintgon. He has taught in China's universities, and knows well the culture of that ancient land. He is personally acquainted with China at war, having returned to the United States only last year.

Woman's Day is observed in recognition of the work of women in the world missions of the Church of Christ. Representatives of the local Woman's Missionary Society will receive the morning offer.

Food For Thought:

"China body was never nearer hell than it is today but her soul was never nearer God than today"
—A Chinese Christian.

"While the war is at its worst, the church must be at its best."

Timely Reminders for Kenton Co. Farmers

Time to Reseed Old Pastures and Meadows

Improve the productivity of your pasture by using the following practices:

1. Patch the bare spots.
2. Reseed the thin stands.
3. Fertilize the poor soil.
4. Use groundlimestone on acid land.
5. Sow plenty of grass and legume seed.
6. Sow dependable kinds of plants.
7. Don't guess when buying seed—Study the seed tag and see what you are buying. Look at both sides of the tag.

According to Ralph Kenney and E. N. Fergus, from the Aronomy Department, College of Agriulture Lexington, Ky. it is estimated that Kentucky farmers, in order to meet the demand for more meat and more milk we need to reseed or improve about 2 or three million acres of grassland in the state.

This winter has damaged much of our hay and meadow fields so that pasture will have to produce more feed to help carry the livestock.

Mr. Kenney and Mr. Fergus state in a seeding leaflet that it is a good time to reseed grassland in Northern Ky. from February 1, to April 30. And that best results can be expected on the average, by sowing in February and March.

Legumes Needed in Most Pastures

Most pastures are lacking in legumes. Legumes are necessary to build up the nitrogen supply for the good growth of grass.

Korean lespedeza is a good legume to seed in most pastures where patching and reseeding is neded. Where it is seeded for the first time on the land, the seed should be inoculated.

Ground Limestone & Phosphate

The use of ground limestone and phosphate should be used on pasture land where needed. The value of lime and phosphate treatment on pasture land is greater than many farmers realize.

Tests Prove Value

Tests conducted by the Experiment Station in parts of Kentucky show great increase in the yield of pasture where ground limestone was used and also large increase where phosphate was used. But the increase was more where both lime and phosphate was used. This is especially true on the soils that are acid and needed lime and, phosphate. See your Agricultural Extension Agent for leaflet on seeding mixtures for improving your grassland and meadows.

You can save feed and labor by improving the productivity of your pasture land. Pasture is one of the most profitable crops you grow on your farm, why not invest a little in reseeding this important crop, each year. Seed in the spring and reseed again in the fall. It is an important contribution to the feed production on your farm and is important in the food production program and will contribute to the War Effort.

Kenton 4-H Boy Wins Garden Contest

According to J. W. Whitehouse, state leader of 4-H club work in Kentucky, Charles Brown, 4-H member from the Bracht section of Kenton county has been placed in the blue ribbon group in the State 4-H Garden Contest sponsored by Sears, Roebuck & Co.

This company has awarded Charles Brown a $25.00 U. S. War Savings Bond in recognition of his achievement in the 4-H garden project for 1942. Charles was County Champion, and State champion for Kentucky and this award is the result of his participation in the National contest, held in Chicago, under the supervision of the National 4-H Club Committee.

Charles has been active in 4-H club work in the county for the past 9 years and has carried other 4-H projects in addition to Garden Projects during this time. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Winston C. Brown.

Charles is attending the Simon Kenton High School.

NAMES TO BE ADDED TO SERVICE ROLL

There are several names yet to be added to the Walton Honor Board—Will the parents or relatives of the boys from Walton called into the Service since the errection of the Honor Board please notify Mrs. Clayton Jones, Walton—Phone 165.

Methodist Church To Observe Layman's Day

Laymen of Walton Methodist church of Walton, Ky. will participate in a nation-wide observance of Laymen's Day on Sunday, February 21, as part of the perparatory program for Methodism's Week of Dedication which begins February 28.

"Methodist Men in World Reconstruction" is the theme which will be used by lay speakers in every state, according to the Rev. C. G. Dearing who anounced local plans.

Emphasis will be given by the lay speakers to the importance of rededication of "self, service and substance" on the part of Methodist during the Week of Dedication, which is to be a spiritual and financial response of the 8,000,000 members to the needs of a war-torn world.

In addition to the more than 40,000 laymen who will take leadership in church services next Sunday, many more will speak from pulpits on the following two Sundays. Thousands of laymen also have spoken in local church pulpits since the first of the year as "minute-men" for the Week of Dedication. It has been estimated by Dr. George L. Morelock of Chicago, executive secreatry of the Methodist Board of Lay Activities, that 86.000 laymen have participated in this program.

On March 7, when the Week of Dedication will close with personal commitments, every one of the 42,000 Methodist churches will be open for services, with laymen occupying pulpits in churches on circuits where the pastor is unable to be present.

"The world crisis of the present hour," declared Mr. Dearing, "demands a new sense of stewardship and consecration of self and money on the part of Methodists and members of all Christian bodies. Laymen's Day provides the opportunity to the laymen of our church to make their voice heard and their influence felt for the building of a better world."

The following laymen will be the speakers in the local Methodist church next Sunday morning: Chas. Carlisle, Reamy Simpson, Clifford Pruitt, Dan Bedinger, and Sam Hudson.

Farm Bureau Banquet Friday, March 12th

The first annual Boone County farm Bureau Banquet will be held at Burlington school on Friday, March 12, according to Lloyd Sieckman, president of the county organization. Dinner for the meeting will be served by the Burlington Parent Teachers' Association and music will be furnished by members of Burlington school band.

Alexander H. Colvert, president of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation will be a principal speaker on the program. His discussion will be supplemented with short talks by members of the local farm Bureau and members of adjoining county Farm Bureau organization.

The banquet dinner will be served at 75 cents per plate. All farmers, whether Farm Bureau members or not, are invited to bring their family and attend. The Farm Bureau program and single membership includes all members of the family.

Walton Homemakers

The Walton Homemakers Club met with Mrs. Elizabeth Gross on Friday afternoon, February 12th. Fourteen members answered Roll-call with some helpful House-hold hint. The president, Mrs. Hope Vest presided over the meeting, after the business was transacted. The lesson on "Setting in Sleeves" and "How to' Dye and Wash Wools, Rayons and Etc." was given by Mrs. D. L. Lusby and Mrs John C. Bedinger. The interesting feature for the afternoon was reports of the State Convention at Lexington, given by Mrs. Hope Vest and Mrs. Mary Scott Moore, touching upon the interesting points from some of the outstanding speakers who attended the convention. Mrs. Moore says community Rerecation will be one of the problems for the Homemakers. A vote was taken and seconded, oweing to the Food Problem to hold or meetings in the afternoons beginning at 2 o'clock. The place of meeting for March to be announced later

GIVE GOOD BOOKS, GIVE MORE BOOKS

The purpose of the 1943 Victory Book Campaign is to provide good books for the U. S. O. Centers.

Remember the fighting man of today is still your neighbor of yesterday and tomorrow. He likes to read the same books that every American, man or woman likes. Among the popular fiction, Mystrey stories seem to rank first. Poetry, also has a place on the preferred list.

To our fighting men in all branches of the service—give good books—give more books.

Happy Helpers Class of Methodist Church Meet.

The Happy Helpers Class of the Methodist Church School was delightfully entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Bedinger with Miss Rebecca Sleet as hostess on Tuesday evening, Feb. 9th.

The meeting was in charge of Miss Sleet who is president of the class. Mrs. Carlisle read a scripture lesson from the 91st Psalm, Miss Sleet's topic being "Every Day Living." A poem was read by Mrs. E. B. Wallace and quotations from great men were given by Miss Emma Jane Miller. Prayer was offered by Rev. C. G. Dearing. Upon request, Miss Mary Ella Bedinger a guest of Miss Sleet, gave an interesting report of her work at the Episcopalian Mission at Charottesville, Virginia.

At the close of the program games or valentine stunts were enjoyed.

Those present were: Miss Mary Ella Bedinger, Rev. D. E. Bedinger, teacher of the class, Rev. C. G. Dearing, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Walace, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Pruett Mrs. Faye Conner, Mrs. Myrtle Carlisle, Miss Florence Dorsey, Mrs. Helen Bedinger, Mrs. Mary Stephenson and Joe, Miss Emma Jane Miller, Mrs. Hattie Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bedinger and Miss Rebecca Sleet the hostess.

Miss Sleet assisted by Mrs. Bedinger served a lovely salad plate with punch.

Special Notice To All Boone County

By Mrs. Della B. Dills, Public Relation Officer.

In a recent survey conducted, show that housewives and school children of elementary age do more than 95% of all family food buying. This survey shows that children buy at least 80% of the family food under ($1.00). This is putting it very plainly who will be responsible for the sucess of the NEW POINT RATIONING SYSTEM. We now have our brave women in the services of nearly all the military branches and defense industries and they have already proven themselves to be capable of all the tasks that are assigned them.

Our Office of Price Administration Has Asked Just One Favor More of Us.

USE OUR CAN-OPNER VERY LITTLE. We can do this by buying fresh vegetables and fresh fruits in season and continue feeding our families the same good wholesome food they are accustomened to. In reverting to this manner, we are going to help on the HOME FRONT, to feed our brave sons, brothers, husbands, fathers and nephews and all the loved ones who are now scattered through-out the whole world, who must have good wholesome food and the very best, to be capable of the duties assigned to them. This food must be prepared in cans before it can be shipped. We housewives can use less can goods and prepare our meals with fresh vegetables and fruits that are seasonable and budget our point rationing buying wisely.

Over radio station W L W on each Sunday at 5:30 P. M. there will be a school of instruction from the OPA, Washington S. C., conducted by the most emenent authority of Point Rationing. We shall be able to hear direct all the new and helpful information from former Senator Prentice Brown, who is now head of OPA, at Washington. Rember to tune in and hear the experts discuss "Reports on Rationing."

INFORMATION ON POINT

The BLUE STAMPS are to be used for all canned, bottled fruits, vegetables, juices, soups, frozen fruits and vegetables and all dried fruits. None of the above foods will be sold without Blue Stamps from your Ration Book No. 2. The numbers on each blue stamp show how many points it is worth. The letters on each Blue Stamp will show WHEN to use them.

Letters A B C are to be used in first rationing period.

Sugar Stamp No. 11 is good for (3) pounds through March 15; Coffee Stamp No. 25 is good through March 21.

SPECIAL NOTICE: All the B and C renewals for gasoline must be in by the 20th of February. Applications can be obtained from your local banker or at the Ration Board. ALL TIRE INSPECTION sheet must acompany the applications for renewals. IT IS NOT NECESSARY TO COME TO THE RATION BOARD FOR RENEWALS FOR GASOLINE. THE BOARD WILL MAIL THEM TO YOU ON REQUEST BY TELEPHONE. our new Ration Book will be mailed to you about five days before expiration date.

Bearcats Defeat Simon-Kenton 39-37

The Walton-Verona Bearcats led by DeMoisey and Pennington downed Simon-Kenton on the losers floor Tuesday nite. The score throughout the game was close, with the Bearcats leading 13 to 5 at the first quarter, then Simon-Kenton started gaining on our boys and at the half were ahead 19 to 18, at the third quarter the score was tied at 27 all.

In the fourth quarter the score went back and forth until the last few seconds of the game when Pennington, Bearcat forward made a field goal, this was all the boys needed to bring back another victory.

DeMoisey and Pennington were high point men for the Bearcats with 15 and 8, Breeden and Sterling were high for Simon-Kenton with 11 and 9 each.

Care Required to Take Soil Samples

Frequent notices have been given in the press and on the radio in the past two or three years that soil samples will not be analyzed by the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington unless taken according to directions furnished by the Experiment Sta. and accompained by information asked for in the directions. Notwithstanding these notices, many samples are received without any information whatever as to how they were taken, and most of them show that they were not properly taken. A sample not properly taken may not be representative of the field or lot, and advice given on the basis of the analysis may be erroneous and expensive for the field or lot as a whole.

PRIMING PAYS

It cost I. G. Smith of Russell county, Kentucky, $15 to prime an acre of tobacco, a process whereby he gathered 520 pounds from the stalk in the field. These 520 pounds sold for $245. His total yeild from the acre was 1,718 pounds for which he received an average of $49 a hundred.

PATCH RETURNS $622

Robert Hendricks of Breckinridge county, Kentucky, reports net returns of $622 from 1,258 pounds of burley tobacco grown on four-tentrs of an acre. All but three rows was Ky. 16. Mr. Hendricks says he lost $20 by not having Ky. 16 in the three rows. County Agent Kenneth Brabant notes that a ton and a quarter of fertilizer has been used on the four-tenths of an acre in the past three years, and crimson clover has been turned under each year.

IMPROVES YEILDS

How Alex McIlvaine of Fleming county, Kentucky, in three years so improved land that it produced almost five times as much, is told by County Agent James I. Stephens. In 1939 the acre and a half produced tobacco that sold for $199. Mr. McIlvaine then began to turn under grain and vetch and apply phosphate. In 1940 the field produced $300 worth of tobaco; in 1941, $600 was received for the tobacco, and the 1942 crop sold for $991.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Milk production has fallen off in Carter county, due to shortage of protein supplements in the cows' rations.

Fourteen purebred sows and 40 calves have been purchased by 4-H club members in Casey county.

Members of homemakers' clubs in Jessamine county have been learning how to patch overalls and other work clothes.

Chilton Neal of Estill county is planning to grow 50 acres of seed hemp. The county's allotment is 250 acres.

Faced by shortages of feeds, farmers in Breckinridge county have ordered six carloads of wheat.

At the Warren county 4-H club tobacco show, 12 Negro boys sold 4,998 pounds of tobaco for $2,001.49.

High egg prices are booming the chicken business in Harlan county.

Darrell Brewer, Christian county 4-H club boy, made a net profit of $22.80 from a patch of popcorn.

Families in Logan and Todd counties are buying garden seeds in groups of six families. They also will share work.

To stimulate production, the Hardin county farm machinery committee has approved orders for milking machines and fencing.

The Lewis county planning committee is urging two broods of chicks -- one in April for eggs and one in May and June for meat.

Farmers in Metcalfe county have decided on 300 acres as their hemp-growing goal.

A plan to promote sheep raising among Wayne county includes bringing in several carloads of westen ewes.

TRANSPORTATION is the backbone of any military effort. A No. 1 soldier, faithfully serving the nation's greatest war effort, is the man in the blue-grey uniform, the man most travelers know and admire . . . your Greyhound driver.

His job today of keeping military and essential civilian travelers on the move is no easy one, but he tackles it with eagerness and efficiency. Just watch his easy handling of the ever-growing, ever-crowding travel picture . . . his generalship, his untiring courtesy, his all-round ability to meet today's complex travel conditions. You can bet it takes a lot of basic training and schooled experience to turn out a veteran like that.

Greyhound is mighty proud of its men at the wheel . . . soldiers on America's Transportation Front. They're doing their part in winning the war.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Russ Trap German Army in Caucasus; March 15 Remains Tax Deadline as Congress Plans Pay-as-You-Go Later; Labor Demands Increased Wage Scale

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
—Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Three fighting American generals who led their forces against the Japs and were wounded in action in New Guinea are shown convalescing in an Australian hospital. Left to right are shown Brigadier Generals Hanford MacNider, Albert Whitney Waldron and Clovis E. Byers.

WAGES & PRICES:
Labor Looks Upward

Organized labor's clash with the government over wage controls drew disquietingly closer as the American Federation of Labor, the CIO and John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers made known their stand.

Conferring at the White House, William Green, AFL president, and Phillip Murray, CIO chief, protested to President Roosevelt that the cost of living was "getting out of bounds" and said that there was increasing dissatisfaction among labor's rank and file.

Previously, bushy-browed Lewis had announced a demand for a $2 a day pay increase in the bituminous coal industry, effective April 1.

The impending crisis in wage control was further emphasized when the War Labor board beset by increasing demands for pay increases asked Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes whether the "Little Steel" wage ceiling formula should be revised upward. This yardstick which has been applied to numerous industries allowed the WLB to grant wage increases of 15 per cent above the levels of January 1, 1941, and was designed to matching rising living costs between that date and May 1, 1942.

This problem was dropped in Mr. Byrnes' lap, because any upward wage revision would have consumer repercussions and jeopardize the administration's entire wage stabilization and price pegging program.

INCOME TAX:
March 15 Still Deadline

Neither the Ruml plan to "forgive" all taxes on 1942 income, nor the U. S. treasury department's proposal to double up collections of both 1942 and 1943 taxes will be adopted, members of the house ways and means committee definitely indicated.

One fact appeared certain. Forty-four million American taxpayers will be compelled to file income tax returns by the March 15 deadline, on the basis of 1942 income.

A pay-as-you-go withholding tax procedure will be set up later. Most observers predicted July 1 as the date. This apparently would be a compromise measure embodying some but not all of the Ruml proposals and the treasury's recommendations.

FARM LABOR:
Army to Help?

Many a Washington official has lain awake nights trying to find a solution for the critical farm labor shortage.

Latest suggestion for relieving the shortage is to apply a method used by Union and Confederate armies in the Civil war—furlough soldiers with farm experience to help with harvests and other seasonal farm jobs.

Observers believed that creation of this farm army would be undertaken jointly by the war department and the War Manpower commission and the department of agriculture. It was estimated that 500,000 soldiers might be detailed for this needed task.

Alternately under consideration by top manpower authorities was a proposal to utilize battalions of army men still on military assignment for farm work.

NAZI TWILIGHT:
Darkened by Russ

While the strains of Wagner's funereal Gotterdaemmerung on Berlin radios had proclaimed to the Reich the melancholy tidings of Nazi disaster at Stalingrad, this requiem was regarded by many observers as only a prelude to more woeful news ahead.

For it had become increasingly clear that the German retreat in Russia had long since passed the stage of an orderly withdrawal and had reached the proportions of a rout in many places. Relentlessly the Russians had built up their offensive's momentum, smashing into the Ukraine, narrowing the circle around Rostov and threatening Hitler's harassed Caucasus forces with a Black sea Dunkirk at Novorossisk.

Matter-of-fact Soviet communiques told the story of German reverses. These included the reoccupation by Red troops of Zolotukhino, only 22 miles above Kursk on the Kursk-Orel railroad, thus cutting the main Nazi supply line to the north; the recapture of Kupyansk and with it the control of an entire rail network; and the seizure of Kuschevskaya, below Rostov on the Rostov-Baku railway, the biggest system in the Caucasus.

The loss of Kuschevskaya was particularly bitter to the Nazis. Russ possession of this city which commands a railroad spur leading to the Black sea, threatened to isolate huge German forces already under attack at Novorossisk, the large Nazi-held port on that sea. It had been believed Hitler would try to use Novorossisk for the evacuation of his Caucasian army if Rostov were regained by the Russians.

SOLOMONS:
Nipponese Persistent

Only occasionally during the latest air-sea battle between American forces and their Jap enemies for control of the southern Solomons was the curtain of official secrecy raised. First American reports were necessarily noncommittal to keep useful information from the enemy.

The Japs used a "reverse English" technique in reporting the battle. This consisted of radio announcements telling of overwhelming American naval superiority in the Guadalcanal area, of the presence of 10 American warships and 10 aircraft carriers. By employing such fantastic figures, observers believed the Jap high command was preparing the public back home for bad news.

MERCHANT SEAMEN:
Heroism Unparalleled

The heroic part America's 70,000 merchant seamen have played in the front line of combat on the high seas was dramatized by a report issued by Rear Admiral Emory S. Land of the War Shipping administration which disclosed that the percentage of losses in personnel due to Axis U-boats and bombers was three times as great as that of the U. S. armed forces in the first year of the war.

Numerically, losses of merchant sailors totaled 3,200 including dead and missing, or 3.8 per cent of the total during the war's first year. U. S. armed forces' losses were 1 per cent in this period.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

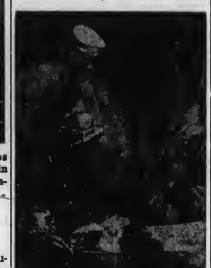
CHICAGO: Paying its quarterly dividends in war bonds, stamps or cash is the novel method the Belden Manufacturing company is following to help promote the treasury department's drive. Since Whipple Jacobs, president of the company, introduced the plan last August, stockholders have invested 9½ per cent of their dividends in war bonds. This is well ahead of the national average.

WASHINGTON: Planes of the 12th U. S. air force sank or damaged 54 Axis ships in North African waters, ranging from light cruisers to freighters between November 8 and February 1, it was announced here in a report received from Allied headquarters in North Africa. The report disclosed that 13 ships had been sunk, seven severely damaged, and 34 others damaged.



'Scrap' Nitrogen Now Is Salvagable

Its Loss Usually Due To Lack of Management

"Scrap" nitrogen, ordinarily wasted through poor handling of manure piles, can be effectively salvaged on millions of farms to help take the place of chemical nitrogen now being extensively used for the manufacture of war explosives.

While American agriculture will receive almost as much nitrogen as usual next spring, it will go mostly to growers of vegetables, fruits, potatoes, sugar beets and other crops considered of special value to the war program, according to Paul J. Rood, extension specialist, soils department, Michigan State college.

This sailor, a former butcher from Washington, is handling just a very small part of the meat consumed at a U. S. naval base. Despite the increased meat production by the farmers 2½ pounds of meat a week restriction will be the rule.

Thus the manure pile takes on a new value, for manure is rich in nitrogen. Almost two-thirds of the total plant food value of average farm manure is in the nitrogen. Most of the nitrogen value, however, is in the liquids—usually lost because of lack of care.

Surest method of saving this valuable nitrogen supply is to change the present methods of manure management on most farms. This means stopping the practice of throwing the manure out of the barn window or door to stand out in the weather, perhaps under the dripping eaves of the building until spring. It means saving the liquids which are ordinarily drained off or evaporated.

One pound of superphosphate for each animal each day, placed in the cow gutters and in the horse stalls is effective in saving nitrogen lost by passing into the air. In the pen type barn or in the cattle and sheep feeding pens and in the pens of young cattle, the same rule should be followed—one pound of superphosphate for each animal daily.

Long experience has proved it will pay to apply this superphosphate to the manure.

Agriculture in Industry

By FLORENCE C. WEED

Pine

The story of the pine forests of the South is a tragedy which Science changed into a romance of success. In an earlier day, oil, later distilled into turpentine, was sapped from southern pines by cutting great gashes in the bark which permanently injured the trees. The scientist, Charles Herty, revolutionized the industry by showing growers how to substitute shallow slashes in the bark which would effectively draw out the sap without killing the tree. As a result, turpentine forests have been saved for repeated crops, year after year.

Today, pine oil is being extracted from old stumps and being used in the textile industry and in the manufacture of perfumes. Camphor is being made from turpentine and pine oil, replacing oriental camphor at lower cost.

Manufacture of wrapping paper, corrugating board and insulation are booming industries using four million cords of pine annually. Waste sawdust and wood chips are now going into plastics.

Farm Notes

The simplest way to avoid chick losses during the first four weeks is to buy them with a guarantee that the chicks will live and grow for the first month.

Pork can be made safe for human consumption, so far as dangerous trichinae are concerned, by proper freezing, U. S. department of agriculture scientists have determined after many tests.

Sportlight
BY GRANTLAND RICE

IF YOU care to intermingle in sporting arguments today — and who doesn't in sport—I can lead you to any group of soldiers, sailors, marines, airmen, coastguardmen and merchant seamen, and they'll take your ears off.

Grantland Rice

It has been my privilege to be with many of these men lately — North and South, East and West—and they all want answers, direct answers.

This happens to be the greatest sporting country this spinning planet has ever known, so you can understand the interest these kids have in almost anything connected with sports.

They like to argue about anything. At the last gathering they put out a tough one—

"Who are the best straight-power men all our games have ever known? Just power. Football and baseball—boxing especially? Also, golf and tennis on the side?"

If you are wrong, they come back at you in a rush—for they know their sports.

A day or two ago they laid down a salvo, a fusillade and a barrage that had me dizzy, even looking back over 40 years. Just power—raw power—never mind the rest of it.

Heading the List

You don't get much time to think these things over. They come at you like a flock of wolves.

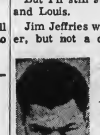
Here are the answers I gave them—the eager and healthy, the crippled and the burned:

Football—Bronko Nagurski—who, as Steve Owen once said, is the only back who could run his own interference. Even his blockers got out of the way—228 pounds of fast-moving dynamite. Power means speed and bulk. Nagurski had both. Bronko is the man Bernie Bierman of Minnesota and Iowa Navy picked as his top man in football. Largely power.

Bronko Nagurski

In his fading years I caught Bronko in a shower after some tough game—slapped him on the back—and almost broke my hand. I might as well have been socking a hydrant.

The All-Time Top



Baseball—Babe Ruth. The Babe hit over 700 home runs in big-league play. On the side he also hit more than another batch of home runs in exhibitions and World Series.

The Babe is so far ahead of all the power hitters there is no one even close. Lou Gehrig was a great power man. Pound for pound, so is Mel Ott. Ted Williams is no punk.

Boxing—There are only two men to consider in this field—Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis. Pound for pound, they were no better than Ruby Robert Fitzsimmons and Sam Langford.

But I'll still string with Dempsey and Louis.

Jim Jeffries was a punishing fighter, but not a direct killer. Gene Tunney was a boxer. Harry Greb was a whirlwind, minus any killing wallop.

Jack Dempsey

But when Dempsey and Louis leveled off, something always happened in a hurry.

Dempsey had greater speed than Louis had when the Old Mauler was at his peak at Toledo and before.

Louis had more power in both hands. For power I'll give you Dempsey and Louis—or Louis and Dempsey.

To my mind the power man of golf has been Jimmy Thomson, with Sam Snead close.

I've seen Thomson carry over 300 yards too many times. I hear about other phenoms who can outdrive Thomson. Maybe once in a while. Ask the pros.

The power tennis player—I'll go with Bill Tilden. Service or forehand—Big Bill was the top man.

I've seen him knock the racquet from the hands of stars, blasting them off the courts when he felt in that mood.

Maurice McLoughlin had a high-power service. But the Californian never had Tilden's all-around power. Nothing like it. So here are our power men of sport — Nagurski, Ruth, Dempsey, Louis, Thomson, Tilden.

BRIEFS:

¶ The Chicago Cubs have eliminated their famous sleeveless shirts and will return to standard type baseball uniforms. The standard garb costs only half as much.

¶ Bill Carpenter, supervisor of umpires for the International league, draws up the playing schedule for his own circuit, as well as for four others. He's been doing it for 28 years.

Sacred Hirohito

The war probably has interrupted customs even in Japan. But, when Emperor Hirohito traveled during peacetime, all window shades were drawn for the trip. He was considered too sacred for profane eyes to see; his portrait was likewise never seen publicly.

When Time magazine in 1936 printed Hirohito's picture on the cover page, the Japanese embassy immediately suggested that Time request its readers not to place the magazine upside down or to place objects on the sacred photograph.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Less Than Two Cents

Per person is all Boone County will lose in State Liquor Revenue when she

VOTES DRY MARCH 6th

For Less Than Two Pennies . . .

Would you vote to make drunkards of the boys and girls of Boone County by keeping liquor under their nose everywhere they go?

When Boone County Votes dry, it means a loss of less than 2 pennies for every man, woman and child in the county in revenue from the state's liquor consumption & license taxes.

IF YOU WANT THE PROOF

READ THE REPORT OF KENTUCKY'S DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE YEAR CLOSING JUNE 30, 1942

The total whiskey consumption tax received by the state . . . .

From all sources, fiscal year ending June 30, 1942, was	$2,906,746.05
Total State beer consumption tax, same period was	1,234,273.28
Total State win consumption tax, same period was	182,022.35
Grand total consumption tax for this period was	$4,323.041.68

This total consumption tax of $4,323,041.68 received by the State if divided by the 2,839,927 people in Kentucky, would amount to $1.48 for every man, woman and child in the State.

At $1.48 per capita, Boone County's 10,819 population paid into the state's general's fund, for the year ending June 30,,1942, a total liquor consumption tax of $16,012.12

She sent the State for whiskey license fees	800.00
Her State beer license fees at $25.00 per store were	725.00
Her grand total sent the state for liquor revenue was	$17,537.12

This $17,537.12 is the sum the state will lose and NOT Boone County when this county votes dry March 6. This county is only one of the 120 counties of the state sharing in the general fund. So this county will lose ONLY her 120th part of this $17,537.12, which totals $146.14. This $146.14 is this county's only loss in state revenue, less than 2c per person.

No Local Revenue Is Lost

Taxpayers will save thousands of dollars when Boone goes dry March 6th. The small license fees charged the beer and liquor saloons by Boone County, to help pay for the damage the liquor outfit creates NEVER HAS paid for the care and maintenance of the DRUNKS THE SALOONS MAKE.

BOONE COUNTY---WET OR DRY

Will Continue to Receive Her Share of $9,157,255.20

In Liquor Revenue pouring into the State's general fund from 7 breweries, 200 wholesale distributors and 4,500 beer and whiskey sallons. A COUNTY VOTING DRY DOES NOT DISTURB THIS REVENUE. Dry Boone will get her share.

Boone's Liquor Bill Is $253,489.17

Boone County's liquor bill last year was approximately $253,489.17. This equals $23.43 for every man, women and child Figure for yourself how much this staggering sum would have contributed to the peace and prosperity of the County, had this amount been spent for useful things.

The Local Liquor Outfit

And the Distillers and Brewers of Louisville, Milwaukee, St. Louis, and Chicago are itching to keep their hands on this enormous sum for three more years.

LET'S VOTE THE LIQUOR OUT OF BOONE COUNTY ON MARCH 6th.
TO VOTE DRY, VOTE YES. Give our boys and girls a break!

Standing committee on citizenship, Reading, Enterior Decorating and 4-H Club work made interesting reports. As usual, our program leader engaged us in a clever and interesting stunt.

A lovely lunch was enjoyed and the afternoon session opened with the club singing "God Bless America." Mrs. Elizabeth Boyer brought a splendid report of the Farm and Home meeting which she attended at Lexington.

Mrs. Moore who is a real instructor gave the lesson on "Sitting in sleeves." Leaflets on timely topics were distributed. One member brought a well filled First Aid Kit.

We were glad to enroll two new members. Those present were Mesdames Elizabeth Boyer, Dortha Dance and baby, Ellena Hamilton, Alice Chapman, Pearl Lamn, Frances McCormick, Lorena Myers, Blanche Ransom, Grace Renaker, Lillian Stephenson and sons, Gladys Stewart, Maude Wilson, Clara Vest, Rosellen Yates and baby, Relda Powers and the hostesses.

Utopia Members Meet Thursday.

Boone County Utopia Club members will hold their first 1943 meting at Burlington on this Thursday evening, February 18, at 8:30 p. m. according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Guest speakers on the program will include Earl G. Welch, Agricultural Engineer and Carl W. Jones, older boys and girls club specialist of the college. The program planning committee has arranged programs of special interest to all who wish to take part in the older boys and girls Agricultural and Home Economics program. Members of the Utopia planning committee are Lucian Bradford, Dorothy Souther, Zelma Lee Akins, Anna Margaret Allan, and Lucile Cotton.

Machinery Specialits Addresses Meeting.

Earl Welch, Agricultural Engineer will meet with the Boone County Machinery Rationing Committee and farmers at 2:30 p. m., E. W. T. at the County Agents office in Burlington on this Thursday, February 18th.

Mr. Welch will discuss the machinery situation and will assist farmers in making plans to meet the emergency situation in 1943. All farmers and machinery dealers are invited to attend this meeting.

TWO COMMON CAUSES OF BLOWN FUSES

---and how to eliminate them

Frayed cords and loose plug connections that permit bare wires to come together are among the most frequent causes of short circuits that result in blown fuses. Here's how you can eliminate them and prevent needless interruptions in your electric service.

1. CORD FRAYED IN MIDDLE

Clean away the frayed or crumbled part.

Tape up each wire separately, using electrician's tape.

Then tape wires together. Adhesive tape cakes and cracks quickly.

2. CORD FRAYED NEAR PLUG

Unloosen screws and pull wire out.

Cut off frayed part of wire.

Reinsert wire in plug, and screw in place.

RIGHT AND WRONG WAY TO WIRE A PLUG

WRONG: Wires not put around the prongs first. When plug is pulled, all the strain is on the connection.

RIGHT: Wires put around prongs. When the cord is yanked or jerked, pressure is put on the prongs.

BLOWN FUSES may also be caused by defective or overloaded appliances, overloaded circuits or, occasionally, by defective house wiring. It's a good idea to keep extra fuses on hand and to know how to use them. Then you can restore service quickly without waiting for a serviceman, who may be delayed by war-time restrictions on the use of cars and trucks.

Don't Neglect Them!

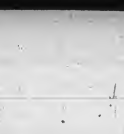

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Arriving simultaneously at the King Cole Ranch, Ann Lee and Cole Cody discovered Old Early Bill Cole had made two identical wills, one leaving all his money and the Ranch to Ann; and the other giving the same money and property to Cole. Rance Waldron, established at the Ranch since Old Bill's death, and posing as his nephew, questioned the sanity of Old Bill and the legality of the two wills. It was nearly noon when they returned to Ranch headquarters. That evening they all retired early, that is all except Aunt Jenifer, who stole out under a large oak tree and watched Rance Waldron help a strange lurching man out of the house.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XIII

Aunt Jenifer went straight to Cole Cody's outside door and hammered at it hard with her knuckles. He was asleep but came awake instantly, and called out,

"Who's there? What's wanted?"

"It's me, Jenifer Edwards. Dress quick and come out here. Bring your gun, too."

"Well?" he demanded when he stepped out close to Aunt Jenifer's shadowy form.

"I don't know," she said calmly if eagerly. "I don't trust that Rance Waldron; he's got a mean eye. All day long he has kept his door locked, and all day I've known that he had somebody he's been hiding. I've been watching, figuring with all this secrecy he'd be anxious to get his friend out of the house when he was sure everybody was in bed. Just now he and another man sneaked out and went to their horses that were saddled and hidden in a willow thicket."

"What about it?" demanded Cody, about as amiable as most men rudely awakened from a deep sleep all for the sake of a mere trifle. "What affair is it of mine? Or of yours, either?"

"Part of it is this: Rance Waldron has had this man hid in the house behind a locked door all day; that's a mystery, young man, and I don't like mysteries. Then it's shady, their sneaking out of the house this time of night, speaking in whispers. And someone shot Early Bill a few days ago; and in case there was no will, Rance Waldron would have inherited ranch, cash, and everything. Another thing; the stage was held up yesterday by someone who knew that Bucktooth Jenkins was bringing ten thousand dollars in cash to Early Bill Cole. And you fired a few shots at the robbers and thought you hit one of them. And the man with Waldron limped so bad that he could hardly walk. Is that an earful, or just child's chatter?"

"Which way did they ride?" asked Cody, grown brisk now.

"Straight north, along the creek on this side."

"You'd better get to bed, Aunt Jenifer. It's dawning on me that you're a pretty wonderful woman, but you can't keep going day and night."

"You bet I'll go to my room, Bill Cole Cody, and lock my door. Darn it, I'm scared. And you come back as soon as you can; I'll hear you, and I'll creep out into the living room to make sure it is you. Now poke along."

He hurried down to the ranch buildings for a word with Cal Roundtree, and a horse.

Cal, wakened and apprised of the situation, was out of the door still buttoning his overalls and drawing his belt about his lean middle. Cole Cody was ahead of him at the stable; they saddled swiftly and took the trail Aunt Jenifer had specified, north along the creek.

"If they want to hide they can make themselves hard to find in this country," said Cal Roundtree. "I know the most likely place to look for them, since they must have thought that no one had seen their getaway, and so no one would be following them so soon. Likely they'll get under a roof tonight, anyhow, and maybe poke on tomorrow night."

As they rode, Cole Cody told Cal in detail Aunt Jenifer's information, her suspicions and surmises.

Cal led the way, and the darkness did not matter to him; moreover, his horse soon discovered where he was going and thereafter needed no touch on the reins. They kept close to the creek for a mile, and though they rode swiftly they heard no sound of hoofbeats ahead. Then Cal swung to the right where a small tributary brook came tumbling down, and presently they passed into the mouth of a steep-walled ravine. It was about a half hour after entering the ravine that Cal Roundtree called softly over his shoulder,

"We've run 'em down, pardner. There's a log cabin up there at the head of the canyon where an old prospecter used to hang out; nobody's been in it for three-four year, but there's a light there now."

They rode slowly, keeping their horses in the deep grass at the sides of the trail, so that all hoofbeats were muffled. Thus they drew within a hundred yards of the log cabin. There Cal Roundtree gave a signal to stop, and both dismounted. They led their horses a score of paces into the thick timber fringing the creek, and removed their spurs to hang them on their saddle horns. Then walking in silence, lifting their booted feet as does a cat in wet grass, they drew near the cabin.

A voice, not Rance Waldron's, was speaking, and it was rough and querulous and came near being threatening.

". . . and so, there you let me rot all day, damn you. I might of died! I might die yet for all the doctoring I'm getting. By God, Rance, I've got a notion and a good notion—"

"You'd better keep your mouth shut, Tom, old man, before you talk yourself into more trouble than you can ever crawl out of."

There spoke Rance Waldron, and his voice was arrogant, contemptuous, revealing a man very sure of himself.

"Get it into your head, Rance, that things have changed plenty! You had me down good and plenty, didn't you? You could have wagged your finger and sent me to the pen, couldn't you?" He laughed chucklingly. "Not any more, kid! I've thought it over from all angles, Rance. You won't do any squealing on me because at the end you've let your foot slip; you'd be squealing on yourself the same as on me. What I've did you paid me for. The other job, with me getting shot up, you and me did together. And I can prove it!"

There was a breathless stillness there in the cabin. Then Rance Waldron spoke again, and there was a marked change in his tone. All the challenge and threat, all the masterfulness and contempt had gone out of it.

"You are right, Tom. We have gone into this thing together and we had better see it through together. And I'll even grant you that I no longer have any hold on you; if you are big enough fool for it, you can leave me flat and go your own way for the rest of your life knowing that you don't have to be afraid of me any longer, because as you say I am as deep in this last affair as you are. It's your turn to speak up: Stick along with me and take orders from me and make yourself a big stake if I get away with this job, as I'm sure I will, with you or without you. Or tuck your tail between your legs and run out on me."

He saw Rance Waldron clearly in the candle light.

That sort of talk, straight from the shoulder, evidently threw Tom Gough off his balance.

"I'm with you, Rance," he said, and all the belligerent menace had melted out of his tone. "Now what?"

"You hole up here for a few days and give that wound a chance to heal. Meantime I'll plan; I'll learn a few things I'm not sure of yet; I'll drop in on you late tomorrow night."

"That's fair enough," said Tom Gough.

Cal Roundtree had shoved Cody out of his way and was peering in through the open slit between the two logs. He saw Rance Waldron clearly in the candlelight, saw him go to the door and pass through and close the door behnd him. And clearly he saw Tom Gough, a man of low, squat stature with a thick thatch of black hair and a week's black bristly growth of whiskers; with a brutish, flat face and a pair of brilliant, close-set black eyes. And he took particular stock of Tom Gough's hat. It was brand new. Old clothes, ragged boots—and a brand new hat.

Rance Waldron went on his way to his horse tethered near by, then down trail returning along the way he had come.

"That man in there, thet Tom Gough," said Cal, "is the man that shot old Early Bill. He was made to do it by Rance Waldron. That's something I'm pretty certain of. And the two of them are the stage robbers; that's something else I'd bet my boots on."

"You sound like you knew what you're talking about," said Cody. "I gather the same idea as you do about the hold-up. But how come you cinch the shooting of Early Bill on Tom Gough?"

"You don't see a man wearing a new hat every day, Cody. Early Bill, before he checked in his chips, told Doc Joe and the Judge how he had whanged away at the hombre that potted him; how he had shot the feller's hat off. He said, 'Watch out for a man with a hat with a hole in it, or a man without any hat at all, or a man with a brand new hat.' Now climb on your pony and let's travel."

And at the ranch house, while Cal Roundtree and Cole Cody were giving their attention to Waldron and Tom Gough, Aunt Jenifer was busying herself in her own fashion. She scurried post-haste to her own room, closed the door and was going to lock it when she discovered there was no key in the lock. She hurried to Ann's room adjoining. The door was closed but unlocked;, no key there either.

But she thought, that Waldron man's door is locked. He's got a key. There ought to be others somewhere. So, carrying her lamp, she went prowling through the house, key-hunting. She looked at all locks en passant, she opened all drawers in tables and dressers, she ran her fingers along cupboard shelves. She came to a closed closet and opened it to peer inside, and, of all places, found a key in the lock within the closet.

She tried it in her own lock; it fitted and she shot the bolt home. She locked herself in and went to Ann's door, the farther one opening upon the corridor. It fitted there, too. Another hmf! It seemed as though all the locks in the house were the same. And right then the inspiration and the temptation assailed her to try her key on still another door. If it worked on these locks, why not on Rance Waldron's?

She scurried to that door through which Waldron had passed so many times, always locking it behind him.

And the key fitted the lock, and the door opened! She was thrilled with a sense of adventure and was also just a mite frightened.

She entered a bedroom that was in considerable disorder. She glanced at the bed itself with its covers dragging on the floor; then around the room until her eyes came to a full stop at a table on which there were some papers and a couple of pencilled account books. She flipped over pages: Cattle bought and sold; numbers in the various herds, cost and sales prices; that sort of thing for the most part. Among the scattered papers was a new letter signed by Andy Jenkins. It said:

"Dear Bill, I done my job all right, better than you speckulated what I mean is I got the whole ten thousand and am bringing it with me only I am staying a day with my relations and will ketch the stage next day.

Yours truly,
Andy Jenkins."

"So that's it." Aunt Jenifer mumbled to herself. "That Waldron devil found this letter and got busy, him and the man he's been hiding in here all day. No wonder he wanted to get rid of us."

She crumpled the tell-tale letter in her hand and hurried into the other room and tried the door leading to the outside; again the key fitted. She closed the door again and began taking stock of this second room's contents. There was a splotch on the floor; a rug had evidently been drawn to cover it, then its edge turned over by a careless foot as the two men departed. And that spot looked to Aunt Jenifer like a blood smear. So she leaped to the same conclusion that had offered itself to Cody and Roundtree.

On the next step she was already decided. She would unlock the outside door again, leave it unlocked, but closed, make her retreat through Waldron's room, slip out of his door that led into the corridor, lock that door and carry her key off with her. Then when he came home and found his outer door unlocked he would have something to think about; when he missed the Jenkins letter which he had been too great a fool to destroy or hide, he'd have still more matter for thought.

But there wouldn't be the vaguest hint to make him think that this had been an inside job. And even though for one reason or another he did get the idea that Aunt Jenifer had had something to do with it, he couldn't really be convinced—and he'd be mighty careful about speaking of it to her, for fear of tipping his hand. And watch her play innocent tomorrow!

Now she wanted to hurry faster than ever, for she kept telling herself that she was in a den of murderers. Yet she kept telling herself also that now was her one and only chance to make a thorough search in these two rooms.

Well, she had done all she could now, and had better scamper for her own quarters.

So she did as she had planned, unlocked the outer door, removed the key and turned to retrace her steps through Rance Waldron's door.

And then she stiffened and almost dropped her lamp. Distinctly she heard rapidly oncoming footsteps outside.

JESUS THE GOOD SHEPHERD

LESSON TEXT—John 10:1-16, 27-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—"I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep."—John 10:11.

Beautiful and meaningful as they are, none of the other figures or types of our Lord's redemptive work have a stronger appeal than that of the good shepherd. Even those who have never tended sheep nor yet seen them under the shepherd's care sense the telling aptness of the allegory of the Good Shepherd. We know how much we are like sheep needing the tender shepherd's care, and we soon learn to know and to trust Christ as the True Shepherd of the flock.

The center of the picture is the Good Shepherd, and it is around Him that we group our thoughts.

I. He Knows His Sheep (vv. 1-5).—At night, whenever possible, the sheep were brought into a fold, a walled-in enclosure with shelters and with a single gate. Many different flocks were kept together under the care of an undershepherd. In the morning the shepherds came to lead forth the flock. They came by the door, not as the thieves of the night, who sought to come in by stealth over the wall.

When the shepherd called, his own sheep responded. We are told that they would not come at the call of a stranger—not being ready to trust him.

The application is obvious, and yet a word is in order. We ought to examine ourselves and see whether we do indeed know our Lord's voice. Do we respond when He calls us? Then, too, let us be on the lookout against those who profess to be shepherds, who call themselves "pastor" or "reverend," and have only one purpose—to despoil the sheep. They are "thieves and robbers"—Jesus said so. They are only interested as long as it pays. The true shepherd cares for his sheep.

II. He Protects His Sheep (vv. 6-15).

Not only thieves, but wild animals would attack sheep, and it is said that often the shepherd died to protect them from harm. But the hireling, serving for what he can get out of it, is not interested any longer. When danger appears, he flees. He has not the real shepherd heart and cares not if the sheep he destroyed. Having stolen them to enrich himself, he will not defend them at the cost of his own life.

Note the sharp contrast of "I am the good shepherd" with the dark picture of the faithless hirelings. Not only does it magnify His goodness, but it deepens the blackness of their treachery.

We should recall that the Good Shepherd is able to protect His sheep; for while He lays down His life for them, He takes it again in victory over sin and death (see vv. 17, 18). The Saviour seemed to have been defeated at Calvary, but He arose again, and ever liveth to make intercession on our behalf (Heb. 7:25).

III. He Seeks Other Sheep (v. 16).

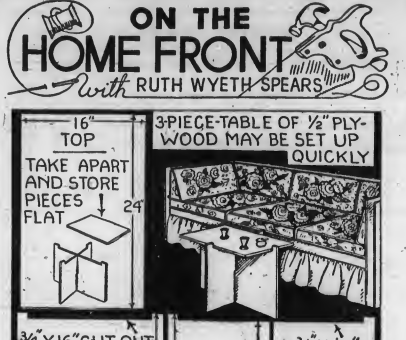
The other sheep Jesus had in mind were probably the Gentiles. The believers He then had were Jews, but the day was to come when the Gentiles were to hear and believe. His desire for them may well stir in our hearts an eagerness to go out and bring in all—both Jew and Gentile—who will, by believing in Christ, become members of His one fold.

Note the word "must" in verse 16. It does not say "if convenient," nor "when we can raise enough money," nor "after our local debts are paid" we will go out and seek others. There is a divine imperative here—it "must" be done.

Let us not fail to gather the full significance of the expression "one flock, one shepherd." We are not interested in any manufactured unity of man-made organizations. Certainly we will not accept union which means a compromise of essential truth. But unity under Christ, the one great Shepherd, that we want—yes and will have. He makes that certain—"they shall be one flock."

Let us not put hindrances in the way of that kind of unity, and let us not be delinquent about seeking the "other sheep." Now a final word.

IV. He Keeps All His Sheep (vv. 27-30).



These words (said after a period of weeks had elapsed) stress the blessed assurance which comes to those who follow Christ. Jesus rebuked the Jews for their unbelief, telling them that they were not His sheep.

Those who are His have been given to Him by the Father—an eternal gift to Him—and He gives to them eternal life.

The power back of this whole matter is evident in verse 30. Christ is God. He who is in Christ's hand is also in the Father's hand, "and no man is able to pluck them out of the Father's hand." Instead of trying to modify that statement, or to quarrel with those who believe it, every Christian ought to accept it and shout "Hallelujah!"

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

IF THERE is one piece of furniture for which our own period will be famous it is the low coffee table. Our own generation has discovered that low tables are not only convenient but give a greater feeling of space in a room than high ones.

Here is a little coffee table that is as modern as tomorrow. You can make it yourself from a three by four foot piece of half inch plywood with straight cuts of the saw. It requires not one scrap of hardware. Just cut the three sections according to the dimensions given here; place the slot of the narrow piece of the base through the slot in the wide piece; put the top on, and there you are! When not in use the pieces take up no more space than a large serving tray.

A small leak in an aluminum pan may be repaired by placing a flat piece of heavy iron on one side and lightly hammering the hole together on the other side.

Put the wooden salad bowl near the stove after washing, but never over direct or intense heat. Too much heat will cause the wood to warp and perhaps crack, but moderate heat is necessary to dry the bowl thoroughly before putting it away.

Whalebone Valentines

Between 1750 and 1815 in England, it was a popular custom for a young man to carve a sentimental message on a flat piece of whalebone or wood and present it to his beloved, says Collier's. In appreciation, she would wear it next to her heart—as a stay in her corset.

One such inscription on a busk in a British museum today reads: "The gift is small but love is all. Marcy Oran 1788."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The importance of group riding as a rubber conservation practice has been demonstrated in Pontiac, Mich., where today 30,000 workers roll to war plants in 6,000 cars instead of the 18,000 cars they used daily earlier this year.

2,300 cities and towns with a total population of 12½ millions depend entirely upon automobiles for passenger transportation.

In 1896 The B. F. Goodrich Co. made the first fabric clincher tyre automobile tire in the 36 x 4 size.

A ton of rubber a year is the collection of the average Brazilian wild rubber gatherer. This explains why man power is the crux of the South American natural rubber problem.

CONSERVATION NEWS
By P. A. Whitehead

Gallatin County again steps ahead of the times. Recently Gov. Keen Johnson requested all the County Judges to assist in formulating Soil Conservation.

Districts in their respective Counties to combat the Soil Erosion problems that is being faced by every farmer in the State because of the millions of extra acres which will be in cultivation because of the increase in the quotas of War Crops. Gallatin County will not have to answer this call as the need of a Soil Conservation District was felt as far back as the fall of 1940 through a Soil Conservation Exhibit at the Gallatin County Fair. Through the efforts of Professor Windchester. Robert Clifton and Stuart Roberts the ground work for an organization was started and by March 20, 1941 a Certificate of Organization was granted by the Secretary of State. The District is now in full operation and has large power equipment for drainagework, terracing and pond digging. Also small ditchers to loan to the farmers to aid them with their erosion problems.

Mr. Orion Wade of Cincinnati visited his mother, Mrs. Eva Wade the past week.

Pvt. Denver Holmes of Camp Edward, Mass., who visited recently his father, Wm. Holmes, has returned to Camp.

Mrs. Joe Ducker of Covington visited Ida Stephens Wednesday.

Friends of Miss Margaret Corbon extend their sympathy in the death of her father who passed away recently.

Pvt. Charles Houston, recently home on a 10-day leave from Harlinger, Texas visiting his sister, Mrs. Ira Lower and brother, Jack Houston has returned back to camp.

Miss Cecil Mae Stephens of Nicholson, daughter, Mr. and Mrs Cecil Stephens who has enlisted with the WAACS and is leaving Tuesday.

The many friends of Pvt. Chas. Rothman, son of Mrs. G. C. Rothman will be glad to learn he is progressing nicely from a major operation at Lions, Neb. Hospital, he is now able to sit up some.

Friends of Mrs. Ada Chambers who has been ill at her home for sometime will be glad to learn of her recovery and being able to be out again.

Mrs. Mattie Mills and daughter, Miss Lena entertained recently for the following guest: Mr. and and Mrs. Findley Sanders, Mr. and Mrs. Logan Wayman, Mr. and Mrs. Ralpt Ervin and son, Norma, and Mr. Ralph Webster.

Homemakers Help Hasten Victory.

How homemakers can hasten the day of victory is stressed by Miss Myrtle Weldon, state leader of home demonstration work. Waste and extravagance are enemies because they bring shortages and raise prices, she declares.

Miss Weldon's suggestions include preventing waste in the preparation of food, such as in peelings, in cooking water and in burned food. She would make the best use of the oven baking several foods at a time. Prepare foods so there won't be any leftovers, and serve appetizing, well-balanced meals, are other suggestions.

Brushing, airing, pressing and cleaning will extend the service of clothing, notes this homemaking authority. Careful mending and remaking are tricks to be proud of, she says. When one must buy,let quality be the guide, and buy with care.

Clean and repair upholstering and otherwise care for home furnishings, for they may have to last a long time, adds Miss Weldon.

BALBO RYE EXCELS

Lewis Schmidt of McCracken county, Kentucky, was convinced of the extra value of balbo rye when it made almost twice the growth of common rye. Warren Thompson, assistant county agent, says the comparison was made by sowing balbo rye in one side of a field of common rye. The balbo rye furnished much more late winter pasture than did the rest of the field.

Kentucky Farmers Face Biggest Job.

"Farming in 1943, the biggest job Kentucky farmers ever faced," is the name of a leaflet published by the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

"More farm products than ever before, is the goal for 1943 -- and this in the face of shortages of labor, machinery, fertilizers and other supplies, and transportation. Farmers will need all their ability and determination, but the goals can be met! As a rule, the thing for each farmer to do is to produce more of the things he is best prepared to produce, rather than to to take on too many new projects.

"Good average-quality products and high yields are the order for 1943. There will probably be little price premium for fancy quality, and the effort had better be used for greater output. Home production of as much as possible of feed for livestock and food for family will be an important help in meeting the national goals. It will assure the family the needed supplies, do away with much needless hauling, and release food for other uses.

"Careful planning of marketing, and greater cooperation among neighbors and commercial truckers, will be necessary if farm products are to move into marketing channels without severe loss."

The leaflet gives practical information on soil productivity, crop varieties, use of machinery, workstock and labor, and the raising of cattle, hogs, dairy cows, sheep and poultry.

INDEPENDENCE R. R. 1

To give light to them that sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death, and to guide our feet into the way of peace.—Luke 1:68-79.

The many friends of this entire neighborhood were grieved to learn of the sudden death of Mr. James Losey which occurred at his home last Sunday afternoon. Mr. Losey was a good quiet neighbor but always ready to help anyone in time of need. His funeral was held at the Swindler Funeral Parlor, Wednesday afternoon in the presence of a large crowd of sorrowing relatives, friends and neighbors, with Rev. Elmer Kidwell officiating. The family have the sympathy of the entire neighborhood.

BAD NEWS FOR BOOTLEGGERS

Who prefer prohibition's excesses to the brewers' Self-Regulation program

Don't get your hopes too high, Mister Bootlegger! Folks remember prohibition. And they remember you, and your lawless gang. With your bribes for officials. Your poison hooch for young and old alike. Your tommy guns and your sudden death!

America will never forget that costly, misguided prohibition era.

MODERATION is instinctive in most people. Moderation in eating, moderation in drinking. Most people would rather have a moderate glass or two of beer than a gallon of bootleg hooch!

Here's a good example of moderation in practice: In the beer industry, brewers make wholesome honest beer—and they insist that it be sold in wholesome decent surroundings.

Anybody that doesn't agree to that, can't sell beer. And this Committee is here to help the law enforcement officers see that he doesn't.

We tell such people: Clean Up or Close Up. And they do one—or the other. Either clean up voluntarily or close up because of license trouble.

But that way we're helping your officials to keep beer respectable in this state. That's the way to handle things. Not by prohibition. Not by bringing back the bootlegger. Don't you agree?

Local Walton Attorney Honored

Official Notifacation was received here recently of the election of Hon. John L. Vest to the House of Delegates of the American Bar Association. This is a very outstanding honor since only two members are elected from Kentucky to this delegation, which is composed of 183 members from the whole U. S.

Mr. Vest is the only delegate from a city of less than 2500 in the U. S. Most members are from cities of a population from 250,000 to 1,000,000.

The House of Delegates meets twice each year and in a large measure determines the policy of the American Bar Association. This election is for the years 1943 and 1944.

The next meeting of the House of Delegates will be held at Chicago, March 29th, 1943.

Mass Meetings to Be Held Throughout Boone County.

Boone county Mass meetings will be held at the various places, in regard to the election to be held March 6th.

These speakers are outstanding men, well worth hearing.

Program for Enlistment of WAVES and SPARS Now In Force.

A new program for the enlistment of WAVES and SPARS is now in force at the Covington Navy Recruiting Station.

For the first time, screening tests and other preliminary phases of the applications for enlistment in both services will be handled at the recruiting office. Forms on which officer candidates must apply for commissions also will be issued.

Enlistment is open to all women from 20 to 36 years of age who are citizens and who can meet the physical and educational requirements. Officer candidates are accepted from 20 to 50.

Pay of enlisted women will range from apprentice seaman's wages of $50 monthly to chief petty officer's wages of $126 monthly. In addition to this base pay, women will receive food, quarters, medical and dental care, and clothing worth $200.

Bids To Be Received For Boone Airport

It was reported Monday that specifications for the construction of the airport in Boone County were relased to contractors Saturday. Bids will be received by the Civil Aeronautics Administration in Chicago March 8, according to information received by local citizens interested in this project. It was said the contract for construction of the airport provides for work to begin immediately after the contract is awarded on March 15th.

It was said the airport is to be improved at a cost of approximately $2,000,000. The airport is to be composed of 900 acres of land the property of Kenton County. It is 12 miles from Fountain Square in Cincinnati.

The project was inaugurated in 1941 by the Covington-Kenton County Chamber of Commerce, the Kenton County Industrial Association and the Kenton County Fisical Court. The site was approved several months ago by the CAA and the Army.

W./W. Gaines Native of Boone Co. and Ardent Prohibitionist—Urges Boone Co. to Vote Dry.

Mr. W. W. Gaines of Atlanta, Ga. is an ardent prohibitionist. He is president of the Georgia Anti-Saloon League and the champion both of temperance and of prohibition. He is a native of Boone County, Ky. and is deeply interested in the coming local option election therein. "When I was a lad of 12," he writes, "there was one saloon in Bullittsville, our post office town. A movement was launched to get rid of it. My father worked hard to help and it was done. That little election was my starting point against the liquor evil." We hope the good citizens of the county will win a smashing victory over the present-day liquor crowd.

What The Cows Are Doing In Boone Co.

The dairymen in Boone County are taking the goverment request for a 6 per cent increase in production serious. A good example of this extra effort that is being put forth is found on Dr. R. C. Garrison's D. H. I. A. report according to Wilson Short, D. H. K. Tester, and O. D. Perkinson, Assistant County Agent.

One grade Holstein cow in his herd produced in 30 days, 2077 pounds of milk and 70.6 pounds butter fat. This herd is headed by Meteror's Lad, a proven son of Brookwood Meteor.

T. O. Donlap has two cows producing more than the average in this section. Cow no. 104 produced 8035 lbs of milk, 461 pounds of butter fat and cow no. 114 produced 8786 lbs. of milk, 465 pounds of butter fat in twelve months.

Other herds that are making a successful effort to produce more for war time consumption are owned by, Walter King, Verona; Ben Nichting, Walton; and Grant Maddox of Florence. These dairymen attribute their success to having good cows and better feeding and management practices. Herds of Albert Parken, and Herman Decker of Walton also completed splendid D. H. I. A. records the past year.

R. B. Huey and Sons, Robert Youell, Jesse Wilson and W. G. Kite and O. W. Purdy who are members of the Boone--Shelby--Carroll County D. H. E. Association in which John V. Hood is tester, also own high producing herds that are outstanding in the state.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

In Zanzibar, Africa, carts used by the natives have tires made of elephant hide, which serves the purpose of rubber.

In Bulgaria natives paint pictures of their enemies on their tires so they can be regularly spattered with mud, as a gesture of contempt!

Cars and trucks for transportation account for 86 per cent of the Army's rubber requirements.

Cord tire construction, the type common today, first made rapid inroads on the cord-woven fabric tire in 1915. Low pressure balloon tires made their appearance in 1924.

Cryptostegia is a new word for the rubber lexicon. To Floridans it is the technical name for the Mexican morning glory, which has been recognized as one of the most promising rubber-producing plants.

THE STORY SO FAR: Arriving simultaneously at the King Cole Ranch, Ann Lee and Cole Cody discovered Old Early Bill Cole had made two identical wills, leaving them all his money and the Ranch. Rance Waldron, established on the Ranch since Old Bill's death from a mysterious gun-shot wound, questioned the sanity of Old Bill and the legality of the wills. Late that evening, Ann's Aunt Jenifer stole out and watched Rance help a strange lurching man out of the house. She awakened Cole and told him what had happened. Together with Cal, the foreman, he trailed the fleeing horsemen to a deserted cabin. Aunt Jenifer, searching Rance's possessions, heard footsteps.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XIII

For one stricken instant the adventuresome Aunt Jenifer felt as though she were paralyzed. The next second she leapt and ran like a frightened deer; her racing footsteps sounded extraordinarily loud in her own ears as she dashed through Waldron's room toward the corridor. Then an even louder sound struck her ears, a man in the yard running faster than she could run, making for the outside door of Tom Gough's room. She gained the door she was heading for and heard the other door snapped open, and heard a man's heavy boots come pounding on.

She fled faster than ever, carrying her lamp in one hand, her letter in the other. The lamp chimney was shaken off and crashed to the floor, making a noise, it seemed to her, loud enough to wake the dead, but the flame, giving out more smoke than light, still burned on and showed her dimly the way she must go to gain her own room. She glanced back and saw the man speeding after her; it was too dark back there for her to make him out clearly, but she knew it must be Rance Waldron, and she could imagine his hard hands choking her to death.

By about three yards she won the race. But by the time she could slip into Ann Lee's room and get her key into the lock, he was at her door. By the fraction of a second she shot the bolt before his hand touched the knob.

Then she sped through Ann Lee's room and to the door that gave upon the corridor, and as she heard him coming there, too, she got that door locked.

There was a heavy silence, then Ann Lee's sleepy voice asking, "Is that you, Auntie? What are you doing?"

Then Rance Waldron's voice spoke up, saying curtly yet not over loud,

"Miss Edwards, I think you had better let me come in. Or, if you like, you might step out here and give me a word of explanation."

"Not tonight, Mr. Waldron, thank you," said Aunt Jenifer with creditable calmness.

Ann Lee sat up in bed.

"What is it?" she whispered. "What has happened?"

Again Rance Waldron spoke, more sternly this time.

"Miss Edwards, I won't stand for this sort of thing. You come out here and give me a good explanation or I'll smash your door down and come in."

Aunt Jenifer told her pat little lie then.

"I still have Cal Roundtree's gun, Mr. Waldron," she said quietly. "Stick your ugly mug in here and I'll shoot it off."

"I'll bust your door down, I tell you," said Waldron. "I know you haven't any gun. Cody pitched it out into the patio and I saw Roundtree pick it up and holster it and carry it off with him. Going to open up?"

"No. Not on your life. And if you try it, I'll yell my head off, and I've got a voice that'll call the hogs home a mile; and the Cole Cody you mention will be here like a shot and will work on you the way he did this morning, only I'll bet my bustle he'll do a better and more lasting job this time."

"That's something to think about," said Waldron, and sounded reasonable and thoughtful. Then he fell silent. A moment later she could hear his footsteps, moving away.

By now Ann Lee was thoroughly frightened. She was sitting up, the bed covers clutched up to her throat as though for protection.

"He won't come back, I'm sure of it," said Aunt Jenifer. Yet she wasn't sure, and he did come back.

"I am going to shoot the lock off your door—or I'll go get an ax. You had better open up. As for calling that Cody hombre, it's no use. I've been to his room and he's not there. The chances are he's no nearer than Bald Eagle."

Ann Lee whispered to her aunt, "That isn't true!" But Aunt Jenifer nodded and drew down the corners of her mouth.

"Only it is true. I knew he had gone out and I knew he hadn't come back. It's likely he's down at the men's quarters by now, chinning with Cal Roundtree. But if we yelled our heads off they wouldn't hear; that's why Cal left you a gun this morning, to signal him with. Darn it, I wish we had that gun now! Well, anyhow, I've got all the keys I know about in this place, and it'll take a lot of ax work to batter one of these doors down."

"Well, what's the answer?" demanded Waldron. "I can't give you all night, you know, to make up your minds."

Ann Lee put her lips close to Aunt Jenifer's ear.

"There are windows!" she whispered eagerly. "We can slip through while he's battering at our door, and scoot like anything down to where Cal Roundtree is!"

Aunt Jenifer whispered back,

"Go take a good look at the windows, Goosey. This is a regular old Spanish house; every one of these windows has iron bars like a jail; if you haven't noticed, I have."

"I'll give you about two minutes more to think it over," said Waldron. "That's because if I go shooting your lock off, I'm apt to wake that nosy Roundtree. I'll go to the kitchen and get a hand-ax; there's one by the wood box. I can handle that so he won't hear a sound. You've got until I get back to do your thinking. And I'll manage to keep an eye on your door so that you don't sneak out on me."

They listened for his departing footsteps and didn't hear a sound. So they quite naturally decided that he was still standing before their door, trying to trick them into sticking their noses out when he'd be ready to pounce on them. But he had tricked them in another way. What he had actually done was remove his boots, set them down gently and hurry in his socked feet to the kitchen, get the hand-ax and return. The next thing they heard was his voice, at once angry and mocking.

"Want to shoot it out in the dark? Or get out of here?"

"Fooled you that time, my pretty ladies," he jeered at them. "I pulled my boots off and made the trip, and here I am back with the ax. You had your chance to run, but it's gone now. Listen to this."

The hand-ax crashed into the solid oak of the door.

"Open up now, and all I'll do is make you give me back something you stole from my room. Get pig-headed about it, and I won't let you off so easy. I'm willing to be reasonable about the whole thing, but nobody is going to hurglarize my room and get away with it."

The ax crashed into the wood the second time.

"What's the answer?" he demanded.

A voice, cool and impersonal, spoke out of the darkness, for it was dark where Rance Waldron stood; he had left his lamp in his room, making his way by striking an occasional match. The voice, cool and deliberate as it was, sounded like that of a man whom it would be just as well not to antagonize, the voice of Cole Cody, just now arrived in silence. The words were, merely,

"What's going on here?"

The answer came quickly enough.

"Oh, Cole! God sent you to us! That horrid Rance Waldron is trying to break our door down!"

"I can't see you, Waldron," said Cody, his tone as steady and deliberate as before. "From your ax work I can guess pretty close where you are, though. Want to shoot it out in the dark? Or stick your tail between your legs and get out of here?"

Rance Waldron took his time in deciding how to answer.

"Shooting it out in the dark, Cody," he said after due thought, "is sheer luck. I haven't been over lucky of late; if it's the same with you I'd rather take you on by daylight."

"Suits me fine," said Cody.

Rance Waldron dropped his ax. His gun was in his hand as he said, "All right; I'm taking your word for it," and started back down the corridor to his room.

Then Bill Cole Cody stepped along through the darkness toward the rooms where Ann Lee and her aunt were imprisoned. He, like Waldron before him, struck a match or two. Arrived at his destination, he said, "Will you ladies open up to me? It's in the cards, I think, that I have a word with you."

It was Ann Lee's swift hand that unlocked the door; Cody, his gun still in his hand, since he trusted Rance Waldron in nothing, made no move to cross the threshold. His eyes, smoldering under his dark brows, took in all the loveliness of the trim little figure before him, gave no hint of his admiration, passed on to Aunt Jenifer.

"Do you care to tell me what the ruckus was all about?" he asked. "It might be a good idea." Speaking pointedly to Jenifer, he added: "You were right in what you told me a while ago. Cal Roundtree and I have found out a thing or two."

"Will you step in, Mr. Cody?" asked Aunt Jenifer. "You're right welcome."

"I'd be glad to do so, ma'am," said Cody politely, and stepped briskly into Ann Lee's room.

Aunt Jenifer closed and locked the door and wasted no further time giving Cole Cody, with Ann Lee all ears to take it in, her adventure of the night. She even handed the Jenkins letter to Cody who read it and then stood there frowning at it.

"I don't know what to do about it all," he said at last. "This letter found in his room, and the fact of his having hid a wounded man in his room all day, comes pretty close to pinning Mr. Rance Waldron's ears back. He—"

"A man hid in the house all day!" gasped Ann Lee. "A wounded man? Tell me about it!"

"It's my notion," said Aunt Jenifer tartly, "and I reckon it's Cole Cody's notion, too, that Rance Waldron and the man he's been hiding, are the two that held the stage up yesterday. Right, Cole?"

Cody nodded.

"Right, Aunt Jenifer. And more than that, Cal Roundtree feels certain that Tom Gough—that's the man Waldron has been hiding out—is the man who shot old Early Bill. If all of us are right in our guesses, we'd better watch our steps. But if we round these two up and hand them over to the sheriff, what can we actually prove against them? We've got scraps of evidence, but it's mostly guesswork at that. Try a man for murder and let the jury find him innocent, and you can't ever haul him into court again. That's the law."

If by some off chance he thought that under the circumstances a contrite Ann Lee would break down and plead to be forgiven, he didn't as yet quite know his Ann Lee.

She kept her eyes down and her hands clasped before her, and said meekly,

"Perhaps, Mr. Cody, that the shot you received this morning was sent by Providence to remind one that the spirit of man should never be proud, whereas if you stood out there in the lamp light and Mr. Waldron popped a bullet into you, it would probably only show that you are a bigger fool than he is."

Aunt Jenifer said crisply, "Sit down, Mr. Cody. Seems as though you're always to save our bacon from falling into the fire. Let's have a bit of a war talk, shall we?"

"Auntie!" Ann Lee glared at Miss Edwards, using one of the highest-grade glares she kept in stock. "For this war talk of yours hadn't we better step into your room?"

"This suits me fine," said Cody, and sat down.

"There is merit in my niece's suggestion, Mr. Cody," she said. "You'll note if you look about you that her room is in some disarray; you see the dear child had already retired and was fast asleep when the fireworks started. My room you'll find as spick and span as I always am. This way, please."

So the three went to the adjoining room and sat down, Ann Lee having returned to her own for the extra chair needed.

"Now for the war talk," said Cody. He reached for tobacco and papers.

"Cal and I figured the whole thing out about as you do. Cal thought it might be a good idea to hang the two of 'em right away, and save bother and fooling around. Maybe he was right. Yet come right down to it we don't really know a thing about either Rance Waldron or Tom Gough. But I can't see much to be done on it tonight. It's kind of late and me, for one, I'm clean tuckered with the shooting-up this young lady handed me and the ride tonight. Suppose we talk this over, getting Cal in on it, in the morning and maybe sending for the Judge and Doc Joe to help give us a steer?"

Ann Lee looked her relief; Aunt Jenifer nodded and said vehemently, "Mr. Cody, I want you to stay near to tonight. I'll sleep with Ann Lee, and you take my room. Won't you?"

Cody rose and bowed; it was a rather graceful bow, thought Ann Lee as she and Aunt Jenifer rose also.

They passed to their room; he stepped after them to the door, closed it gently and said a very quiet,

"Thanks, ma'am. And good night, ladies."

SEWING CIRCLE

YES! These are clothes you can make of flannelette for the little stranger yourself. We've kept them very simple so that even if you haven't sewn much before you can make these. Bonnet, sacque, wrapper, sleeper and bunting are in one size only—but that size is big enough for a baby of any age up to six months.

Pattern No. 8324 includes 5 pieces, in one size only, for infants to six months. Bonnets, sacque, wrapper, sleeper and bunting require 2¾ yards 36 or 39-inch material, 6½ yards ribbon binding.

Plenty of Variety.

YOU'LL be tempted to make dickies in several colors to wear with this smart jacket suit. If you do you will find that the one suit will seem different every time you change dickies. The simple, comfortable lines of both jacket and skirt are ever so becoming.

Pattern No. 8341 is in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Size 14, with short sleeves, takes 3¾ yards 39-inch material.

TO VOTE DRY--VOTE YES

At Local Option Election March 6

Liquor dens, beer joints and road houses are far more disgraceful than the old saloon. The people grew tired and disgusted with the stench of the old saloon—they are sick of the present methods of disposal. BOONE COUNTY IS CALLING A HALT! VOTE YES! MARCH 6.

Bread and Milk---or Booze

The Same Dollar Cannot Buy Both

Consumption of milk in the U. S. has been from 100 to 200 million gallons LESS annually since repeal than it was during Prohibition, according to reports by the Department of Agriculture. The per capita consumption is from two to four gallons LESS. To feed the extra cows to produce the increased milk under Prohibition, it required 74,000,000 bushels of grain, which is 41,000,000 more bushels than the liquor business used in 1936. Money spent for liquor has NOT BEEN spent for bread since repeal. Government figures show that there has been an ANNUAL average reduction of 78,337,000 bushels of wheat USED FOR BREAD.

What Good Does Liquor Do?

Has it ever made any life Purer, Nobler or Happier? Has it Ever made a better Citizen? Has it Ever contributed to the Peace of any Family or Community?

If you vote to license the sale of liquor in Boone County, you thereby vote for all the damage and degradation and evils that it brings to our people. If you vote to license liquor, you vote to fulfill what was said in McGuffy's reader in 1836, more than one hundred years ago, and is true today:

"Licensed to do thy neighbor harm,
Licensed—to kindle hate and strife,
License—to nerve the robber's arm,
Licensed—to whet the murderer's knife;
Licensed—like spider for a fly,
To spread thy nets for man, thy prey;
To mock his struggles, crush his soul,
Then cast his worthless form away."

If You Vote For Liquor

WHO IS GOING TO DRINK IT?

The liquor traffic MUST have ONE OUT OF EVERY THREE BOYS AND GIRLS as NEW drinkers EVERY year to take the place of those dying from alcoholism. Some men claim they do not drink but will vote for liquor "so the other fellow can have it." WHO IS THIS OTHER FELLOW? Is it their son—their daughter—the man who marries their daughter—the hired help— their bus driver—the friend who is driving the car which they are riding? Remember friends! If you vote to keek liquor in Boone County SOMEBODY MUST DRINK IT if the liquor dealers and the brewers continue to make money. If you MUST vote for liquor WHY NOT BE FAIR AND DRINK IT YOURSELF?

Boone County Challenges The Liquor Dealers

To Prove Their Statements and Stick to Facts About Their Business!

What Does Liquor Protect

CAN YOU NAME A SINGLE PERSON IT HAS HELPED.

Does liquor protect the good names of the citizens of Boone County? Do drunk drivers protect human lives and property? Does liquor protect the fair names of the widows and orphans, whose husbands and fathers have have spent every dime for drink, then died from the effects? Does it protect the boys and girls of this county from the temptation of drink and ruin many of them for life? Does it protect the earnings of a man who labors for the support of his wife and children? Does it protect the physical strength, stamina and courage of the young men of this country. Look around you. Count up the number of men who have lost their farm, their business, their job because of drink. Pick out the boy or the girl you want to see drink this poison slop, then vote for liquor IF YOU CAN.

IF YOU MUST VOTE FOR LIQUOR—BE FAIR—DRINK IT YOURSELF.

They Don't Dare Tell The Truth About Liquor

Why Don't They Explain The Bootleggers Now In Boone County?

Saloons Breed 'Leggers

Legal Liquor Provides A Smoke-Screen

WET COUNTIES ARE LOUSY WITH MOONSHINERS

High taxes on liquor MULTIPLY Bootleggers. The legal stores in wet counties provide an outlet for their wares. Jos. H. Choat, former chief of the Federal Alcoholic Administration stated 4 years ago that ONE HALF OF ALL LIQUOR SOLD IN THE U. S. WAS ILLICIT LIQUOR. Bootleggers are literally over-running the nation. The U. S. has started using planes to run them down. It is now costing the U. S. $632,000-00 per year MORE to fight bootleggers SINCE REPEAL than the average cost of enforcing prohibition. In wet Nelson County with 17 legal distilleries, a gigantic illicit still was captured last fall. IN ONE SINGLE DAY in the U. S. Court at Paducah, 48 bootleggers were sentenced to federal prisons. In wet Princeton during July and August, 1937, out of 60 arrests for drunkenness, 58 were drunk on bootleg liquor according to the evidence. Rowan County voted wet. A short time later two men were killed on poison liquor and later nine illict distillers were arrested.

The Citizens of Boone County Are Not Fooled

When Boone County VOTES DRY March 6

The liquor dealers in their nervous fears of Boone County voting dry on March 6 have slightly over-stepped the facts when they intimate that we should continue them in the business of making easy money off unfortunates, if we want to protect the old age pensions.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

The attention of this office has been called to the fact that certain interest are stating that the "wet-dry" issue in various counties is connected with Old Age Assistance. Such a statement is false. The revenue drived from liquor is paid into the State General Fund like all other forms of revenue, and are not "ear-marked" for Old Age Assistance. No. discrimination is made in this office in regards to religion, race, color, creed, or political affiliation of applicants for Old Age Assistance. Therefore, none will be made because of their attitude toward local option election on liquor.

Who Wants To Keep Boone County Wet?

The brewers and distillers of Louisville, New York and Cincinnati along with the local liquor dealers who are making the money out of the business and can afford to spend thousands of dollars in an attempt to keep Boone County in the clutches of the traffic by intimidating and deceiving the voters. IT IS THE SAME OLD SALOON OUTFIT!

Don't Be Deceived?

No Liquor Revenue Is Lost to Boone County

Dry Boone County will receive her full share of the $9,157,255.20 pouring into the State's general fund from the 7 breweries, 200 wholesale liquor distributors and 4,500 beer and whiskey saloons over the State. The ONLY State revenue Boone County will lose amounts to LESS THAN TWO CENTS PER PERSON. The local fees Boone County will lose HAS NEVER PAID FOR TAKING CARE OF THE DRUNKS. YES, BOONE COUNTY WILL SAVE THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS BY GOING DRY.

The Liquor Traffic

DOES NOT PAY ITS OWN DAMAGE
SO THE TAXPAYERS PAY THE BILL

"G-man" J. Edgar Hoover stated that last year our crime bill was fifteen billion dollars—$10.00 per month for every man, woman and child. The New York Liquor Commission states in their book "The Effects of Alcohol," that nearly one-half of all crime is CAUSED BY LIQUOR. The liquor traffic makes the money. The people PAY THE BILLS.

Five years ago, Mayor Scholtz of Louisville appeared before the legislative council in Frankfort and appealed for more liquor tax because Louisville was losing money taking care of the product of drink. "Costs," declared the mayor, "have increased steadily, outlays being greater from year to year for the keep of prisoners, their medical care and for the care of dependents of liquor addicts." And NO WONDER. In 1929, the peak of Prohibition, Louisville had 2,155 arrests for drunkenness. In 1937 it had a total of 12,200 ARRESTS FOR DRUNKENNESS and 4,000 of these were boys and girls under age. THAT'S WHAT REPEAL HAS DONE.

The circuit judges of this state declare that 80 to 90 per cent of their criminal cases are caused by drink. "G-man" Hoover declared in 1937 that the past three years have been th most terrible years in the crime history of Amrica. IF THE LIQUOR BUSINESS HAD TO PAY FOR THE DAMAGE IT CREATES, IT WOULD BANKRUPT ITS BUSINESS SO THAT TAXPAYEYRS PAY THE BILL.

NOW IS OUR CHANCE TO BANISH LIQUOR FROM BOONE COUNTY

IF WE FAIL we cannot vote again for three long DANGEROUS years

VOTE YES!

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

Last night at Jeb Crowell's house we were talking about the funny laws some people have put through in this country.

"Railroad law I once heard about," says Basil Strube, the station-master, "said when two trains meet at an intersection, neither can proceed until the other one has gone ahead.

"That just don't make sense," says Pete Swanson.

"Lots of laws don't make sense," says Jeb. "What about Prohibition?"

Well he had us there. Now that it's all over, it's hard to realize how people put up with a law like that, even as long as they did.

From where I sit, a man's got every right to enjoy a glass of beer—as a friendly drink of moderation. And most folks are tolerant enough to respect the other person's right to do so.

I reckon Jeb was right—we've had some mighty strange laws in this country.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

Did you get a card from Secretary Wickard asking you to put as much weight on your hogs as you can and get them off to market as soon as you can?

Anyway, that's one of the things the Secreatary wants to help the war effort. And along that line, I got what I think is an important suggestion—use Dr. Hess Hog Special!

Here's why. Hog Special hogs on the Research Farm finish out SOONER and use as much as a THIRD less supplement and 10% less grain. I'd sure feel I was doing you a good turn if I could convince you to try Hog Special.

Yours truly,
Conrad Hardware, Walton, Ky.

Local Option Highlights

——The Temperance Side——

It is a conceded fact that liquor is the source of much evil and if voting the Nation, the State or smaller territory dry would abolish liquor from such area and eliminate the evils, it would be a blessing. But as conclusively proven by National prohibition, it does not do this, it merely diverts the industry from legalized, controlled channels to the bootlegger, the "Blind Tiger" and disreputable dives, any of which is really dangerous and the source of even greater evils.

It is generally known that, with millions spent by the Government to enforce it, National prohibition was an utter failure. A product of this period were hordes of bootlegers, racketiers and gangsters, hundreds of whom became immensely wealthy from the illicit traffic in liquor. It brought about a wave of crime the like of which was never know before and a disrespect of all laws, which to a degree, is still prevalent and will take the Country years to overcome.

From the time of adoption of National prohibition, liquors of all kinds continued to be sold in practically every section of the Country, even right here in Boone county barrels of moonshine were sold and consumed. In fact, here in Walton, it was sold so openly that a total stranger could come into town and in ten minutes time find all he wanted. Now, if with a nation-wide area legally dry the law could not be enforced, how could it be possible to elimate the sale in so small a section as our county which is entirley surrounded by wet territory. In addition to the accommodating bootlegger, all one would have to do would be to step over the line and get all he wanted.

Too, in event of the county being voted dry, there would almost surely be a place opened up over the line outside of Walton, over which the town would have no control and could operate as it saw fit. Such a place would likely be a road house, many of which do not respect the Sabbath Day and promote dancing, slot machines and other forms of amusement to attract young people. Would you want your boy or your girl to frequent such a place? Our older citizens well remember the trouble years ago our town suffered from just a midget "Blind Tiger" located outside of Walton.

Quoting from report of the State revenue department published last Sept. 14th. "The Federal Government this year issued more than 300 retail alcoholic beverage licenses in 50 dry counties of the State". Think of it, an average of over six to the county, to say nothing about the usual individual bootlegger. Does that look like voting a county dry eliminates the sale of liquor within its bounderies? "Blind Tigers" do not take chances with the Federal Government but evidently, they do not fear local enforcement. So, the principal change in this wide territory wherein liquors continue to be sold, is that the State and cities within these counties lose thousands of dollars a year in revenue.

In many counties of the State voted dry the contests were not based on a clean-cut wet and dry issue, the elections were called primarily to get rid of disorderly road houses and slot machine operations. If such conditions existed here we would be ready to do likewise as such degrading conditions should not be tolerated. But there are no road houses or slot machine joints in Boone county for which we should be thankful.

The consumption of liquor cannot be eliminated by legislation. The American people respond to persuasion and reasoning but cannot be driven. Tell a child, "You cannot have a certain thing", that, is the very thing the child is determined to have. Human nature is the same at all ages. Continued appeals for temperance instead of "You cannot have it" will do much toward reducing the sale and consumption of liquor.

Walton is surely a law abiding town. It has a wide reputation of being one of the most quiet and one of the best behaved towns in the State. In voting it dry you would have nothing to gain but plenty to lose, you could not make it better but it could be made worse and likely exposed to over-the-line influences you would be ashamed of. And too, you evidently would have the opportunity to pay additional taxes levied by the town to make up the loss in revenue now being received from this source.

With due respect to the original promoters of the local option movement, they were not here during National prohibition and could not have observed the conditions existing at that time. A very large proportion of the population of Boone county are moral, substantial people, yet during the nine years since repeal there was no concerted agitation for such a movement by the citizens of the county who were face to face with the situation both during prohibition and the period since that time. Evidently, most of them believed that Boone county was already "a better place to live in" and are in a position to make intelligent comparsions.

There is no better behaved county in the State than the county of Boone. "A State revenue agent made the remark a short time ago, "If all counties of Kentucky were as clean as Boone I would be out of a job". It has been well governed and its financial condition is something to be proud of. Compare it both morally and as regards financial condition with any other county either wet or dry, in the State. You will find that none surpass it.

The U. S. Treasury Department released to the public last August an accounting for their fisical year ending June 30, 1942. For the year, alcoholic beverages had paid the Government a total of $1,048,516,705.00. Think of it, over a billion. That sum could buy 16 battle ships of the Carolina class or 3,000 bomers. And too, due to additional taxes on liquors of date last November first, the income from that source is now much greater. Was there ever a time that our Country needed the money more? Without doubt, this is not a time to lessen that income one penny. Too, regardless of their views on the matter, it certainly is a queer kind of gratitude for our boys in the service, many of whom are fighting and some dying to preserve our liberty, in having the election held at a time when they are deprived of having a voice in the contest. As a whole, would it not be more patriotic at this time and more considerate of our soldier boys to get behind a major drive to sell war bonds to help them win the war?

In 1933 the State debt amounted to $26,500,000.00. From 1933 to 1941 the State received in revenue from the alcoholic beverage industry more than $55,000,000.00, over twice enough to pay the entire debt. For the fisical year ending June 30, 1942 the State received in taxes from the industry the sum of $9,157,255.00.

The Drys proclaim that their ultimate goal is to vote the State dry. In this event heavy taxes would have to be levied to make up this huge loss in revenue and probably place a heavy burden on citizens and tax payers. Is it not less painful to secure the money from this source than from direct taxation? Remember, that in voting the State dry you have nothing to gain but plenty to lose, liquors would be continued to be sold as it was during National prohibition and as it is now in other supposedly dry counties of the State, but you would have plenty to lose. Would you be willing to dig down deep in your pockets to pay your part of additional direct taxes that would have to be levied to make up the loss of the huge amount of over nine million dollars EACH year? Why "kill the goose that lays the golden egg?"

The foregoing is not just talk, all the data of same are facts, none of which can be disproven.

Whether you are for or against the proposal, be sure to vote election day, March 6th. A full vote is hoped for.—Adv.

KENTUCKY'S "SELF-REGULATION" PROGRAM

Perhaps you have not heard of the constructive work being done by this Committee to maintain high standards of decency and law observance wherever beer is sold in this State.

For 8 years now, we have acted as the conscience of the beer industry. Others cannot be as critical of us as we are of ourselves. We have an ancient and honorable tradition to uphold.

We help to drive the law-breakers from the ranks of beer retailers. Decent retailers, running wholesome places, deserve this protection.

Working closely with law enforcement officials, we ferret out the facts, face law violators with them. Warn them: Clean up or Close up! Unheeded warnings have one result. Your officials then step in, revoke or suspend licenses. Or order some other suitable disciplinary action.

Thus we help to maintain conditions in your community on a level that you would approve. If you hear of law violation, please report it to the proper officers, or to us.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

Nobody's yelling "too little and too late" about what's being produced in the feedlot. Everybody knows the farmer is turning out fighting food even if there is a big labor shortage.

Facts is, though, that still more and more meat is needed and I want to make a sugestion about your hogs. I'm going to suggest, if you're not already doing it, that you give them Dr. Hess Hog Special. You see, Research Farm hogs getting Hog Special gain faster and on as much as a third less supplement and a tenth less corn.

I also hope you're worming your hogs with PTZ, another mighty fine Dr. Hess Product.

Yours truly,

THREE "Don'ts" THAT WILL MAKE YOUR IRON LAST LONGER

DON'T use your iron if handle is rickety. The constant wiggling of a loose handle causes plug to rock back and forth on rigid terminals in iron socket. This in turn produces arcing or flashing of electric current inside the plug, which burns and pits the terminals, resulting in poor electrical contact and slow or irregular heating, or perhaps no heat at all. Always have your iron handle tightened at the first sign of looseness.

DON'T pull plug from iron socket while cord is connected to outlet. Each time you do so, the electricity arcs or flashes when connection is broken, gradually burning and pitting the terminals and eventually resulting in unsatisfactory operation of iron due to damaged electrical contacts. Always disconnect cord at wall outlet. If your iron is automatic, use thermostat to regulate heat instead of pulling plug.

DON'T drop your iron. Of course, you wouldn't do this intentionally, but use every precaution against it. Dropping your iron may break inside connections or damage the thermostat. More irons are put out of commission by being dropped than by any other single cause. Always set iron firmly on a stand on its heel rest . . . never on a sloping or slippery place.

OTHER TIPS on Iron Care: Avoid ironing over buttons, hooks, zippers and other hard articles that might scratch sole plate. . . . Keep bottom of iron clean by wiping with damp cloth when cool or by using mild abrasive or fine steel wool if necessary . . . Never immerse iron in water. . . . To remove starch, sprinkle a little salt on waxed paper and run warm iron over it. . . . Never wrap cord around hot iron. . . . Always let iron cool before putting it away.

False Imprisonment

That the legal term "false imprisonment" has been given wide interpretation by the courts is illustrated by a New York case of a few years ago, according to Collier's. A gentleman, upon failing to purchase a ticket to a ball game, tried to leave the park through an entrance, but was swept backwards by the inrushing crowds for more than an hour. So he sued the club for false imprisonment and was awarded $500.

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for February 28

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

JESUS RESTORES LAZARUS TO LIFE

LESSON TEXT—John 11:32-35, 38-44.
GOLDEN TEXT—"I am the resurrection, and the life."—John 11:25.

Suffering, sorrow and bereavement are so common in our day that this lesson is peculiarly appropriate. Life, even to the Christian, finds its full measure of things which hurt and grieve. Many ask: "Why must I, a follower of Christ, bear such burdens?"

The answer is, that while the believer is not "of the world," he is "in the world," and here he must meet the problems of life, including the evils to which the flesh is heir because of sin. The fact that Jesus is our Friend and our Saviour does not exempt us from human sorrow, but it does assure us of the needed grace to bear the trial and makes us ready to trust Him even in life's darkest hour.

Lazarus, the friend of Jesus, was sick. The home in which Jesus had found rest and fellowship was in deep trouble. Jesus was no longer in Judea. In haste, word was sent to Him of His friend's illness. But He did not come.

Why does He delay? Such is the heart-cry of thousands today who call on Him in their hour of trouble. The purposes of God we cannot fully understand. We need only to trust Him and abide His time.

Notice that His failure to respond at once to the message of Lazarus' sisters did not mean that He had deserted them (John 11:4-6). Nor did it mean that He had denied them His help (v. 7).

Above all, note that He came. He always does. Jesus has never failed any child of His. The time and the manner of His answer to our prayers may not conform to our opinion of what should have been done; but let us remember that we know only in part. He knows all. Let us trust Him. Job, in his darkest hour, said: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him" (Job 13:15).

The steps from sorrow to victorious joy in this story are three in number.

I. Death and Tears (vv. 32-25).

By the time Jesus came, Lazarus was dead and his family and friends could only weep as they said: "If thou hadst been here—" Try as we may to temper its cruel blow, the fact remains that death is the enemy of man. It came into the world as the result of sin (Rom. 5:12), and only in Christ is it "swallowed up in victory" (I Cor. 15:54). Until the glorious day of Christ's returning, when the redemption of the body will be complete (Rom. 8:23), death will continue to bring sorrow to the heart and tears to the eyes.

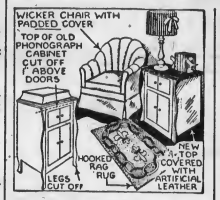
But let us not fail to notice that as the friends of Jesus, we do not sorrow alone. "Jesus wept" (v. 35) with Martha and Mary. We know that He weeps with us in our trying hour. He is the "friend that sticketh closer than a brother." He is the one who gives grace to meet the deepest sorrow, and to bear it with grace because of His tender fellowship.

II. Faith and Hope (vv. 38-40).

"If thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest see the glory of God," said Jesus to Martha. She must look beyond the evident fact of the deadness of her brother and see God's glory in his resurrection. Thus faith assures us that those who believe in Christ have more than the comfort of His sympathizing presence—they have a sure hope (read I Thess. 4:14-18).

Sorrow and unbelief would becloud our faith and thus rob us of our hope. Martha needed to have her faith stimulated by the gracious words of the Lord; and then she triumphantly put her hope in Him, the Christ of God. Once we recognize Him as God, we have no hesitation in believing in His miraculous power.

III. Christ and Resurrection (vv. 41-44).



Majestic and authoritative are the words of Christ, "I am the resurrection and the life" (v. 25). He it was who gave life, for was He not "in the beginning with God"? And is it not said of Him, that "all things were made by him" (John 1:2, 3)? Paul tells us that "by him all things consist" (Col. 1:17). He is the only one who could say: "I lay down my life . . . I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it up again" (John 10:17, 18).

So it can rightly be said that if we have Christ we have everything—both in this world and in the world to come. But if we do not have Christ, we have nothing; we are without God and without hope. "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (v. 25) is the promise of Christ to us. Let us believe it.

The resurrection power of Christ is at work in the world today raising the spiritually dead to newness of life in Him.

May we see many such a Lazarus called forth—loosed from the grave clothes of sin and set free.

ON THE HOME FRONT with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

SO MANY readers have written me to ask what could be made from old phonograph cabinets, and it is only recently that we have found a really satisfactory answer. This smart reading stand with deep green leatherette top has good proportions and is made from an old oak cabinet rubbed down with sandpaper and then waxed.

The new top of the reading stand is made of old lumber and the cover is tacked in place with brass tacks to match the knobs of the doors. The old sound box at the top now houses a small radio and the old record compartment keeps current magazines neatly separated.

YOU WOMEN WHO SUFFER FROM HOT FLASHES

If you suffer from hot flashes, dizziness, distress of "irregularities", are weak, nervous, irritable, blue at times—due to the functional "middle-ages" period in a woman's life—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—the best-known medicine you can buy today that's made especially for women.

Pinkham's Compound has helped thousands upon thousands of women to relieve such annoying symptoms. Follow label directions. Pinkham's Compound is worth trying!

Vocal Cords, Heft, Legs To Weather 'Covered'

The Lloyds of London, famous for underwriting policies insuring the legs of dancers, the vocal chords of singers, the heft of circus fat ladies, etc., have also insured the weather. One Hollywood film production insured itself against all kinds of weather except snow for a "shot" in the mountains where snow was vital.

Theater managers in England insure the royal family against death because this event closes the theaters during a period of national mourning.

VEGETABLE GROWERS
Horticultural Specialist to Visit Crescent Springs Community Friday.

Mr. John S. Gardner, Field agent in Vegetable crops from the Extension Service College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky. will meet with vegetable growers in the Crescent Springs Section Friday, February 26th at 10:00 A. M. in Crescent Springs fire-house bldg.

The vegetable production problems to be studied at the meeting are;

1. Plant-bed management, growing arly plants.
2. Disease resistant strains of tomatoes and other plants. Insect control.
3. Use of fertilizers and food production goals.
4. Labor problems.

Cannery Tomato Producers

Farmers who are planning to grow cannery tomatoes can obtain helpful suggestions from the Horticultural Department by communicating with your county agricultural agent, and having your name put on the mailing list for cannery tomatoes growers. A service letter is planned by Mr. Gardner for tomato producers who will grow cannery tomatoes this year.

Community Program Meetings Held

During the past two weeks community program meetings have been held in the Crescent Springs-Dudley pike - Erlanger; Piner-Fiskburg - Morning View; Bracht: Independence section of the county.

Food Production Problems

In each section a study was made of farm practices that can be used to help the farmers in their food production program for 1943. Several practices in each of the following activities were recommended.

Dairying, Sheep, Swine, Poultry, Beef cattle, farm crops, hay and pasture improvement.

At most of the meetings farmers stressed the need for improving the pasture and grass land and to make plans for needed hay crops, because much of the hay and grass has been damaged by the open winter this season and the frequent freezing and thawing. Much of the alfalfa on the ridge lands has been damaged.

PRODUCTION PROGRAM OUTLINE

Ask your county Agricultural Agent for Production Program outline on Dairying, Sheep, Swine, Poultry and leaflets prepared by the Extension Service, College of Agriculture, Lexington, Ky.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

I'm going to make a guess that there's a cow in your stanchions right now that's not eating like she should and not producing like she should.

Answer to this is winter and confinement and dry feed and lagging appetites and sometimes clogged systems. Give those cows something that will stimulate appetite and help them make better use of their feed. I mean Dr. Hess Stock Tonic.

Cows on the Research Farm that get Stock Tonic give as much as a fourth pound more milk per pound of grain consumed. There's something to ponder over. And I'd sure like to see you take home a drum of Stock Tonic.

Yours truly,
Conrad Hardware; Walton, Ky.

LIQUOR BILL,

Calling For Local Option, Is Killed By Voice Vote In Indiana Senate.

Indianapolis, February 20-(AP)—The local option liquor bill was killed in the Indiana Senate today by a voice vote. The bill, which has aroused a storm of controversy, passed out with dramatic swiftness, after being reported without recommendation by the Senate's Public Policy Committee.

Senator Leslie T. Thompson, Republican, Evansville, gained recognition from Lieutenant Gov. Dawnson, who was presiding, and presented a motion for the measure's indefinite postponement.

The Lieutenant Governor whacked his gavel, called for the aye vote. From all over the chamber came a shout of "ayes." The presiding officer then called for the "noes." There were a few negative votes and Dawson declared the Thompson motion carried.

This is what Indiana thinks of local option, the State that had as strong liquor enforcement laws during National Prohibition as any State in the Union.

PROHIBITION HISTORY

The Wickersham Committee appointed by President Hoover in 1930 to investigate prohibition, stated in their report based on actual investigation that, "More people were killed in attempted enforcement of prohibition from 1920 to 1930 than were killed in the Spanish American and Revolutionary wars." "Gangsters, Criminals, Hoodlums and Racketiers have taken control of our courts and ruled by Bribery, Corruption, Threats of Violence and Murder".

Kite Flying Dangerous Play

A soaring kite dives into a power line. A small boy climbs a pole to untangle it. Suddenly there is a flash and a limp little body hurtles to the ground.

Dozens of times each year this tragedy is enacted in communities throughout the land. Dozens of little children annually lose their lives or suffer painful injuries in accidents involving kites and wires, either through lack of knowledge of the hazards involved or because of a youthful disregard of danger.

It is to prevent occurrences of this kind from happening here that the local power company annually publishes warnings in the newspapers and schools. This year the company again asks the cooperation of parents in calling the following safety rules to the attention of their children:

1. Don't use fine wire or metallic string.
2. Don't use wet string or fly kites in damp weather.
3. Don't use metal kite sticks.
4. Don't climb poles to get kites caught in wires.
5. Don't poke sticks at tangled kites or attempt to pull them down by their tails.
6. Always fly kites in open fields, clear away from power lines and busy highways.

"Both fine wire and the tinselled string sold for gift wrapping are conductors of electricity and so is string that is wet," cautions R. M. Hall, power company manager. "When any of these falls across a power line, it may result in a fatal shock to the kite flyer, and may also cause a short circuit that will interrupt power service. Children should use only dry cotton string in flying their kites and they should avoid the use of metal or wire in making them. If a kite becomes tangled in electric lines, it is best to call the light company office and let one of our men take it down. In climbing a pole to get a kite a child may come in contact with a live wire or in attempting to pull it down by its tail or poke it loose with a stick, he may cause two wires to come together causing a service interruption."

Homemaker's Desires Names For Service Roll.

Boone County Homemaker's Committee, on the erection of an Honor Roll for Service men and women, urges that names not available through the Selective Service office be turned in to members of the clubs for their citizenship chairman, or to Mrs. Mary Scott Moore, Home Demonstration Agent.

The Honor Roll will be placed in the yard of the courthouse at Burlington and will be paid for by the popular donation. Contributions boxes will be found in banks and stores throughout the county. It is a privilege to contribute to the fund which honors our citizens who are in the Service of our country.

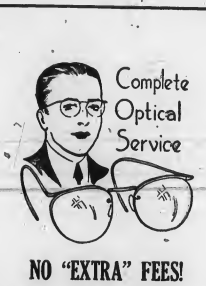
"Dress and Moral" Homemakers Subject



Clothing leaders in local Homemakers groups will be in the spot light at the March meetings. The lesson "Dress and Morale" will offer many interesting features to the women who plans and sews for her family. Homemakers learned methods of re-cutting and setting-in sleeves at classes last month. Mrs. Mary Scott Moore reports that improved practices adopted are already showing in the changing sleeve lines exhibited at meetings.

The county agents are cooperating to bring information to the Homemaker with regard to the victory garden and food prouction programs. Questions on these subjects will be answered by the agent at local meetings. Mrs. Moore will add information of the point food ration program.

The schedule is a follows (Visitors and new members will be welcomed):

Boone County Conservation News

Two diversion ditches were staked out on T. H. McCaffey farm about three miles north of Walton on highway No. 25. A district conservation plan has been developed on this farm. Mr. McCaffey built six diversion ditches last fall. They are doing the job of diverting consentrated runoff water which normally went down the slope, causing erosion. Mr. McCaffey plans to make a "Garden of Eden" out of 8 acres of land, plainly speaking, is tough. He has already started plowing in the ditches and smoothing over the rough places. He will then lime and phosphate and after sowing a rich mixture of grasses and legumes, he will mulch the entire plot. A diversion ditch, will be built at the brow of the hill to check the runoff.

The district plan on Mr. G. C. Ransoms farm near Verona calls for a stock pond. The district technician will stake out the pond, and furnish Mr. Ransom with plans for building it.

On a once badly gullied field accross the railroad on the J. R. Worthington farm west of Verona pine and locust are now growing. They were planted four years ago. Erosion will gradually stop.

Plans are now under way with the farmers in the Verona Community to work together and get about three hundred tons of lime crushed. The Boone county district is cooperating in this undertaking by contacting those who have lime to crush and routing the crusher in this as well as other communities in the county. Anyone having limestone that they wanted crushed contact J. C. Acree of the district office, or H. R. Forkner, county agent at Burlington, Dance Bros. at Verona, or any of the Soil Conservation Supervisors. Piles of lime rock around in the country look like monuments. Lets convert these monuments into working capital by crushing and spreading.

Mr. J. E. Riddell of the Hebron community says he hopes his neighbors won't see him plowing when he starts breaking land on the contour on his farm at Hebron. Mr. Riddell is re-arranging his garden so it will be planted on the contour. Stakes will be placed by the district so that Mr. Riddell will be able to carry out these practices.

Grow More Tomatoes

Mr. Woods, with the Walton Cannery, says that he would like to have contracts on two hundred acres more. There are two good reasons why you should grow tomatoes. No. 1. Uncle Sam needs them. No. 2. They are really a good cash crop this year. Farmers in Western Kentucky grew tomatoes for a third of this years price and they said they made money. See Mr. Woods for a contract and if he gets his capacity, grow them anyway for there will be a big demand for canning tomatoes this year. You know it don't take long to use up those precious 48 points.

Victory Book Campaign

The Victory Book Campaign ends Saturday, March 6th—Won't you be patriotic and give a book for this worthy cause?

A good book means more than you can know to a home sick soldier—A sailor who has left all to defend your rights to liberty and happiness.

Please leave your books at the Post Office or give them to Mrs. Relda Powers in Verona.

D. L. Lusby's Store Robbed

The new store of D. L. Lusby's in North Walton, was entered about 5 o'clock Thursday morning, by four men. About $350 dollars worth of merchandise was stolen. Mr. Lusby happened to see the men leaving, so immediately got in touch with Robert Brugh who notified the Police Department of Cincinnati.

Three of the robbers were caught by the police, they were, Robert Hulbert and Wilbour Sheparb, each 17 years of age and Joe Mays. 19 years old, and arrested for selling stolen goods. They will be tried in Cincinnati and later turned over to the Walton Police. Charles Daley, the other member has not been caught.

Treat Your Seed Potatoes This Year—Control Black Scurf Disease.

According to John S. Gardner, who met with vegetable growers in the Crescent Springs Section Friday February 26th it would be good insurance to treat your early seed potatoes for the disease known as "Black Scurf".

The Kentucky Extension Service Circular No. 37 on Potato Growing, says that Black Scurf is the organism that causes stem rot. The organism appears as hard sooty-black masses on the surface of the potatoes. Plant affected by stem rot usually are undersized and their branches tend to point upward. The stem shows brown or black diseased areas, and later rot off, cutting short the crop. The disease is almost completely prevented by seed treatment.

Simple Seed Treatment

With the high price of seed and the shortage of food supply it will be good insurance and good business to treat all early seed potatoes to control the disease, Black Scurf, and thereby increase the yield of potatoes.

The disease can be controlled by using Semesan Bel a preparation for sale by most dealers. See your local seed dealer and make plans to treat your potato seed this spring. Every extra bushel of potatoes will add to your food supply and contribute to the War Effort.

NOTICE TO FARMERS

We are still contracting for tomatoes. The price set by the government this year is .66 cents per bushel or $22.00 per ton.

Victory Banquet Held for Young People

The young people of the Walton Baptist church were entertained with a Victory Banquet Monday evening, sponsored by the Womens Missionary Society.

The banquet was held in the church basement and was arranged by Mrs. Bryan Rector, Mrs. Ed Hankinson and Mrs. C. J. Alford. Mrs. Alford is President of the Society.

Tables were served by members of the W. M. S. The tables were placed to form a V with decorations in red, white, and blue.

Mrs. Hankinson, who is Young Peoples Direcotor, acted as Mistress of ceremonies, calling for impromptu speeches from Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Alford, Bro. Alford and the various G. A. and R. A. counselors. Mrs. Rector led the singing of chorouses throughout the evening, with Mrs. Alford at the piano.

The high-light of the evening was the guest speaker, Rev. R. S. Moore, of Independence who was introduced by Mrs. Hankinson and who gave an inspirational talk to the young people.

Those enjoying the evening were: Rev. and Mrs. R. S. Moore; Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Alford, Mrs. Ed ankinson, members of the Y. W. A. and counselor, Mrs. Bryan Rector; Intermediate G. A's. and counselor, Mrs. Lawrence Wilson; Intermediate R. A's. and counselor, John Taylor; Junior G. A's. and counselor, Miss Mollie Chapman, Junior R. A's. and counselor, Myrix Crouch.

Also recognized and honored at this meeting was Mr. William Taylor, past counselor of the intermediate R. A's. who leaves this week for service in the Army. The prayers and best wishes of all go with him.

The evening came to a happy ending with the singing of "America."

Walton-Verona Coach Enters U. S. Army

Coach Homer Lee Osborne of Walton left Wednesday to become a member of Uncle Sam's Armed Forces. His leaving is a great blow to the Walton Bearcats, who have done admirable work under his tutelage.

A native of Walton, "Oz" graduated from Walton-Verona High School in 1938, having started his basketball careed under Coach Raymond Bevarly, who was responsible for the success of so many local athlets.

Immediately following his graduation from high school he entered the Eastern Kentucky State Teachers' College, where he continued to make a name for himself on the basketball court. He was a member of the Freshman Team in'38-'39 and played on the Varsity the remaining three years. Always a fair and sportsmanlike player, he distinguished himself many times by his brilliant playing.

This year represents Coach Osborne's first coaching assignment; and, although the Bearcats had won the regional championship last year, it was necessary for him to develop a new team—two of last year's first stringers having been lost through graduation and two to the services of Uncle Sam. One member of the present squad, Berkshire, had never played a game of basketball before this year.

Despite an uphill grind, "Oz" led his boys through a successful season. The Bearcats have played 16 games this season, losing but three—New Haven, Dixie Heights, and Dayton. In the game against Hebron they clinched the Boone Conference Title. Twice this season they defeated the Pioners by narrow margains.

It is with much regret that the Walton-Verona High School loses its coach, but it is confident that in his new assignment he will display the same spirit of determination and enterprise that distinguished him as a student, as an athlete and as a coach.

Baptist W. M. S. will observe the March week of Prayer with an all-day meeting at the home of Mrs. Cecil Gaines today (Thursday) Mrs. Tom Percival will present the program. Each member will bring her own box lunch. Meeting begins at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Lora Arnold Rouse, Former Resident of Walton Dies at Ft. Thomas Thursday.

Mrs. Lora Arnold Aouse, age 75, died Thursday morning, February 25th at Ft. Thomas, Ky. after a lingering illness.

She was born in Walton and lived here many years, the wife of the late Newt Rouse.

Funeral Services were conducted Saturday morning at the J. J. Sullivan Funeral Home in Cincinnati. Burial in Spring Grove cemetary.

Her only daughter, Mrs. William Breed, passed away several years ago. Mrs. Rouse is survived by an aunt, Mrs. Harry Warren of Arcadi, California, Earl Warren, Calif. Mrs. Gertrude Wetsell of Miami Fla., and Mr. Mathew Van Louvan of Ft. Thomas. Mr. and Mrs. Van Louvan have been as son and daughter to Mrs. Rouse and tenderly taken care of her every want since the passing of her daughter, Mrs. Breed.

Red Cross Quota Set For Kentucky

Louisville, Ky., February 28—A quota of $1,556,200 has been accepted by Red Cross chapters as Kentucky's contribution to the American Red Cross War Fund drive for $125,000,000, officials of the organization announced Tuesday.

The campaign started Tuesday, following a proclamation Monday by President Roosevelt, in which he designated March as Red Cross month.

Kentucky raised $799,087 toward the national goal of $70,000,000 in the last Red Cross War Fund drive shortly after the United States entered the war.

Money raised by each chapter will be divided between funds needed for local activities and funds required for national and international operations. Of the national total $80,000,000 has been allotted for activities in connection with the armed forces.

Verona Homemaker's

The Verona Homemakers will meet at the home of Mrs. Fred Hamilton Friday, March 5th at 10:30. An invitation is extended to all interested women or girls to come to these meetings. We are sure you will not only enjoy the meetings but will profit by membership in the club.

Hebron Homemaker's Club

Thirteen members of the Hebron Homemakers Club assembled at the Masonic Hall, February 10 for their regular monthly meeting. Mrs. Hilda Hogan presided over the business session.

The meeting opened with the singing of America and reading the club "Collect."

Mrs. Lorena Clore was appointed to take the place of Mrs. Marie Beacom as Foods Leader.

Mrs. Alberta Dickey, citizenship chairman gave a talk on "American Women at War." She stated that a woman's part in the first World War was to "Wait and Weep," but in this war it is "Wait and Work."

Mrs. Bessie Acra, exterior beautification chairman, gave a talk on planting of flowers, she said now is the time to bring branches of flowering shrubs, such as pussy willow forsythia, japonica etc., into the house for early blooming.

Mrs. Sue Rogers gave a very interesting report on the Farm and Home Convention she recently attended at Lexington.

She announced that Boone County won the first award on quality on their publicity book.

Mrs. Hilda Hogan and Mrs. Lorena Clore were asked to attend the Poultry meeting at the county Agents office at Burlington Wednesday, February 17th.

We regretted not having Mrs. Moore with us at our meeting.

Th clothing leaders, Mrs. Ruby Hollis and Mrs. Hilda Hogan gave a very instructive lesson on the proper way of setting in sleeves.

Members attending the meeting were: Mrs. Lizzie Grayes, Mrs. Bessie Acra, Mrs. Myrtle Crutcher, Mrs. Ethel Lea, Mrs. Lorena Clore Mrs. Virginia Pope, Mrs. Jennie Goodridge, Mrs. Sue Rogers, Mrs. Alice Schneider, Mrs. Ruby Hollis, Mrs. Flora Tanner, Mrs. Hilda Hogan and Mrs. Albert Dickey.

Record Enlistment In 4-H Victory Projects

Four-hundred Boone County boys and girls have already enlisted in the 1943 4-H Food and Fiber for Victory program acording to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Enrollment is mounting rapidly with more than eighty percent of all boys and girls between eigh and twenty year sof age expected to carry one or more Victory projects before the enlistment program closes.

The Victory garden project ranks first choice in members, poultry second and the labor service project third in favor among the agricultural project members. These projects are followed by tobacco, castor beans, hemp, dairy cattle, beef cattle, sheep and hogs.

The Victory clothing project ranks first, home canning, second and foods third among the Home Economics projects according to Mary Scott Moore, Home Agent.

The 4-H Club program represents those rural boys and girls interested in producing the maximum amount of food and fiber crops and work for the war efort. The boys and girls are organized into community clubs and project groups to facilitate instructions on carrying out the program. The project work is done on the farm and in the home under the cooperative supervision and guidance of the mothers and fathers. The boys and girls elect local adult community and project leaders to assist in the organization.

The 4-H Club program is open to every boy and girl of club age in the coutny. Enlistment cards may be secured from the local community clubs adult leaders, schools or at the county agents office in Burlington. Certificates will be awarded each boy or girl who carries a Victory project in 1943. Enroll now—boys and girls represent an important part of the Victory program.

1300 Cattle Will Receive T. B. Test This Month.

Thirteen hundred cattle will be tested in Boone County for T. B. during the next three weeks according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. This is the regular three year test of 10% of the cattle that is necessary to keep the county on the Federal T. B. free accredited list.

The testing work is being done under the supervision of the Federal and State Veterinary departments. The government pays up to $25 on grade and $50 on registered animals on the appraised value of animals that react.

Herds tested this week include those of T. P. Dunlap, George Knox, Albert Parker, Vernon Pope, Robert Youell, Wilton Stephens, P. B. Huey & Son, S. B. Scott, W. G. Kite and Purdy, T. W. Rice, Franklin Maurer and R. C. Garrison.

Farmers who desire their herds tested should tell the county agents office immediately. There is no charge for the testing. Farmers agree to sell those animals found infected with the disease.

European Corn Borer Control Meeting Planned.

Dr. W. A. Price, State Entomologist, will in the near future address Boone County farmers on the European Corn Borer control. The Corn Borer was found in large numbers in the county last year.

The date of the control meeting will be announced next wek. All farmers are urged to make plans to attend.

Community Auction Sale To Be Held

A community auction sale will be held Saturday, March 6th at the home of Earl McKinley, ½ mile South of Nicholson on the 3-L highway.

NICHOLSON

"Every one of us shall give an account of himself to God," so live, that Christ would approve of your life, forget yourself and live for the glory of God and good of your fellowmen, think his thoughts and it is easy to do his deeds, help thy brother's boat accross the stream and then your own shall reach the shore safely, no effort is required in watching another carry his load.

God speed, and very best of good wishes of a host of friends follow Mally Lambert Morgan of Independence, as he dons the uniform, and enters the Air Corps, joining the ranks of gallant defenders upholding America's cherished ideals.

INSTRUCTIONS.—To find the Point Value of an Item:
1. Find out the net weight of the contents (from the label, if any).
2. In the line across the top of the chart, showing the weight in ounces and pounds, find the column in which this weight belongs.
3. Find the item in the listing of items in the column to the left.
4. The POINT VALUE of the item appears on the same line, as the item and in the column listing the correct weight.

All Point Values must be determined by weights. If no weight is marked on the item, the item must be weighed.

In finding the Point Value of a container where contents are given in fluid ounces, consider the fluid ounces to be the same as the avoirdupois weight ounce. One pint is one pound; one quart is two pounds.

The Point Value of any item weighing over four (4) pounds shall be arrived at by multiplying the number of pounds of that item by the Point Value per pound of that item as given in the "Per Pound" column. Fractions of a pound should be figured in quarter-pounds. Fractions of a quarter-pound should be figured to the next higher quarter-pound. Thus, an item weighing 4 pounds 9 ounces would be considered as weighing 4 pounds 12 ounces for the purpose of getting the Point Value of the item.

The Liquor Dealers Say:

THAT WE LOSE STATE AND COUNTY REVENUE WHEN BOONE COUNTY VOTES DRY MARCH 6TH.

The Facts Are:

The saloon outfit knows . . . or ought to know if they care anything about the truth . . . that whether Boone County votes WET OR DRY she will continue to receive her full share of the $9,157,255.20 pouring into the state's general fund from the 7 breweries, 200 wholesale liquor distributors and over 4,500 beer and whiskey saloons over the state. The ONLY state revenue Boone County loses amounts to LESS THAN TWO CENTS PER PERSON. The local license fees collected from beer and whiskey joints DO NOT PAY for the care and maintenance of the drunks they produce. Boone County WILL SAVE MONEY when she votes dry March 6th.

TO VOTE DRY--VOTE YES

At Local Option Election March 6

The people of Boone County think more of clean bodies, active minds, healthy children, and happy homes than they do of taxes gained by red noses, trembling hands and snakes-in-the-boots!

BOONE COUNTY IS CALLING A HALT

Vote Yes March 6

Let's Have The Whole Truth About Liquor!

Not By My Vote!

Men will have strong drink, and men will sell liquor, BUT

Not By My Vote

Saloons may go like the brook, forever, and men may die by the thousands in them, but

Not By My Vote

Youth may be wrecked and character dismantled, home may be destroyed, and women and children beggared, but

Not By My Vote

Children may be caught in the saloon snare, the victims of alcohol may fill our jails, almshouses and insane asylums, but

Not By My Vote

The saloon may degrade and impoverish the people; producing idleness, disease and pauperism. It may breed anarchy and crime, but

Not By My Vote

The government may license the drink traffic and for a consideration take "a reward against the innocent" and bargain away the public health and the public morals, but

Not By My Vote

The liquor traffic may corrupt the social and political llife of the nation; it may worm its way into all business and even into the sacred precincts of the home and the church, but

Not By My Vote

The bells may toll the death knell of a human being slain by rum ever yfive minutes of the day, but

Not By My Vote

THE LIQUOR DEALERS SAY---

It's not a question of "Wet or Dry" - - It's Legal or Illegal Liquor

Listen to the sad, sad wail of the saloon outfit . . . PLEASE, OH! PLEASE don't vote liquor out, 'cause if you do this naughty thing to us, more liquor will be sold in Boone County. WELL! IF IT'S LIQUOR THEY WANT SOLD—WHAT ARE THEY CRYING ABOUT?

The Liquor Dealers Say:

That Prohibition was a failure. Their favorite gossip—between drinks—is to drag out the old threadbare chestnuts about prohibition being so terrible—causing more crime, more drunkenness, etc., etc.

Let The Dealers Read The Following and Weep:

Prohibition Stopped Liquor Advertising

LEGAL LIQUOR IS NOW ADVERTISED AND UNDER OUR NOSE EVERYWHERE

In restaurants, candy, drug, cigar, and grocery stores, pool rooms and on our highways, in filling stations and crime breeding roadhouses. It constantly and "legally" tempts and destroys our youth, debauches our womanhood, breeds pauperism and misery and corrupts our government. Enticing liquor signs clutter our highways. Liquor forces its way into our homes through alluring pictures and outrageous statements in magazines and newspapers. Brilliantly colored lights advertise liquor on our strees. Tempting window displays greet our children. And blatant beer radio programs invade our family circle.

Prohibition Decreased Drunkenness 70%

SINCE REPEAL GENERAL DRUNKENNESS HAS INCREASED 300% according to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Drunks are everywhere. In Louisville "illegal" liquor in 1929, the very peak of Prohibition, caused 2,155 arrests for drunkenness. In 1937, 12,200 persons were arrested for drunkenness. And the terrible tragedy of it all was that nearly 4,000 of these arrested WERE CHILDREN AND YOUNG PEOPLE UNDER AGE. In this city and county—everywhere drunkenness has increased. MOST PEOPLE DRINK BECAUSE IT IS HANDY. Very few people in comparison will hunt up liquor over in the hollow. GIVE THE UNFORTUNATES IN THIS COUNTY A CHANCE TO CLEAN-UP. DON'T KEEP LIQUOR UNDER THEIR NOSE EVERYWHERE THEY GO.

Prohibition Decreased 54%

SINCE LEGAL LIQUOR RETURNED UNDER REPEAL general crime has increased, according to 'G-man' J. Edgar Hoover. He further stated in 1937 that the past three years have been the most terrible in the criminal history of America. J. M. Watters, director of the division of correction of the State Welfare Department at Frankfort, declared recently that "Unless something is done, crime is going to bankrupt the State." In wet Floyd County the grand jury declared that murder was on the increase in that county due to the increased sale of liquor at roadhouses. Judge James M. Gilbert said recently that roadhouses were breeders of crime. We have 1000 more men in Kentucky prisons than we had in 1935.

69 Counties Dry

And Every County Satisfied

Kentucky Is Going Dry Faster Than Any State in the Union Excluding All Liquor Above 1%.

Let's Vote Boone Dry

And Make It the 70th in This Steady March Toward A Dry Kentucky.

The Liquor Dealers Say;

Local Option Does Not Work

THE FACTS ARE:

Testimonials of business men, law officers and others in dry counties prove that it does work. Hundreds are on file but space forbids quoting only a few.

MENIFEE COUNTY— "County officers signed a statement saying, cases in court decreased as much as 75 per cent."

CARTER COUNTY—"Less bootlegging and drunkenness and safe for our boys and girls."

ELLIOTT COUNTY— "It doesn't seem like the same place."

OWEN COUNTY—"We are surrounded by wet counties, but conditions are so much better, it is not the same place."

ALLEN COUNTY—Scottsville Chief of Police says; "I have very little to do since we voted liquor out."

POWELL COUNTY—"About 75% improvement."

METCALFE COUNTY—"100% improvement. I was County Judge during liquor and am now County Attorney, and I am in a position to know."

HARDIN COUNTY—"The first weekend after prohibition became effective only three arrests were made, two for drunkenness, as compared to 27 on previous weekends," so stated the Jailer.

Let's Make Boone County A Clean Place To Live In!

The Liquor Dealers Say:

HELP KEEP THE MONEY SPENT FOR LIQUOR AT HOME.

THEY WOULD HAVE YOU BELIEVE THAT VOTING LIQUOR OUT will drive people to other places. This, of course, is faslc. People do not go to beer joints and whiskey saloons to buy dry goods and groceries. The good people of the community would like to have some place to get a lunch without having to eat in a beer joint. Certainly with liquor under their nose everywhere, it is more tempting to buy than if they had to go 2 miles away.

THE ONLY LIQUOR MONEY THAT REMAINS IN this county NOW is what goes in the pockets of the dealers. The rest goes to the wholesalers outside the county. The food and clothing stores suffer and the taxpayers pay the bills for the crime, the drunks and pauperism caused by liquor.

To Vote Dry--Vote YES

The Liquor Dealers Say:

THAT WHEN BOONE VOTES DRY, OLD AGE PENSIONS AND OUR SCHOOLS WILL SUFFER.

THIS IS WRONG. Hon. A. Y. Lloyd, State Director of Public Assistance, declares that "such a statement is false." And he ought to know. Old age pensions and our schools receive support from the state's general fund. Liquor revenue is NOT earmarked for these agencies. BOTH WILL CONTINUE TO RECEIVE THEIR USUAL SUPPORT. As a matter of fact Boone County, WET OR DRY, will continue to receive her share of the over six million dollars in liquor revenue coming from the distilleries, breweries, wholesalers and 6,000 beer and liquor saloons ovr the state. THIS COUNTY'S ONLY LOSS in state revenue amounts to LESS THAN TWO CENTS PER PERSON.

TO VOTE DRY--VOTE YES

BOONE COUNTY LOCAL OPTION COMMITTEE

REV. R. A. JOHNSON, Chairman

Wm. C. RYLE, Secretary

The Liquor Dealers Say:

"Local Option means the return of the bootlegger."

SINCE WHEN HAS THE BOOTLEGGER EVER LEFT US?

LEGAL LIQUOR is the smoke screen for bootleggers. High liquor taxes BREEDS THEM like flies. Liquor control authorities claim that one-half of ALL THE LIQUOR sold in wet territory IS ILLEGAL LIQUOR. Moonshiners and bootleggers are getting so numerous the government is planning to hunt them down with planes. According to a statement made in December 1937, by the Northern Kentucky Liquor dealers, "many beer joints BOOTLEG HARD LIQUOR." VOTE YES MARCH 6TH AND REMOVE THIS SMOKE SCREEN.

CLEAN UP THESE DEPLORABLE CONDITIONS. DRIVE THESE DESPICABLE AND DANGEROUS CRIMINALS OUT IN THE OPEN WHERE THEY MAY BE DETECTED AND CAPTURED.

To Vote Dry--Vote YES

The Voters Have Had All They Wanted of So-called..."Regulated Liquor"
They Are Going To The Polls Saturday, March 6 and Outlaw All Liquor!

THE RAM THAT KNOWS THE RATTLE OF MACHINE GUNS

We take great pride in our livestock, for we have some of the best to be found anywhere.

England also takes pride in its livestock. Many breeds of cattle, sheep and horses come from there.

We think farming has been hard this past season, with the shortage of labor and machinery. It has been harder elsewhere. In England, for example, feed is scarce, meats are needed badly by the people, and German airmen machine gun the farm animals in the fields every chance they get. We must remember this all the time—and buy War Bonds—all that we possibly can.

There are two good reasons for buying War Bonds. The first is that it will give our boys the guns and planes and tanks they must have. The second is that War Bonds are a sound investment. They never depreciate in value. They return a third more than the original cost in ten years. You can cash them any time after sixty days. Buy Bonds now—to help your country and to help yourself—at your bank or post office.

MAKE EVERY MARKET DAY BOND DAY

Dear Mr. Farmer:

Nobody's yelling "too little and too late" about what's being produced in the feedlot. Everybody knows the farmer is turning out fighting food even if there is a big labor shortage.

Facts is, though, that still more and more meat is needed and I want to make a sugestion about your hogs. I'm going to suggest, if you're not already doing it, that you give them Dr. Hess Hog Special. You see, Research Farm hogs getting Hog Special gain faster and on as much as a third less supplement and a tenth less corn.

I also hope you're worming your hogs with PTZ, another mighty fine Dr. Hess Product.

Yours truly,
Conrad Hardware, Walton, Ky.

Play Safe, Son!
Don't Fly Your Kite Near a Power Line

KITE FLYING is great fun but danger lurks when kites are flown near power lines. Many a child has lost his life by using wire for a kite string or climbing a pole to get a tangled kite. Don't take any chances. Play safe by following these suggestions:

Rules for Safe Kite Flying

1. Do not use wire or metallic kite string.
2. Do not fly your kite with wet string or in damp weather.
3. Do not use metal kite sticks.
4. Do not climb poles to get tangled kites.
5. Do not poke sticks at tangled kites or try to pull them down by their tails.
6. Fly your kites in open fields away from power lines and busy highways.

If your kite becomes caught in electric wires, call our office. We know how to remove it without endangering anyone or causing a service interruption.

Rev. G. N. Smith was entertained over the week-end at the Jim Beach home. Opal Beach returned home with him.

Several from Concord attended Mrs. Clyde Mitts funeral at Williamstown Sunday afternoon at the Methodist church. The pastor there had charge of the services. She was a member of the Concord church and also of the W. M. S. The family have our sympathy.

Mr. Harry Chapman, daughter and baby of Verona were visiting his parents here Sunday afternoon also Mr. Roy Lawrence and two daughters were callers there in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hughes and daughter of Indiana spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Hughes of this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Chapman and grandson, Danny all were calling at Elmer Chapman's at Walton Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Beehimer of Newport purchased a nice colt from Floyd Chapman last week.

We are glad to hear the Boyers family are well after an attack of flu.

The W. M. S. will meet with Mrs. C. D. Hughes the 2nd Wednesday on the 10th, everyone is invited. Will have both programs, the one in Royal Service and the Home Mission Program. All members are urged to come. Visitors welcome.

What You Buy With

WAR BONDS

That new cooking range, whether it be gas, electric or otherwise, is something to look forward to when the War is won. But you can start saving now to buy it. Put a definite amount, every payday, ten percent of your pay check . . . into War Bonds today.

When your Bonds mature you will have the money ready for that new range. You will have made a good investment, getting back $4 for every $3. And your purchase of War Bonds is helping that boy, husband or sweetheart on the fighting front.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

It's getting about that time of year when the weather often slows down egg production.

Well, just remember Dr. Hess Poultry Pan-a-min stimulates appetite and urges the hen to eat more feed. And that's what it takes in cold weather to help keep up egg production.

To show you what I mean—hens on the Research Farm getting Pan-a-min lay as many as 23 more eggs per bird per year. Now that's a nice egg bonus. See if Pan-a-min won't give that same bonus to you.

Yours truly,
Conrad Hardware, Walton, Ky.

VERONA -:- KENTUCKY

Dear Mr. Farmer:

You haven't time to feed and clean out the barn for a bunch of cows that are not giving every cadgummed drop of milk they can.

This makes me more insistent than I ordinarily would be that you try Dr. Hess Stock Tonic. Here's exactly why I want to try it. Cows getting Stock Tonic on the Research Farm give as much as a fourth pound more milk per pound of feed consumed.

Stock Tonic stimulates appetite and promotes better use of feed. And believe me, that's the reason right there a lot of people ought to be using it right now.

Yours truly,
Conrad Hardware, Walton, Ky.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

I'd like to get every doggone chicken in this neck of the woods on Dr. Hess Poultry Pan-a-min.

I got a good reason—a mighty good reason, aside from the fact that I sell Pan-a-min.

The reason is that Pan-a-min stimulates appetite and helps a hen make better use of her feed.

And here's what that means. Hens on the Research Farm getting Pan-a-min lay as many as 23 more eggs per bird per year. And we can use extra eggs, you bet we can.

Yours truly,
Conrad Hardware, Walton, Ky.

RAYS OF HOPE

ALL night long, light streams from the windows of a railroad station . . . like friendly rays of hope in a darkened world. For this is the night watch on the Southern Railway System.

It's quiet . . . for a moment. But only for a moment.

Soon a headlight will pierce the darkness. Soon another troop train will come thundering by. Or another train of oil and coal cars. Or another fast Southern freight, loaded with guns and tanks and food and tools of war.

Then a proud smile will light the face of the railroad man on the night watch. For he knows that the trains rushing by in increasing numbers are carrying fighting freight and fighting men toward certain Victory . . . toward a Victory to which he and his co-workers on the Southern Railway are making mighty contributions.

And when the war is won, these men and women of the Southern will do another great job. For then the South will enter a new era of growth and opportunity.

Its already mighty industry will grow by leaps and bounds. New products will come from its farms and mines and forests. Its cities and ports will throb with the ever-expanding commerce of a free world.

Thus, in the rays of light streaming from a railroad station at night, we see the promise of a happier tomorrow . . . the certainty of a new and greater Southland.

YOU CAN CONTROL—YOU CAN'T PROHIBIT

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Y'know, Judge, I was thinkin'. It just don't seem fair, some counties having these Local Option elections while our boys are not here to vote for what they want."

"I think you're right, Sam. It's worse than unfair. It's the same kind of thing we fought our Revolutionary War to prevent. 'Legislation without representation.' Yet here they're voting whether or not to have legal control and sale of alcoholic beverages—when just about ten percent of our male population can't protest about it, because they're away in the Service."

"Judge, I'm against that sort of thing, and against the kind of people who try to put that sort of thing over on us. To me it seems just plain un-American to dictate to people—and most specially to do it behind people's backs, when they can't say even a word against it."

VOTE NO VOTE NO

EVILS OF LIQUOR

It is a conceded fact that liquor is the source of much evil and, if voting the Nation, the State or smaller territory dry would abolish liquor from such area and elimate the evils, it would be a blessing. But, as conclusively proven by National prohibition, it does not do this, it merely diverts the industry from legalized, controlled channels to the bootlegger, the "blind tigers" and disreputable dives, any of which is really dangerous and the source of even greater evils. During National prohibition, liquor in the hands of the racketiers, the gangsters and the bootleggers produced the greatest evils in history and brought about a wave of crime, murder, misery and court corruption, the like of which was never known before.

PROHIBITION HISTORY

The Wickersham Committe appointed by President Hoover in 1930 to investigate prohibition, stated in their report based on actual investigation that, "More people were killed in attempted enforcement of prohibition from 1920 to 1930 than were killed in the Spanish American and Revolutionary wars", "Gangsters, Criminals, Hoodlums and Racketiers have taken control of our courts and ruled by Bribery, Corruption, threats of Violence and Murder".

Would we want to return to the "good old" prohibition days?

ENFORCEMENT IMPOSSIBLE

It is genrally known, that with millions spent by the Government to enforce it, National prohibition was an utter failure. Now, if with a nation-wide area legally dry the law could not be enforced, how would it be possible to eliminate the sale in so small a section as our county which is entirely surrounded by wet territory. In addition to the accommodating bootlegger, all one would have to do would be to step over the line and get all he wanted.

A STAB IN THE BACK OF OUR SOLDIER BOYS

For their fiscal year ending June 30, 1942, the Federal Government received in revenue from the liquor industry the huge sum of $1,048,516,705,00. Think of it, over a billion dollars. Was there ever a time our Country needed the money more? Too, regardless of their views on the matter, it certainly is a queer kind of gratitude for our boys in the service, many of whom are fighting and some dying to preserve our liberty, in having the election held at a time when they are deprived of having a voice in the contest. As a whole, would it not be more patriotic at this time and more considerate of our soldier boys to get behind a major drive to sell war bonds to help them win the war?

TAXES OR MORE TAXES

The ultimate goal of the Drys is to vote the State dry. In this event, you would have nothing to gain,liquors would continue to be sold as it was during National prohibition and as it is now in other supposedly dry counties of the State but, you'd have plenty to lose. For their fiscal year ending June 30, 1942 the State received in revenue from the industry the sum of $9,157,255,00. The present tax of 5 cents on each $100.00 worth of real estate produces only about $500,000.00. It would require an increase of the real estate tax from 5 cents to 90 cents on each $100.00 worth of real estate to produce the amount of revenue paid by alcoholic beverages in event the State should vote dry. Would you be willing to dig down deep in your pockets to pay your part of additional taxes that would have to be levied to make up the huge amount of over nine million dollars EACH year? Why "kill the goose that lays the golden egg"?

WHY TRY IT IN BOONE

Some time ago two rather large cities in central Kentucky voted dry. During the three years that followed the bootleggers handled the liquor business so openly and so profitably and all other business in the areas became so demoralized that in a second local option election, both cities voted wet by substantial majorities and many of the original Drys helped do it.

HEAR WHAT THE STATE HAS TO SAY

Quoting from report of the State Revenue Department published last September 14th. "The Federal Government this year issued more than 300 retail alcoholic beverage licenses in 50 dry counties of the State". Think of it, an average of over six to the county, to say nothing about the individual bootleggers. Does that look like voting a county dry eliminates the sale of liquors within its bounderies? "Blind Tigers" do not take chances with the Government but evidently, do not fear local enforcement.

SOME REAL HIGHLIGHTS

The dry leaders tell you, "Bootleggers are over-running the State." In event this is true, how would voting any section of it dry, put them out of business. It did not do it during National prohibition. They do not tell you this. It did not do it in the two central Kentucky cities during their three years of local option, wherein the only business that really prospered was the bootlegging business. They do not tell you this. It did not do it in the 50 supposedly dry counties of the State wherein over 300 retail alcoholic beverage licenses were issued by the Federal Government. They do not tell you this. Locally there are no bootleggers in Boone county but, during National prohibition there were dozens of them and barrels of moonshine were sold in the area. They do not tell you this. In other words, evidently bootlegging is all right as long as it is in dry territory.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

It is a sad thing that in some of our larger cities young people indulge in liquor. But, bear in mind, THIS PRACTICE WAS A PRODUCT OF PROHIBITION. Before that period, such a thing, as well as women drinking in public was unknown. Prohibition plainly proved that the consumption of liquor cannot be elimated by legislation. The American people respond to persuasion and reasoning, but cannot be driven. Tell a child, "You cannot have a certain thing", that is the very thing the child is determined to have. Human nature is the same at all ages. Continued kindly appeals for temperance instead of, "You cannot have it," will work wonders toward reducing the sale and consumption of liquor.

BOONE COUNTY AT THE TOP

There is no better county in the State than the county of Boone. A State revenue agent made the remark a short time ago, "If all counties of the State were as clean as Boone, I would be out of a job." It has no liquor joints, no road houses and no slot machine hide-outs, a commendable condition for which we should be thankful. It has been well governed and its financial condition is another of many things to be proud of. Our jails throughout the county practically at all times have been empty tho, during prohibition they had many "guests". Compare Boone, both morally and as to its financial condition with any other county, either wet or dry, in the State, you will find none that surpass it.

SOME PROVEN FACTS

If voting dry would drive liquor out of the county entirely, a large majority would be for it. But remember, the question to be decided is positively whether it will be handled legally and controlled or by the bootlegger as it was during prohibition, who would sell boys of any age as well as grown-ups as long as they had the price.

WHETHER YOU ARE FOR OR AGAINST THE PROPOSAL, BE SURE TO VOTE ON ELECTION DAY.

"Town and Farm In Wartime"

A Weekly News Digest From the Rural Press Section of the OWI News Section.

Any person who did not register for War Ration Book One before January 15, 1943, may get it from his local War Price and Ration Board after February 22, provided the necessary application has been examined and approved.

Ration Calendar

Gasoline—A-book coupon No. 4 expires March 21.

Sugar—Coupon No. 11 (3 lbs.) expires March 15.

Coffee—Stamp No. 25 (1 lb.) expires March 21.

Tires—Class A. First inspection deadline March 31.

Fuel Oil—Period 4 coupons expire April 6 in Zones C. and D; April 12 in Zone B; April 17 in Zone A.

Get Your Coal Supply

Because certain kinds of coal are now difficult to obtain, those planning to convert to coal should make arrangements to secure their supply before starting actual conversion. Coal consumers are urged to place orders for their entire next winter's supply immediately, to accept the coal as it can be delivered, and to place it in protective storage during summer months when production and transportation are more readily available.

Increase Canned Vegetables For Civilians

Civilian supplies of canned vegetables from next summer's estimated pack will be increased by approximately 10 million cases under new food orders, which provide changes in the amount of certain processed foods that must be reserved from Government requirments from the 1943 pack. Most of the increase will be in canned tomatoes and snap beans with no significant change in fruits and juices.

Gas To Drive To Work

Car owners who drive to work and do not get enough mileage from their B ration book may now get additional allowances—if they show they cannot get to their jobs any other way.

Applications must be made to local rationing boards and must fulfill the following conditions in addition to needing more gas—1. That driving is between home and a fixed place of work, in connection with their principal occupation; 2. That either a ride-sharing arrangement has been made or that the vehicle carries a full load, and 3. That alternative transportation is inadequate.

Sugar Stamp 12 Worth 5 Lbs.

Sugar ration stamp Number 12, which becomes valid March 16, is worth five pounds, but it must last through the end of May, a period of eleven weeks. Stamp 11 good for three pounds, is valid from February 1 to March 15.

Dehydrated Vegetables Increase

A sharp increase in dehydrated vegetable production in the U.S. may be expected by July 1, this year, according to the plants, with an estimated capacity of 200 million pounds annually, have been approved for addition to the domestic vegetables drying industry.

Wheat Quotas Suspended

Wheat marketing quotas have been suspended by Agriculture Secretary Wickard in a move to insure adequate food and feed supplies. This action lifts marketing quotas and releases at once for food or market any wheat which has been stored. Wheat farmers who meet 90 per cent of their farm war crop goals in 1943 will be eligible for AAA wheat payments and wheat loans even though they exceed their wheat allotments. About 650,000 victory farm volunteers will be recruited from non-farm youth for farm work during the spring and summer months. Troop units from nearby military installations will be used for emergency labor to harvest the long staple cotton crop in the area near Phoenix, Arizona.

More Rubber For Recapping

Owners of tires smaller than 7.50 x 20 will soon be able to get their casings recapped with reclaimed rubber "camelback" without applying to their rationing boards for certificates. This does not relax the need for continued observance of rubber conservation measures. The change was made to reduce the demand for replacement tires by encouraging recapping, which takes less than half as much reclaimed rubber as a new war tire.

Outerwear Garments Prices

Consumers will find women's and children's dresses, suits, coats, skirts and blouses for sale at approximately the same price levels of last spring and summer for substantially the same quality of apparel, OPA has announced.

This is assured through issuance of the OPA pricing rules that retailers and wholesalers of these outerwear garments will use. Ceiling prices for these garments must be plainly marked on the apparel or posted in that part of the retail store where the commodity is offered for sale.

V-Mail Safest

More than fifty thousand individual V-mail letters from American soldiers in England to relatives and friends in the U. S. were destroyed when a Canada-bound RAF plan crashed in Newfoundland. The original letters were reproduced at the Army postal service's V-mail station in England and despatched by a later plane for the U. S. This incident shows the value of V-mail over ordinary letters.

Farmers Get Gas For Six Months

Farmers may obtain gasoline for their tractors, engines, and other non-highway equipment for a period of six months instead of three months under a change in rationing regulations announced by the OPA.

The change is being made because of the variability of farming operations which frequently make it difficult for farmers to estimate their requirements for only a three-month period. It will also save the farmers time.

Size Of Armed Forces

President Roosevelt said the goal of 7,500,000 men in the U. S. army by the end of 1943 was decided on last August, has never been changed, and will not be changed. The goal for 1944, he said, will probably be decided this Fall. This year's army goal also calls for 700,000 officers, which would make a total of 8,200,000 men in the army. Adding the goals set for the other armed services, the grand total of all our armed forces by the end of 1943 would be almost 11,000,000.

Outlaw "Combination Sales"

Sale of used wheel tractors, combines, corn pickers, corn binders, or power-operated hay balers in combination with other used farm equipment or commodities have been prohibited by the OPA. Numerous complaints have been received that the combination sales device is being employed to force farmers to pay exorbitant prices for such items. The scheme used is to sell an uncontrolled machine of little value jointly with a controller item at a price which greatly exceeds the ceiling for the machine which is under price control.

Soybean Seed Available

Processors of soybeans and the Commodity Credit Corporation are co-operating to make additional supplies of soybean seed available for planting the 1943 crop. Supplemental supplies will be available to farmers from Government stock at not more than $2.50 per bushel. These stocks are stored in bins and country warehouses in areas where there was no frost damage last fall.

Changes In Tire Quotas

The quota of Grade 1 passenger car tires for March has been practically double. The increase will take care of accumulated applications, but will not be continued in succeeding months. The quota of truck tires for March was reduced as compared with Februarg but the truck tire recapping quota was increased.

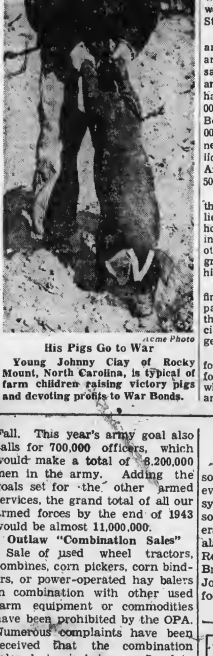
Schools Open Drive To Buy 10,000 Jeeps

THE little jeep which is serving so nobly from Guadalcanal to Africa has become the symbol of the gigantic efforts of millions of American school children in their War Savings program.

Thousands of public, private and parochial schools soon will be displaying a certificate of honor from Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., signifying that they have paid for at least one jeep by buying $900 in War Stamps and Bonds.

Countless others will be flying the Schools At War banner awarded to schools with 90 percent pupil participation in War Savings.

Ten thousand jeeps and a hundred bombers! This is the new goal of America's schools as 30,000,000 children continue their Schools At War program under the auspices of the Treasury Department and the U. S. Office of Education.



Results so far in the program reported by Dr. Homer W. Anderson, Associate Field Director in charge of the education section of the War Savings Staff, are:

More than 7,000,000 elementary and high school students from 30,000 schools have prepared special Schools At War scrapbooks for state and local exhibits.

War Stamp and War Bond purchases may reach a grand total of $300,000,000 for the school year.

His Pigs Go to War

Young Johnny Clay of Rocky Mount, North Carolina, is typical of farm children raising victory pigs and devoting profits to War Bonds.

Farm Youth of U. S. Looks to Tomorrow

TOMORROW'S farmers and farm homemakers are second to no school group in their enthusiasm for investing in War Bonds and Stamps to make sure their future is secure. Through the Schools At War program they are investing what they save and earn in War Stamps and Bonds.

First evidence of this is the amount the 4-H Club boys and girls and the FFA boys invested in war savings in 1942 from "Victory Pig" and other projects. A million and a half 4-H Club members put $6,000,000 of their own savings in War Bonds and Stamps and sold $2,500,000 worth of War Savings to their neighbors. Nearly a quarter million members of Future Farmers of America invested more than $1,500,000.

Spurred by the realization that the financial welfare of farm families the next 20 years depends on how wisely they use today's higher incomes from increased food and other wartime production, both groups have set their goals still higher for 1943.

These farm youths are building financial reserves, and urging their parents to do the same, for after-the-war necessities, to meet financial emergencies and to help them get started in college.

They're building reserves today for tomorrow's farm buildings and for the other things they will need when they're tomorrow's farmers and homemakers.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

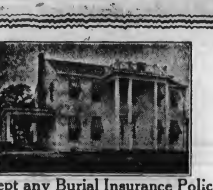
Down in the Solomons and on the African coasts the Crocodile Boat or tank lighter played a most important role in landing our invasion armies. These self-propelled, light . . . fast boats haul tanks, artillery and other equipment from the big ship off-shore to the beach heads.



We need more and more of them, for they are essential to the successful operation of the war. They are made in several sizes from small fifty-footers, costing about $2,400 to the big 500-tonners costing around $37,000. Your purchase of War Bonds every payday will help pay for them. *U. S. PROMINENT VERONA UNDERTAKER DIES SUDDENLY FRIDAY EVENING

Our community was shocked last Friday evening when word was received of the sudden passing of our friend and neighbor, J. L. Hamilton.

Mr. Hamilton's health had been failing for some time, but until the afternoon of his death was able to carry on his business.

He began work as a funeral director in 1912 and has been rated one of the best in Northern Kentucky. By his sympathetic understanding and consideration, he has brought comfort to numberless hearts and homes. Verily his life was one of humble service such as the master meant when he said, "He that would be first among you let him be the servant of all". He was a member of the New Bethel Babtist Church of the Masonic Lodge, and of the Northern Kentucky Funeral Directors Association.

As a living testimony of his success in the carrying out of his life work, both his sons have chosen to follow in their fathers footsteps in selecting their profession. Fred is affiliated with his father in the firm at Verona and also with the Donnelly Funeral Service at Covington, while Bob is associated with Hinton-Turner Funeral Directors at Paris, Kentucky.

Mr. Hamilton was also proprietor of the N. B. Hamilton & Son general store at this place. Thru the sucessful operation of this business he has, as a merchant, faithfully served his community for many years. It was here that many people learned to know and love him and to seek his help and advice in time of need or trouble. No one was ever turned away.

In the stress of all his activities Mr. Hamilton was a real family man. The love and devotion he held in his heart for his wife and sons and his young daughter-in-law, could not be excelled by anyone. Their lovely home and the lives lived in it were ideal.

Mr. Hamilton was the last one of the four Hamilton brothers who grew up in our midst and, with the exception of Dr. Harry Hamilton, lived their entire lives here.

Funeral services were held at the Hamilton Funeral home Monday afternoon with his pastor, Shirley Spahr and Rev. A. K. Johnson officiating. The days the body was lying in state were marked by a great crowds of friends and relatives from far and near who came topay their last respects to one who had in one way or another touched their lives. The floral offerings were many and beautiful.

Funeral Directors. Taliaferro of Erlanger, and Carlton & Son of Warsaw, close friends of Mr. Hamilton's, assisted with the funeral arrangements.

To his sorrowing wife Mrs. Rose Hamilton, and to the two sons we express our hope that even so great a sacrifice may be made into good by Him who doeth all things well.

4-H CLUBS ARE READY

Most all the organization work in ten community 4-H Clubs of Boone County has been completed acording to O. D. Perkinson, Assistant County Agent. The boys and girls are enthusiastic about their 1943 Victory food and fiber production work and are waiting for old man winter to release his grip on the soil so they may begin their projects.

The latest enlistment reports indicates that garden, poultry and hogs are the most popular projects among members. There is also a large enrollment in the corn, tobacco and labor service projects.

Mr. E. E. Fish,Assistant State 4-H Club Leader, will be in the county on Wednesday of this week and will meet with several of the community clubs to assist members and leaders in their 1943 programs.

A. C. Johnson Sale Attended by Large Crowd Friday.

A very large crowd attended the Public Sale of A. C. Johnson held Friday at his farm on Beaver Grade by R. M. Lucas and Co., Realtors and Auctioneers of 115 West Third St., Cincinnati.

Everything was sold at a good price.

Mr. and Mrs. George Fisher of Verona Road bought the farm and expect to move there in the near future. Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Johnson purchased the property of Mr. Berry Johnson, on North Main St., known as the Hance Home. They will move to their new home as soon as some changes can be made.

Crittenden Boy Graduates from Intensive Airplane Mechanic Course.

Army Air Base, Lincoln, Neb. Pvt. Clifton E. Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Robinson of Crittenden, Ky., has graduated from an intensive course in airplane mechanics and now is prepared to blast the Axis. Army Air Base, near Lincoln, Nebraska, is one of the many schools in the Army Air Forces Technical Training Command which trains the technicians who maintain our fighter planes in perfect combat condition. He now is a full fledged airplane mechanic eligible for promotion.

Before entering the school, he was trained at one of the basic training centers of the Air Forces Technical Training Command and learned to fight the Axis with other things besides the tools of his trade. Men trained by the Command are versed in the art of protection and offense as well as repair.

NOTICE—

World Day of Prayer will be held Friday at 2:30 P. M. at the Methodist church in the Prayer Room, also will have our W. C. L. U. March meeting at the same time. All members come and bring some friend. We sure need to keep in touch with our Heavenly Father and Prayer is our only method.

Give to Save Lives

Will you give a soldier a better chance to live? The American Red Cross is asking for $5100.00 from the citizens of Boone County during the month of March.

It needs this money for its services to the men in the armed forces and to their families. It needs this money for health—for nursing and nutrition services at home. It needs it for training men and women in first aid and life saving in all kinds of disaster relief work. It needs every penny it can obtain to send food and clothing to American prisoners of war.

Give your share to help the American Red Cross—What is your share? Your answer to this question—Will you give a soldier a better chance to live? Must be your answer to the War Fund Appeal, so double your contribution and help the boys.

Walton-Verona Wins District Tournament

Due to the redistricting of the State this year, the District Tournment consisted of only one game in which Walto-Verona met its revial, Simon-Kenton. Of the two garmes played in the season the Bearcats were victor over the Pioneers by a close margain. In the tournment the Pioneers got off to a good start by dropping one through the basket for the first two points, but it was not long before the Bearcats began to click and at the half were leading by a score of eight points. As the game continued it was two points first for one team and then the other with the final score still an eight point lead for the Bearcats, 51-43.

DeMoisey was high point man for the Bearcats with 24 points and Sterling for the Pioneers with 21 points.

The Regional Tournment will be played at Newport, Ky. The Bearcats drew Holmes High, Covington, Ky. They will play Thursday night at 7:30. Let's all go down and root for the Bearcats.

Outstanding Couple Married Saturday By Rev. DeMoisey.

A wedding of interest to the community took place Saturday afternoon at the home of Rev. R. F. DeMoisey, when J. Waite Cross of College Hill, Cin., and Miss Minnie Luck of Covington were united in marriage. The happy couple were accompanied byMr. Cross'son, Robert and wife of College Hill, and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Muehlenkamp of Southgate.

Mr. Cross was born and raised in Walton and has many friends and relatives in this community.

Mrs. Cross, an employee of the Kentucky Times-Star in the Advertising department for a number of years has a wide circle of friends.

Have You Pruned Your Grape Vines?

Pruning should be done before the sap begins to flow. Late pruning will result in bleeding canes and this tends to weaken the vines.

Ky. Extension Circular No. 209 has the following to say on prunig:

"The best time for pruning grape vines is in the early spring. Winter killing is common, which makes it desrable to pdune after severe cold weather is past. Pruning should not be done while the wood is frozen, because frozen canes are brittle and much damage may be done if handled in that condition. Bleeding occurs if late spring pruning is done. Grape growers prefer to prune before bleeding is excessive."

The strongest canes should be left on the vine and these pruned back to two or three buds.

Get a copy of the Extension Circular, Grapes for the Home from your Extension Agent or write the Extension Service, College of Agriculture, Lexington, Ky.

Spray Is Important

With the limited supply of canned fruits and fruit juices this fall and winter it is wise to look ahead and make plans to care for your grapes by using the recommended sprays. This is explained in the circular No. 209. Care for your grape vines and you will help your food supply and contribute to the War Food Program. Every can of fruit juice helps in the Food Production Program.

The many friends of Mr. A. M. Edwards regret to learn he is very ill. He suffered a heart attack Saturday. On advice given by his physician, Dr. Frank Dougherty he was taken to Booth's Hospital, Covington Monday about 7:30 P. M. by Fred Hamilton of Verona. He was accompained by Rev. Geo. Caroland.

Mrs. Beatty of Crittenden is careing for Mrs. A. M. Edwards who remains ill at her home.

The vote in the county, as tabulated, follows:

Wet, 1616; dry, 987.

Walton Woman's Literary Club Entertained Wednesday.

On Wednesday, March 4th the Walton Woman's Literary Club was delightfully entertained at the Resturant Home of Mrs. A. P. Stephens. The program of the day was on Poetry and roll-call was answered by giving the name and author of a favorite poem. The President, Mrs. Clayton Jones introduced two guests, Mrs. Carl Eschenbach of Madisonville, Ohio, who was the speaker and her companion, Mrs. Fritz. Mrs. Eschenbach gave numerous and interesting original poems. Some of the poems were entitled "My Easter Parade," "Won't You Try to Make A Soldiers' Dream Come True," "Why, or Thy Will Be Done," "Trails of A War-Bride," "Motherhood," "The Angles Mistake," "Flying Feet at Seventy-Two," Following Mrs. Eschenbach, Mrs. C. J. Alford gave the Thought for the Day which in a sentence was "This earth is not the soul's home."

After the correspondence and business was disposed of Mrs. Stephens served a delicious refreshment plate of ices & cakes, accompained by coffee. Enjoying Mrs. Stephens hospitality were: Mrs. D. H. Vest, Mrs. John L. Vest, Mrs. Clayton Jones, Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Mrs. W. W. Rouse, Mrs. Lotta Powers, Mrs. R. G. Moore, Mrs. C. J. Alford, Mr. Robt Conrad, Mrs. B. W. Franks, Mrs. J. L. VICTORY FUND DRIVE FOR BOONE COUNTY SCHEDULED TO OPEN IN APRIL

About 200 bankers and Victory Fund Chairmen of the eastern half of Kentucky met at Lexington last Sunday in the interest of the approaching Victory Fund drive scheduled to open in April to raise what is anticipated to be thirteen Billion Dollars to finance the war. This is four billion dollars more than the December drive, which means that, in all probability, Boone County's quota will be larger than the December quota. The details, quotas and class of bonds to be offered has not as yet been fully decided but it is presumed that the issues will be about the same as offered in December, according to A. B. Renaker, County Victory Fund Chairman, who attended this meeting. Mrs. James Bines, a Red Cross Nurse, gave a most heartrending eye witness account of the fall of Singapore. She related the horrors of war and the death and destruction of the people in that section, and made a stirring appeal to the people of this country to get behind these bond drives with which to furnish the implements of war to defeat our enemies at the earliest possible moment. She stated that she saw ambulances moving with human blood streaming from these vehicles carrying not only wounded soldiers, but women and children as well, and with hundreds of human beings lying on the ground without arms or legs and tanks driving over them mashing them into a jelly and that the Red Cross nurses worked day and night with their uniforms soaked in human blood and within a few minutes after changing their bloody uniforms they would become soaked agam. Mrs. Bines asked that every one take her message home with them and to tell their people that such distress and suffering COULD HAPPEN HERE.

Plans are being formulated in Boone County for speaking in every precinct, along with instrumental and vocal musical entertainment preceding an address by a well known speaker.

Watch your county papers for further details of this campaign. Boone County did not reach its quota in December. We must not fail this time. Precinct Chairman who served in December will continue to serve in this the Second Victory Fund campaign. The County Chairman is requesting the Precinct Chairman to begin giving thought to workers and plans for their precincts. A meeting of all precinct Chairmen will be called as soon as full details of the drive are announced.

Verona Homemaker's

The Verona Homemaker's met March 5th at the home of Mrs. H. W. Hamilton who was entertaining for Mrs. Fred Hamilton. After a delicious lunch attractively served sixteen members and guests joined in saluting the flag and singing one verse of "America." Citizenship and Exterior Beautification Chairmen made reports. Mrs. W. B. McCormick conducted some interesting Quiz programs.

The lesson on "Dress for Victory" was given by Mrs. W. T. Renaker who emphasized that an attractive appearance helps to maintain moral; that to buy carefully and avoid hoarding is patriotic. Mrs. Lamn displayed remarkable talent in the use of a man's worn suit which she had made into an attractive suit for a little boy. Two new members were welcomed into the club.

Tractor Machinery Saves Much Labor

How tractors help farmers to get their work done is revealed in a study which the farm economics department of the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics made in the Lower Ohio Valley area of the state.

On a farm of 115 acres of tillable land, tractor-powered machinery, used in place of horse machinery, saves 60 days of labor in a year On a 120-acre farm, tractor-drawn machinery saves 10 days of labor in May and June, and 15 days in Sept. and Oct. Where combines were used, still greater savings were made.

Tractors helped out most in corn growing, being used in breaking the ground, in cultivating, and to pull a corn-picker. Disking is another job where tractors are highly efficient, it was found.

Combines for harvesting grain, grass and legume seed crops were found to be great labor-savers. In harvesting 12 acres of barley, a combine saved four days over the use of a binder and threshing machine.

Another machine helpful in saving labor, especially in growing alfalfa, is the pick-up hay baler. It is particularly valuable for handling the first crop of alfalfa, which comes in the rush season.

Since few new machines are for sale, and since many of the machines already on Kentucky farms are not used to capacity, three possibilities exist for greater use of these machines and the obtaining of greater production from the labor on these farms. First, hire the more important labor-saving machines. Second, purchase an interest in a labor-saving machine already on a farm in your community but not being fully used. Third, and most important, swap labor, teams and horse-drawn machines for the needed labor-saving power machinery.

Senate Group Votes Farm Deferment; Rout of Jap Armada Near New Guinea Shows Rising U. S. Power in Pacific; RAF Europe Drive Forecasts Invasion

Maj. Gen. Lloyd Fredenhall, commander-in-chief of Allied forces in southern Tunisia, is pictured in a map discussion with French officers. Clockwise around the table are: Capt. JAPS PERSISTENT:
In South Pacific

The South Pacific had returned dramatically to the fore when the news was disclosed that the Japanese had marshaled great forces in their island bases north of Australia.

The approach of a powerful Japanese convoy of 14 vessels toward New Guinea under the protection of foggy weather, had lent weight to a previous warning by Gen. Douglas MacArthur that the enemy had been concentrating huge quantities of planes, shipping and men in their far-flung island strongholds ringing Australia on the north.

Allied warplanes were on the alert and in the decisive action that followed, they sank or damaged four of the enemy ships and scattered the rest of the convoy over a wide area. Among the Jap casualties were one 10,000 ton transport left sinking, another transport split asunder, two other vessels damaged and escorting warships hit.

This latest Jap offensive bid was apparently aimed to reinforce enemy forces in the Lae area of New Guinea.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO PLAN:
Would Withhold 20%

The new pay-as-you-go tax program was not the Ruml plan nor the proposal advanced by the treasury department. Somewhere between both, the new congressional plan would withhold 20 per cent of taxable income from the pay envelopes of the nation's 31,000,000 wage and salary earners beginning July 1.

Sponsored by Chairman Cooper of the house ways and means committee's subcommittee on pay-as-you-go taxation, the plan would provide for weekly, semi-monthly or monthly deductions from income which would be accumulated and applied to actual taxes computed at the year's end.

The proposed withholding levy would not change any person's tax obligations for 1942, 1943 or any year. It merely sets up a system for deductions from wages and salaries for accumulation against actual taxes to be computed at the end of the year. Taxpayers who paid their first installments March 15 would be expected to pay their second installment as usual June 15. Then in July, the withholding provision would be undertaken.

MANPOWER:
Services Need 12,000,000

Upwards of 12,000,000 Americans may have to don uniforms before the war is over in order to maintain an armed force of 11,000,000, congress was told by Col. Lewis Sanders, chief of the re-employment division of the selective service.

The 1,000,000 loss in manpower, he said, could be charged up to normal attrition, exclusive of battle casualties. In explaining his paradoxical set-up, Colonel Sanders said:

"You would put into one picture an armed force of 11,000,000 and then 1,000,000 men to replace the attrition of that armed force. In other words, it looks as if you have 12,000,000 men in service, but you don't. You always have 11,000,000."

FARM WORKERS:
Senators Vote Deferment

Forecasting deferment of farm workers from military service for the remainder of this year, the senate military affairs committee had voted approval of a measure exempting such workers from the draft.

Viewed as a stop-gap to relieve the current farm labor and food shortage, the committee's action took the form of a proposed amendment to the Selective Service act.

The amendment provides that "every registrant engaged in an agricultural occupation . . . shall be deferred from training and service" under the Selective Service act, and that "no such registrant shall leave such occupation" without special permission from his local board.

INVASION PRELUDE:
RAF Softens Naziland

As Allied bombers had continued their unprecedented aerial attack against western Europe and had wrought destruction in Berlin outdistancing even the havoc of 1940 Nazi assaults on London, this offensive appeared to be taking a major place in the overall Allied war plan.

Night after night the bombers had droned in an ever-rising crescendo over Berlin. In a single attack more than 900 tons of bombs—twice the weight of anything ever dropped by the Nazis on London—plummeted down on Hitler's capital. Returning fliers reported mountainous conflagrations in Berlin.

At the peak of the bombing attacks, Capt. Harold Balfour, British undersecretary of state for air, said the Anglo-American air offensive was "preparing the day for our united forces to invade Europe."

"I look forward to the time when there will be no hour of the day or night when the Axis can rest from the swoop of Allied aircraft," he said. "In the long view, the present raids are but the opening bars which will rise to the crescendo of a march on Europe."

RUSSIAN FRONT:
'Follow the Weather'

Although the thaws of spring had slowed down their offensive in the south, the doughty Russians were still on the march in the northwest. Into the headlines once more came Marshal Timoshenko, ace Russian commander, for his armies on the move between Moscow and Leningrad had recaptured 302 towns and settlements, freed 1,000 square miles of territory and had menaced German positions by the seizure of key points near Staraya Russa. The Reds had killed or captured 11,000 Nazis.

The timing of this newest offensive—the eighth launched by the Russians since last November—indicated the persistent character of the Russian strategy. Summed up it meant this: Shift the center of operations to follow the weather. If it thaws in the south, then attack in the north. But do not permit the Nazis a breathing-spell anywhere.

In the Donets basin the Nazi forces had retained the initiative in their counteroffensive. Moscow had admitted some local German successes, but had not confirmed a Nazi claim of the recapture of Barvenkiva, 82 miles southeast of Kharkov on the Kiev railway.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

WASHINGTON: Lieut. Com. Leroy C. Simpler of Milton, Del., whose navy fighter squadron is known to have shot down 77 planes and is said to have accounted for 16 more in operations in the Solomon Islands, will receive a third decoration, the navy reported. Already the recipient of the Navy Cross and Distinguished Flying Cross, he has been voted a Gold Star.

ZURICH: Following a tour of Italy, a Swiss newspaper correspondent reported that United Nations' bombing planes had caused widespread damage and a majority of residents had evacuated large cities. In Milan, only one-third of the normal 1,200,000 population remains, he said. In Genoa, most of the city's important thoroughfares have been badly wrecked.

TUNISIA:
Axis Tries Diversion

As American pressure was intensified on Marshal Rommel's retreat from the Kasserine Pass region, other Axis forces had headed an attack toward Beja, 40 miles west of Tunis, in an effort to create a diversion and remove Allied attention from Rommel. The British, against whom this drive was launched, had successfully held the Germans off and the Axis attacks lost their momentum.

Meanwhile, the Allied forces' advance in central Tunisia continued with the capture of Sbeitla, 18 miles from the town of Kasserine. In the far south, too, war bulletins said, the British eighth army under Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery had attacked objectives on the Mareth line.

As the Allied air strength in North Africa had continued to grow, bombing raids against enemy positions gained in momentum. Widespread activity included raids on Palermo, Sicily, western terminus of the Axis supply route shuttling men and munitions to North Africa. The air assaults likewise concentrated on the docks at the Axis naval base of Bizerte and on railroad bridges between Sfax and Sousse.

ANTI-JAP OFFENSIVE:
'Prospects Are Bright'

From both sides of the Pacific came indications that more effective American offensive action against the Japs was drawing nearer.

In China Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault declared that the prospects "are definitely brighter" for carrying the war to Japan, adding that the Allies can defeat the Nipponese in a comparatively short time when they turn their whole effort into the Pacific, and "there is an outside chance the job can be finished this year."

Emphasizing the possibility of eliminating Japan this year, the blunt-spoken Cbennault added: "I think there are some men in high position who already realize this."

In Washington, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, commander of the Pacific fleet, said the navy was ready to start a drive toward the industrial heart of Japan.

OIL FOR SPAIN:
No U. S. Deprivation

Diplomacy is the business of Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles and he showed he was well equipped for his job by the manner in which he smoothed over the controversial subject of shipments of American oil products to pro-Axis Spain.

Loud had been the outcry in the oil-scarce eastern states when the news of the shipments to Spain were made public. Quick to mollify the complainers was Mr. Welles who declared that such shipments were in line with the interests of the United States and "have had no effect whatever on the quantity of petroleum available to any consumers in the United States."

RATIONING PICTURE:
Regulations Expanding

As Mrs. Average Housewife got used to buying her canned goods on a point rationing basis, a survey of the rationing picture as a whole revealed the following regulations in force:

Coffee — one pound every six weeks; sugar—five pounds every 11 weeks; shoes—one pair between now and June 17, obtainable with Stamp No. 17 in War Ration Book No. 1; Tires—still closely rationed, but recaps obtainable; gasoline—all pleasure driving banned in 17 eastern states and the District of Columbia. A, B and C coupons worth three gallons weekly in the eastern area, four gallons in the rest of the nation; fuel oil—Period 4 coupons valid until about April 12.

Imminent on the ration schedule were meat and butter. Restrictions on clothing expected by many authorities before summer.

GANDHI:
Success and Failure

Weaker in physical strength but not in spirit, Mohandas K. Gandhi had successfully completed his 21 day protest fast.

While the fast had failed in its mission of forcing the Indian government to release Gandhi from custody, it did however, refocus the world's attention on the Indian struggle for independence and cause the British authorities some moments of anguished embarrassment.

RUSSIAN SOCIALISM WANES

The Russians are doing more than reversing the direction of Nazi military movement. They are also reversing certain important political and social directions.

Americans in Russia now report the reappearance of shoulder insignia on the officers of the Red army—for the first time since the dark days of the Revolution.

In those days, officers who supported the Bolshevik movement tore the epaulets from their uniforms as a mark of democracy. Those who failed to do so were regarded as enemies of the Revolution, and in some extreme cases, mobs attacked them, drove nails through the epaulets into their shoulders.

There is also a change in official awards or decorations, indicating that Bolshevik scorn for heroes of the past is vanishing. Three of the most coveted decorations of the Soviet Union today are the award of "Nevski," who was a 13th century prince, and the awards of "Suvorov" and "Kutuzov," who were Czarist generals at the time of Napoleon.

Also the St. George's cross, which would have been torn from the breast of the wearer a few years ago, has made its reappearance at official functions.

The U. S. public has the impression of modern Russians as dressed in coarse, formless clothing, but reports from the USSR today state that Red army officers dress with such punctilio as to make American officers look shabby by comparison.

LITTLE AID TO CHINA

Just back from Chungking, General "Hap" Arnold, chief of the air forces, gave a glowing report to Secretary of War Stimson regarding Chinese resourcefulness in battling the Japs. He was amazed and full of praise for Chinese ingenuity in repairing planes, landing in cow pastures and conserving fuel.

As far as General Arnold is concerned he would like to send the Chinese a lot more planes—though in the past he has not been too keen about it. (Incidentally, one reason for sending him to China was to win him over to the Chinese cause.)

However, despite Madame Chiang Kai - shek's graceful appearance here, despite Hap Arnold's enthusiasm, despite the President's public statements, China is not going to get anything much in the way of supplies.

Reasons Listed.

Reasons are: (1) the impossibility of opening the Burma road now with the monsoon season only a few weeks off; (2) the absolute necessity of cleaning up Africa and preparing for a drive against Hitler in Europe; (3) Chinese political dissension which requires too many aims for personal armies.

Some war weapons will be flown over the Himalayas, but not much more than in the past.

SECRET RUML PLAN VOTE

The vote of the house ways and means committee on the Ruml plan was secret, but inside fact is it never had a chance of getting more than five votes.

The flood of mail reaching committee members, at first favorable, turned round and showed conclusively that the country was against outright postponement of taxes. Underlying sentiment expressed in the mail was that although high taxes hurt, it was unfair to postpone too much of the war cost to the next generation.

Also the committee became more and more convinced that the Ruml plan was largely cooked up for the benefit of top bracket incomes, and if taxes were forgiven one year, it would mean shifting a much greater burden to lower income groups to make up the deficit.

This, they concluded, was just what Mr. Ruml's war wealthy clients wanted.

CURE FOR TYPHUS

By way of London bas come word that the Germans bave evolved a cure for the dread disease typhus. If so, it is a discovery meaning the lives of thousands of men in the eastern front. In 1914 "General Typhus" was responsible for more lives than machine gun fire, and from time to time it has ravaged the Balkans, Russia and eastern Europe ever since.

The German cure was discovered by a Dr. Van Meerdock and is a combination of atebrin and plasmochin. U. S. Public Health officials have their fingers crossed regarding the cure, but British medical circles seem to be favorably impressed.

Pennsylvania Turnpike Aids 'Flight Strip' Boom

Super-Highway Serves as Ideal Emergency Landing Field for Planes; Postwar Advances to Emphasize Need for Runways.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The great bomber was in trouble. The pilot knew it. One engine was coughing like Camille in the last act. He looked down. Below him lay sleepy Somerset country, Pennsylvania. On the far horizon was a smoky blur he knew was Pittsburgh. He had been following the long, brown ribbon, wide and straight as a string for many hundreds of yards before it gently curved with hardly a grade—the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

The pilot picked a wide green field beside this highway, dropped down, made his landing and his repairs. A quick call to the state police and the road was ready, for it is a defense highway now, a vital part of the arteries of transportation of war supplies. But here was a new use for this wild dream that has become a stern reality.

Traffic was stopped, the great bomber taxied out of the field and onto the highway. The pavement made a perfect runway. The straight-way was of sufficient length, the cuts were low and the wing-spread passed over all appurtenances. The good ship rose and was on its way.

This was no flight of the imagination. It was a real flight which took place and was described a little over a year ago by Representative Jennings Randolph of West Virginia, one of Washington's air-minded congressmen.

And so a super-highway becomes an adjunct of what is to be America's super airways. More than 35 planes, Mr. Randolph tells me, have taken advantage of this emergency landing highway.

New Chapter Opens

And so a new chapter opens in American roadbuilding. A new reason for the development of the countryside that is to come after the war—must come if we are to meet the demands of tomorrow's transportation, of tomorrow's demand for public works to take up the slack after the war until industry can absorb the returned soldier and the jobless war plant worker.

In spite of the many pressing war needs, congress is more awake today to the needs of the air and the collary developments on the ground than it ever has been before.

Today, a Pennsylvanian, transported to Washington, cons the press and listens to the radio each day (he is retired from an active business life in which he has amassed a modest fortune) for word of some new benefit that child of his, the Pennsylvania Turnpike, has given to the country. He is Walter Jones. The Turnpike was a peacetime venture. He obtained funds from the $29,250,000 federal grant and the Reconstruction Finance corporation purchased bonds amounting to $40,800,000. The first issue was oversubscribed by the public by 60 per cent. The Turnpike is a toll road and the first year of operation, the revenue was nearly three million dollars.

No wonder. It was an engineer's dream come true—and a motorist's, too. As near a curveless, gradeless, intersectionless, straightaway that one could wish. When war came with the overtaxed railways, it was a Godsend for it opened a veritable Volga of trucking from Pittsburgh, its western terminal, to Harrisburg.

Dual Purpose

"I feel confident," says Representative Randolph, "twenty years will liquidate the RFC loan."

So much for that highway which may well be the father of many.

It has served another purpose. The emergency plane landing merely symbolizes what can be done by the highway for the plane.

The answer is the "flight strip" for which congress appropriated ten million dollars as experimentation.

What is a "flight strip"? Officially defined, it is "an area of land with clear approaches located to an adjacent highway for use as an auxiliary landing area for aircraft."

The war advantage of this new institution is obvious.

We know what to expect in the increased number of planes after the war. We know the limitation in matter of space of the airports. We can guess what the men who have talked "flight strips" for years know, what the development of these runways will mean.

As Fred Schlepfe, special engineering consultant to the administrator of the Federal Works agency, says: "The congress, the state highway departments, and the contractors are pulling together toward the end that the projects will be built in the shortest possible time."

About Poached Eggs— And the Awe of a Kitchen

Only recently, when my wife was away for some time, did I learn to poach an egg, and in so doing, at last lost my awe of the kitchen. It was my early training that gave me that awe. Neither my grandmother nor my mother would permit "men in the kitchen" unless they had specific masculine business there.

"No, you sit down in the corner and read the paper to me. I can dry the dishes quicker without you helping. And there won't be any streaks on the cups."

Of course, there were times when a man's presence was permitted. Naturally, when he was allowed to eat there or when the kindling had to be brought in or the coal hod filled. But even then, only when Milans, the young Scandinavian giantess who was the hired girl, was otherwise engaged.

When I was quite small, I was allowed to play in the kitchen when traffic was light. But that was a special privilege. The bare scrubbed floor was excellent for tops. And, of course, was that much nearer the cookies, and if I was present during the early stages of cake-baking, there were the odd pieces of sweet dough that I loved, and sometimes, a chance to "lick the pan" which was not as unsanitary a practice as it sounds. It really meant a chance to scrape out the dish after the frosting had been mixed.

But there were bitter memories of cake-baking time, too, the stimulant for which added to my respect for the kitchen. Once, coming back from school, I leapt into the room and started to stamp the crisp snow from my rubbers. There was (ob culpa mea!) a cake in the oven. It fell and soon my pride followed for I was placed in a most embarrassing position—a horizontal position I might add.

Other Reasons

There were many reasons why my love of the kitchen was mingled with a respect that has not quite gone even though the graceful curves of the range whose covers could glow like a summer sun and whose isinglass eyes beamed so cheerfully, has long since gone. The kitchen table with its white oilcloth, with only a few scars at one end—another why men weren't allowed in these sacred precincts—"Now who has been cutting bread without the breadboard again?"

I am not, of course, describing the spacious room of the farmhouse when I talk about my kitchen memories for I lived "in town" although the orchard began just beyond the back fence and fields, an easy walk beyond the place where the sidewalk became two parallel planks with a space between (perilous to maneuver on a bicycle) and then ended in a pathway.

No, mine was not the spacious kitchen where half a dozen could eat at once. But it took care of the family with a little crowding on Sunday nights around the remnants of last night's baked beans and the other delicious leftovers.

Souvenir Calendar

We had room for the little rag rug under the rocker by the window and the Journal's bright "souvenir" calendar adorned the wall—that "annual gift" of the newsboy is about the only thing left in today's white kitchen where you can't tell the sink from the gas stove or the cabinet or the ice box. That and the dotted swiss curtains in my kitchen.

But you may break, you may shatter my dream if you will, when you open one shiny door, the scent of the spices cling about it still. I have lost my awe of the kitchen but loving memories linger and latterly it has, in a measure, increased my self-respect. At long last, no one to stop me, I have learned to poach an egg.

Not Meat Loaf . . . But Pea-Potato Loaf!
(See Recipes Below)

Menu Magic

New life for your meals—without meat. That's a problem which concerns us more day after day. A balanced diet dictates we must have a serving or more of meat or fish or beans or peas—one of those will fill our protein need—and give us energy, build and repair our tissues.

To homemakers who for years have used generous quantities of meat—this use of other protein food may be a new, but a delightful lesson in cookery.

Vegetable dinners please—and make attractive platters. Consider the excellent possibilities of strips of green beans, carrots, clusters of white cauliflower and diced beets in orange sauce—topped off in the center with a poached egg on toast.

Or, here is a loaf made of iron-supplying potatoes and protein-supplying peas fashioned in a loaf gaily garnished with egg dices amid broiled bacon:

Pea and Potato Loaf.
(Serves 6)

2 tablespoons vitaminized margarine
½ cup dry bread crumbs
1 cup fresh or canned peas, mashed
1 cup cooked potatoes, mashed
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup thick white sauce
2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
Broiled bacon, if desired

Brown crumbs in vitaminized margarine and sprinkle ½ of them into a well greased loaf pan (8½ by 4½ by 2¾ inches) to form a lining. Mix together peas, potatoes, remaining crumbs and seasonings. Add white sauce (2 tablespoons vitaminized margarine, 2 tablespoons flour and ½ cup milk), and mix well. Alternate layers of peas and potato mixture and sliced eggs until all is used. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 25 minutes, or until set. Serve with Tomato Sauce made by the addition of 2 tablespoons of vitaminized margarine and a bay leaf to a can of undiluted tomato soup and cooked together several minutes. Garnish with eggs or broiled bacon, if desired.

Your family will exclaim pretty-pretty when you serve this au gratin dish—ringed attractively with carrot slices. The cheese-white sauce combination can make it a main dish:

Cabbage and Celery Au Gratin.
(Serves 6)

5 cups raw cabbage, shredded
2 tablespoons butter or other shortening
1 cup diced celery
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
1 cup thin cream or top milk
1 cup cabbage cooking water
1 cup grated cheese
½ cup sliced carrots

Pear Salad
Baked Honey Custard
*Recipe Given

Cook cabbage in small amount of boiling salted water for eight minutes. Drain and reserve 1 cup liquid. Melt butter in saucepan. Add diced celery and cook about 3 minutes. Remove from heat and blend in flour. Combine cabbage water and cream or top milk. Scald and add gradually to the mixture. Stir constantly and continue to cook until mixture is smooth and thickened. Add ½ cup of the grated cheese and cook until melted. Remove from heat. Place alternate layers of cabbage and sauce in a greased casserole. Top with carrots and sauce. Sprinkle with remaining grated cheese and dot with pimiento. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) for 25 minutes.

Pork and Parsnip Luncheon Dish.
(Serves 8)

1 pound fresh pork, diced
1 medium onion, minced
2 cups boiling water
3 cups diced cooked parsnips
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon salt
1½ tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons minced parsley

Brown the pork cubes in their own fat in a hot skillet. When well browned, add the minced onion and simmer for 3 minutes. Add the water and cook gently until the meat is almost tender, then add the salt, pepper and parsnips. Continue cooking for 10 to 15 minutes. Thicken the remaining liquid and serve on a hot platter, with the gravy separate. Sprinkle with parsley.

Another pork dish makes use of hearts, one of the unrestricted cuts of meat:

Baked Stuffed Pork Heart.
2 or 4 pork hearts
2 slices bacon
1 cup fine bread crumbs
1 small onion
Salt
Pepper
Flour for dredging
Lard for browning

Wash hearts and remove enough of center portion to permit addition of the dressing or stuffing. Dice bacon and fry until crisp. Combine with bread crumbs. Season with finely minced onion. Season cavity in hearts, fill with stuffing, and fasten with skewers. Roll in flour and brown quickly in hot lard, in a heavy kettle. Add a small amount of water. Cover and cook slowly in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until the hearts are done—2 to 2½ hours. Thicken the liquid for gravy if desired.

Baked Spinach.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 pounds spinach
6 tablespoons flour
5 tablespoons fat, melted
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
4 tablespoons grated cheese
¾ cup bread crumbs

Wash and chop spinach. Arrange in layers in baking dish, sprinkling flour between layers. Mix fat, milk, salt and pepper and pour over spinach. Combine grated cheese and bread crumbs and place over top. Bake in moderate (350-degree) oven about 45 minutes.

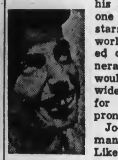
Cake Making? Bread Making? Cookie Baking? Budget Fixing? Housekeeping? You name the problem and explain it. Miss Lynn Chambers will be glad to give you expert advice if you write to her, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope for your reply, at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lynn Says:

Meaty Facts: If beef supplies are low, learn to use pork, for it's one of the best sources of the B vitamins. It also contains high quality proteins and minerals and is 96 to 98 per cent digestible when cooked long, at low temperature.

The non-restricted meats, liver, heart, kidneys, oxtails, etc., are as nutritious as the restricted cuts. Learn to use them by themselves or by combining them with restricted cuts so you can s-t-r-e-t-c-h that meat budget.



Tougher cuts of meat will be on your menus often, because they take less points than the expensive cuts. Most of them can be cooked by braising—that is, browning in hot fat, then adding water or another liquid, and cooking at long, slow heat until the meat is tender.

SPEAKING of SPORTS
by Bob McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

BASEBALL has been—and will continue to be—subject to a lot of unwarranted criticism. Most of this criticism is leveled at the men who are doing the most to keep baseball the nation's number one sport—the stars.

When Joe DiMaggio enlisted he did a lot for the game, even though his action removed one of the brightest stars of the baseball world. He eliminated one of the vulnerable spots that would have been a wide open target for those who are prone to find fault.

Joe DiMaggio

Joe is a married man with a family. Like those with the same responsibilities in other professions, he was classified 3-A by his draft board. He was subject to the same regulations as the grocery clerk or the filling station operator. The government asks only that a man go when his draft number comes up.

But DiMaggio didn't feel that he should wait. It was common knowledge that he was drawing more than $42,000 a year for playing a game. He knew he would be forced to take too much criticism, even though his hecklers were wrong. He knew, too, that baseball in general would suffer from the attacks directed against him.

The big boys of baseball can thank Joe for his move. They can point to him when the sharpshooting gets rough. He asked no favors when he voluntarily cut his own salary from $42,000 a year to $50 a month.

There are others. Baseball can point to Ted Williams, Hank Greenberg, Hugh Mulcahy and other stars who either enlisted or went when called without searching for some means of postponement.

Notre Dame Tinge

When Arthur ("Dutch") Bergman was named head coach of the World Champion Washington Redskins, the National Football league began to look more and more like a circuit of Notre Dame alumni.

Two head coaches have been named since the close of the last season — Bergman and Gus Dorais of the Detroit Lions. Both were Notre Dame men. They bring to four the total of Irish stars who hold top coaching spots in the pro league. The other two men are Hunk Anderson of the Chicago Bears and Curly Lambeau of the Green Bay Packers.

Elmer Layden

It might be remembered, too, that Elmer Layden, president of the league, is a Notre Dame graduate.

The first Notre Dame team coached by Knute Rockne included Lambeau and Anderson on its roster. That was in 1918. Bergman was on the team the following year and Dorais returned to the campus that same year to become Rockne's assistant.

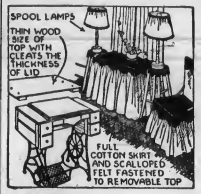
Sports in Britain

Sports enthusiasts in America, somewhat bewildered by the conflicting reports regarding baseball, football, racing and other spectator sports, can take heart from news of athletics in England.

Just about every type of sports in Britain has undergone drastic retrenchment, but continue in almost unabated variety and popularity. American and Canadian soldiers have introduced softball and basketball to add to boxing, English football, racing, rugby and cricket.

Sports have overcome most obstacles, even the one providing that there shall be no exemptions from military or civilian war service for athletes. The competitors engage in their specialties on short leaves. The leaves are facilitated officially and professional football—soccer—players still perform, and for pay.

Boxing continues to pack 'em in. Queensberry club, which houses London's weekly matches, usually is filled to its 2,000 capacity. Seats sell for as much as $55.



Cricket crowds are as great as ever. The Army-RAF competition in London attracted 20,000 each day.

Under special rules, player-club contracts are virtually non-existent. A player now can perform for the football team nearest his post, or on any team he can reach. As a result, there has been much borrowing among clubs.

There is a historically interesting story behind the naming of baseball's commissioner—Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

It seems that when he was born, his folks couldn't agree on a name. The debate finally became a community problem in Millvale, Ohio, where he was born in 1866. The solution turned out to be simple. His father had been a surgeon in the Union army and had lost a leg in the battle of Kennesaw Mountain, Ga. The family merely decided to perpetuate the memory of the battle in the son.

ON THE HOME FRONT
With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

NO SEWING machine should be idle today. No matter if yours is not the newest model, keep it in good repair and include it in your decorating scheme. This sketch shows how one was fitted into a living room to look very smart and to do extra duty as a table.

Plywood or composition board may be used for the removable top, (see sketch). The top cover is of blue felt with a scalloped band stitched around it. This is quick and easy to do as it is not necessary to finish raw edges of felt. The full skirt is made of the best part of old sheets dyed a soft ecru tone. This is sewn to the seam allowance of the felt and all is tacked to the back of the removable top so that it may be removed easily. A pair of kitchen stools are painted cream color and topped with blue felt for lamp stands. Scalloped felt also trims the lamp shades and the cover of an old side chair to match the table.

Help your Grocer

Let's Get Behind Him and Make Rationing a Success—Start Now to use more of the plentiful NON-RATIONED FOODS

THE man who runs your grocery store has his headaches these days. For months, in the face of shortages and lack of experienced help, he's been trying to carry on . . . trying to give you the kind of service you've always expected of him.

Now he has a brand new problem—point rationing. He has to collect the stamps from you as well as the cash.

It's a burden for him—sure—and for you. But he knows and you know that it's got to be done. It's the only fair way of making sure that everybody gets a fair share. That's our way of doing things.

So it's his job—and your job—everybody's job—to make point rationing work. . . as smoothly, as efficiently as possible. Traffic jams in food stores aren't going to help anybody.

Now there are a number of ways in which you can give this grocer of yours a real hand . . . in a good, neighborly American way. You can shop early in the day, early in the week. You can shop as infrequently as possible—once a week only, if you can manage. You can always make sure to have a shopping list, and to have your "point values" added up before you go to the store.

And you can help yourself as well as your grocer by using the plentiful, non-rationed foods as much as you can, instead of the scarce, rationed foods. Foods such as cereals, fresh fruits and vegetables, home-cooked soups, home-canned fruits and vegetables are not rationed and they deserve an important place in your wartime meals.

Because cereals are one of these abundant unrationed foods, we here at the Kellogg factory in Battle Creek have been doing everything we possibly can to meet the unprecedented demand for our products. We're sending millions upon millions of packages of crisp Kellogg Cereals to the boys in our armed forces. We're packing K-ration for troops in the front line of fighting. Even our machine shop is making gun parts! And we're short of help, too. There are 423 stars on the big service flag hanging in the lobby of the Kellogg building.

Other ways to help your Grocer...

1. Shop early in the day.
2. Shop early in the week.
3. Shop only once or twice a week.
4. Prepare a shopping list.
5. Add up total "point" values before going to the store.

But in spite of these wartime difficulties, we've doubled our efforts to be sure that we can supply Kellogg Cereals to the millions of American families who are depending on cereals more than ever.

Always famous for marvelous flavor, every Kellogg Cereal is made of WHOLE GRAIN or is restored to WHOLE GRAIN NUTRITIVE VALUES through the addition of thiamin (vitamin B_1), niacin and iron. With milk alone, or with milk and fruit, a bowl of crisp, delicious Kellogg Cereal gives you vitamins, minerals, protein, food-energy in one dish!

And remember this about cereals in your daily meals. They're quick and easy to prepare. No cooking, no pans or skillets to clean up. Even the dishes are easier to wash.

Cereals save time—work—fuel—other foods. Used in hamburger, meat-loaves, croquettes, etc., they help you stretch your meat . . . and they make milk go farther, too.

Think of cereals as one of your best, most nutritious, non-rationed foods and think of Kellogg Cereals as the finest you can buy.

FROM O.P.A. CONSUMER INSTRUCTION SHEET

"EAT MORE CEREALS.—There is an abundance of cereals and, as you know, they are mighty economical. They are nourishing and delicious—what's more, cereals can be used to stretch your rations when mixed with vegetables and fruits."

Ryland Homemaker's

The Homemaker's Club of Ryland met with Mrs. J. A. Rich on Tuesday of last week.

Mrs. W. A. Damon conducted a short business session which was followed by Mrs. Oliver Gee and Mrs. Clarence Armstrong discussing "Wartime Thriftness," facts brought out showed the need of more and more "Victory Gardens" this year if Americans are to have food to keep them fit. While more acreage will be planted, seeds should not be wasted, and the kind of seed should be selected to prove to the best advantage. Kentucky should raise 16% more poultry this year or a minimum of 27 million chickens, care should be taken in selecting healthy, grade A, chickens and buying them earlier.

A demonstration was given on "Wartime Housecleaning Aids" which was both educational and economical.

The following enjoyed a very delightful luncheon: Mrs. W. A. Damon, Mrs. Oliver Gee, Mrs. M. Threlkild, Mrs John S. Murchison, Mrs. C. Armstrong, Mrs. W. Mendenhall and the hostess.

The meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. Clarence Armstrong on Thursday, April 1st.

CONSERVATION
By P. A. Whitehead

Recognizing the need for a wider applicatiin of soil conservation as a means of incressing food production in 1943, supervisors of the Gallatin soil conservation district are recommending the establishment of simple conservation practices which can be applied with labor and materials available on the farm.

The practices include contour cultivation, the use of lime and fertilizer, Pasture improvement by cutting briers and bushes, crop rotations, planting of grasses and legumes and many others.

Mr. Whitehead, Work Unit Leader of the Gallatin District points out that the development of meadow strips is also a simple conservation practice requiring little technical skill, but which will prove its worth by providing hay and supplemental grazing needed in the food production program.

In addition to providing hay and grazing, meadow strips are a necessary adjunct to terraces and diversion ditches for safety handling surplus run-off water. Another advantage of meadow strips is that by furnishing hay, annual hay crops on cultivated land may be turned under for soil improvement.

Usually meadow strips are located in natural draws, the work unit leader points out, and require little labor to establish. They are prepared for seeding in much the same way as ordinary meadow fields which are planted to a mixture of grasses, clovers, and annual lespedeza.

COPPIN'S
70th ANNIVERSARY YEAR

This, our 70th Birthday, finds us with wholehearted support of our country's war effort as our first duty — and the continuing responsibility of exerting every effort to give the best possible service to our Northern Kentucky patrons.

This is a year of essentials. With every American working for Victory and realizing the necessity of conserving materials, it is a good store's job to supply the needs of the folks on the home front with the kind of quality merchandise that will last for the duration. In line with that policy, our buyers are giving every effort to keeping each department stocked with those articles that are recognized as essential and in step with the Victory program.

Under today's conditions, our customers will benefit more than ever from our long-time policy of carrying a maximum number of nationally known, standard quality merchandise items. Having handled these quality lines for many years, we will receive preferred delivery as the war effort permits.

©GREGORY W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Ann Lee and Cole Cody, beneficiaries under two identical wills of Old Early Bill Cole, were attempting to discover who fired the bullet which caused his death. Suspicion centered around Rance Waldron, who, posing as Old Bill's nephew, had taken up residence at the ranch. One night Rance was trailed by Cole to a deserted cabin. Meanwhile, back at the ranch, Ann's Aunt Jenifer was ransacking Rance's room when she heard footsteps outside. She sped back to Ann's room and locked the door only seconds before Rance knocked. Cole arrived in the nick of time and with gun drawn ordered Rance to his own room.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XIV

Cole Cody was first to awake the next morning. He slipped quietly out of bed, dressed and tiptoed to his door, stepping through it, pocketing the key and going straight to Rance Waldron's room. He tried the knob, found the door unlocked and went in.

Waldron was gone and, obviously, whether or not for good and all did not plan an immediate return, for he had stripped the covers from both beds, his and Tom Gough's, carrying them with him.

Cody lifted his shoulders in a high shrug. The chances were that Waldron had gone to join Tom Gough at the abandoned cabin where they had been last night, and could he found when and if wanted.

Well, the first thing was breakfast. He hadn't gotten beyond the stage of bacon-slicing when Jenifer Edwards came in, "spick and span" in a new blue dress. She gave him a smile that had warmed many a heart in her day, and presented him a bright nod along with her "Good morning, Cole Cody!" and then added cheerily, "men are good for some things, the Lord knows what mostly, although of course they come in handy at rescuing yelping dames in distress, but I'll be darned if I'll have any man tinkering with my stove. Scat until breakfast is ready."

He had brought ample armfuls of wood from the woodpile, breakfast was ready, piping hot and fragrant with the aroma of coffee floating far and wide, when little Ann Lee put in her appearance.

They sat at the kitchen table with its bright red oilcloth. Aunt Jenifer remarked in an off-hand sort of way,

"I miss our other hoarder, Mr. Rance Waldron. What news of him, Mr. Cody?"

"I won't answer," Cody told her, looking stern, "as long as you stick to that business of Mistering me. That's flat."

"I apologize, Bill Cole Cody," she told him. "What I meant to ask, Cole, is whether you by any chance happen to know anything of the whereabouts of Mr. Rance Waldron?"

"Gone," said Cole Cody.

"I'm not surprised that he's gone," said Aunt Jenifer, "but I'll be mighty surprised if he doesn't show up again. He is dead set on getting this ranch and all that goes with it, and I've a notion that'll he a pile of cash money."

After breakfast Cody brought Cal Roundtree up to the house, and the four of them discussed the situation brought about by the departure of Waldron, with enough bedding for two, and the inference that Waldron and Tom Gough, whom they all judged a killer, were sticking together.

"I was wrong and you was right last night, Cody. We'd ought to have hung the two of them right then and there. Later, you're going to see, there'll he hell a-popping, if the ladies will excuse the swear words," said Cal reflectively.

"You were the one who wanted to hang them, sooner or later," Cody reminded him. "Even yet I think we were right in keeping hands off until we could dig up some sort of evidence."

"Maybe so," agreed Cal somewhat morosely. Then he brightened. "That greaser friend of yours, Porfirio, is like a bloodhound; he's got his teeth so to speak, in the idea that it's quite a job for a man to make a hat disappear in a hurry; to make it vanish off the face of the earth for good and all. He says a hat's hard to burn in a great big hurry; maybe a piece of the brim will burn and the fire will go out. You can throw it away, into a patch of brush, but if a man's got eyes like Porfirio says his eyes are when he's praying in his heart to avenga a friend like that old—like Early Bill was—he can see every horse track and every boot track, and a black hat hidden in the bushes. And he says if you dig a hole and bury a hat, no matter how you scatter leaves over the place, eyes like Porfirio's are going to notice something funny about it. And even if you stuff a hat under a rock, there'll be some little something to show that the rock was moved. And Porfirio is going to find that hat or spend the rest of his life hunting it."

Later on that same forenoon, Doc Joe and the Judge drove out to the ranch in the Judge's top buggy. Arrived at the ranch house they made a brave noise of pounding at the front door; without waiting for anyone to answer, they opened it and came with a sort of martial stride into the living room where the conference was still in session; as one man they swept off their broad-brimmed, ragged old Stetsons.

"We come to greet you at this early, pearly hour," said the Judge sonorously, "because we have been thinking of you, talking of you, pondering the problem of the two wills drawn up by that old scion of sin, Early Bill Cole."

"In fact, ladies and gents," put in Doc Joe, his words slicing into the Judge's flow like a sharp knife through butter, "our hearts were so much with you, our every thought so much bent upon your welfare, we sat up all night! We did, didn't we, Judge?"

And, as if seeking an answer not from the Judge but elsewhere, his bright regard was directed to Aunt Jenifer.

"Now you look here, you, Judge and Doc," spoke up Cal Roundtree good humoredly yet firmly, "you two step along with me to the kitchen; we're going to have a cup of good strong, black coffee. Coma ahead; we've got all day to talk in."

"Do you know," spoke up Aunt Jenifer, beginning to sparkle, "I believe that I would like another cup myself! I'll make a big coffee pot full, and wa'll hava some flapjacks and jam, too! Kitten, if you'll set the table in the dining room—"

"Yes, Aunt Jenny," said Ann Lea quickly, and the two departed.

The Judge and Doc Joe, having spoken their few words about being sorry to put the ladies to so much trouble, turned, together to Cola

She crumpled the check and threw it at him.

Cody and Cal. In a lowered voice the Judge spoke.

"Gents," he said solemnly, "yesterday we won a couple of hets from the dead and gone old reprobate that folks called Early Bill. We had a drink or two, as perhaps you may have guessed without being told, to the aforementioned old hound. We have done more; we have, outside in my top buggy, a full jug. It is merely my suggestion that, while those two lovely ladies are preparing us a very proper morning drink, we steal a march on them and step out to where the jug is."

"It's a great little idea, Judge," said Cole Cody, and you would have thought that he meant it. "First, though, we want to tell you something and ask your advice. Rance Waldron sneaked out last night—"

"Who cares about Rance Waldron or anyone like him? The thing is—"

"And," said Cody sharply, "last night he took a hand-ax and tried to break down the door to the rooms where your two lovely ladies had locked themselves in."

"What!"

After that there was no further mention, just as there was no thought, of the jug in the buggy. The two old porchsitters had to be told in detail all that had happened: Of Tom Gough's hiding in the house—both of them knew Tom Gough—of his departure attended by Waldron, of all the rest of it.

And Aunt Jenifer's voice called from the dining room:

"Hot coffee! Come and get it!"

They all had coffee together, Aunt Jenifer, gentle but firm and pleasantly vivacious, seeing to it that both the old boys had three cups, and then they adjourned to the patio.

There were outdoor hickory chairs there, and the old green benches, and the patio was warm and fragrant with roses, where honeysuckle trailed from one arbor and a Mission grapevine from another, and where humming birds thrummed. One looked out along the hill slope and saw Early Bill's three tall pines, and a monster white oak, lower down, where the woodpeckers with their constant "tickety-ickety-ickety" were already busy using their small bright red heads for hammers and their bills for drills in the hard wood. The small part of the world encompassed within the King Cole Valley was steeped in peace and yellow sunshine, and only harmonious sounds drifted through it on a soft dry breeze.

"It's so lovely here!" Ann Lee said in a small, hushed voice after a deep breath.

Cal Roundtree, head down while rolling a cigarette, muttered:

"It's going to be hell-and-all if that dirty devil Rance Waldron gobbles it up." He raised his head to stare narrowly at the Judge. "How about it, Judge? You ought to know, being a lawyer and a banker, too. Old Early Bill had to have skimseit his fun, but what I hear about his two wills makes me think they kill each other, and Waldron, being nearest of kin, takes the whole kit and caboodle."

The Judge cleared his throat, but Cole Cody cut in. He extracted one of the two wills, twice folded, from his vest pocket and handed it to the Judge, saying,

"Here, Judge, you take care of mine, will you? You'll know how to handle it. I suggested yesterday that you take safeguard of my interests; suppose you're retained right now to do that for me? Is it a go?"

"You're dead right, son," he said heartily. "I'll take care of it for you."

The dreamy ecstasy fled from Ann Lee's eyes and a bright determination came into them. She jumped up and ran into the house; not a word was spoken before she returned, bringing her own precious document with her.

"Doc Joe," she said, and was for the moment like a pretty little girlchild, very trustful, innocent and irresistible, "won't you keep this for me? And won't you see that I am not cheated out of my rights? You know that Mr. Early Bill Cole wanted me to have everything that was his, don't you? You will protect me, won't you, Doc Joe?"

"Miss Ann Lee," he said sternly, "I do know that old Early Bill wanted you to have everything that he has willed to you here. I witnessed his signature; I talked alone with him a spell; he gave you the ranch and a lot of other truck, and by the jumping jimminy you're going to have it!"

The Judge spoke to Cola Cody, the while returning Doc Joe's glare.

"There is one other matter which we merely touched on yesterday," said the Judge, "that we might as well nail down right now. No matter which way the cat jumped you two young folks, no matter what happens to these two wills, have a lot of cash money in the bank, and it's in my bank and it's deposited there subject to your orders."

He reached into his pocket and drew out a small check book and tossed it into Cole Cody's hands. Those listening to him, all but Doc Joe, watched and waited for the other check book. It appeared there wasn't any.

So in the end Doc Joe explained. "Miss Ann Lee," he said, and sounded apologetic, "this whole setup is a mess. The money is there in the bank, if the Judge hasn't stole it. Fifty thousand, maybe, maybe a hundred thousand or a whale of a lot more. Fact is, I'm no banker and the Judge here claims to be, and for some fool reason, Early Bill trusted him. But here's the joker, like there is in every brand new deck: The account is in the joint names of you and this here Cody. In short, if either of you wants to draw a cent or a thousand dollars or anything, you both got to sign the same check! That was so ordered by the late Mr. William Cole, known by some as Early Bill, by others as Old King Cole himself. You two have just simply got to get together."

Of course Cole Cody and Ann Lee had to look at each other then, and of course that taunting, gleeful grin of Cody's came flashing back—and little Ann flushed up and bit her lip.

"I am going to draw out a thousand dollars today! A whole thousand! Oh, Aunt Jenny, think of the things we are going to do! We can spend a thousand dollars every day, if we want to! Mr. Cody, I haven't the slightest doubt, will be wanting some money! So he will sign with me; that's clear enough."

"Why, now!" exclaimed Cody, and sounded friendly and hearty. "It's an idea! As a matter of fact I could do with a little money myself. Here; I'll write the check right now, and we'll give it to the Judge to cash and split two ways for us. Where's pen and ink?"

"I'll show you," said Aunt Jenifer, and Cody followed her into the house. They were not long gone.

Cody had written and signed the check; he handed it with the pen and ink bottle to Ann for her signature below his.

She started to sign, then stiffened her small figure, and her lips were compressed and her eyes blazing. He had written in the amount: Twenty Dollars.

"I said a thousand!" she said.

"Shucks," said the good humored Bill Cole Cody. "Twenty bucks is a lot of money. You take ten, I take ten—and there you are."

She crumpled the check and threw it at him.

"When sometime you want to draw out some money, Mr. Cody," she told him, "say a considerable amount, for some emergency, maybe—Why, just come to me for my signature, won't you?"

Right there the patio conference broke up.

TO YOUR Good Health

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

CORONARY THROMBOSIS

You are reading much about coronary occlusion (coronary thrombosis), which is a stoppage of flow of blood in a blood vessel (or a branch) supplying blood to the heart muscle itself. It is due to a break in the wall of the vessel caused by the vessel becoming old and having little or no elasticity in its walls.

Dr. Barton

The stoppage of the blood may be sudden as when it gets completely blocked by a blood clot, or stoppage may be gradual because the lining walls of the blood vessel have become thickened.

As it is this disease that is carrying off so many men and women past middle age, any facts regarding it are of interest to all of us. Coronary occlusion is found most often between ages of 50 and 70 years, although about 25 per cent occur before 50. About 70 per cent of cases are found in those whose blood pressure has been above normal for a considerable time. This is one of the diseases that is no respecter of persons, as it occurs in all classes and occupations in life.

One of the points of interest is just why a certain number of these patients pass away during their first attack while almost an equal number live months and years.

Drs. R. M. Woods and A. R. Barnes, Rochester, Minn., in American Heart Journal tell of their investigation as to why 60 of 128 patients with coronary occlusion died within six weeks of the attack while the others lived for a considerable time afterward. The average age of the patients was 55 years; the average age of the patients who survived was about 51 years as compared with 59 years for those who died within the six weeks. The death rate of those after 60 years of age was about twice that before 60. The number of male cases was more than five times the number of females. However, the death rate among men was about half that among women owing to the fact that most men have their first attack before 60 whereas most women have their first attack after 60.

As these attacks occur more often during sleep and rest, exertion or work may not be considered a cause, but heart specialists state that it is something that occurred 48 hours previous to the attack that really caused the attack.

Symptoms of Lack of Vitamin-B Complex

Many individuals find it necessary to clear their throats of a discharge that comes down from the back part of the nose. When there is but slight discharge nothing may be thought about it, but when there is much discharge, together with a feeling of fullness and at times a choking sensation, the individual quite naturally suspects a sinus inflammation because there is pain in the cheek or forehead sinus.

An examination by his physician or even a nose and throat specialist, however, shows no sinus or other defect in nose and throat.

That the above symptoms and others may be due to lack of the vitamin B complex is pointed out by Dr. S. E. Roberts, Kansas City, Mo., in Annals of Ear, Nose and Throat, St. Louis.

Discharge from back of nose without sinus infection, stuffiness of nose or seeming obstruction, pain in sinus with no infection present, and tiredness without apparent cause, pain in ear with no apparent cause, and nervousness and emotional disturbances without positive signs are frequently seen. These make up a group of symptoms due to excessive use of sugar and white flour.

The fullness or obstruction in the nose alternates from side to side and is worse when lying down and in the early morning. It can readily be seen why this particular symptom can be mistaken for sinus infection as sinus symptoms are worse when lying down and in the morning.

What removes or interferes with the action of vitamin B complex in the body?

Four factors mentioned by Dr. Roberts are (a) excessive alcohol, (b) excessive smoking, (c) excessive carbohydrates (starch and sugar) and (d) taking cathartics.

What about treatment?

Dr. Roberts has had successful results by injections of vitamin B complex into the veins.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What are the causes of bad breath?

A.—Bad breath may be caused by dry catarrh, infected teeth and tonsils, too much fat food.

Q.—Is palpitation of the heart serious?

A.—This is called tachycardia—rapid heart beat. It is not dangerous; usually due to nervousness or emotional disturbances. One visit to your physician will clear up the matter for you.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for March 14

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

IN THE UPPER ROOM

LESSON TEXT—John 13:12-20; 14:1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father, but by me.—John 14:6.

Calvary and crucifixion were just ahead. Jesus gathered His disciples for a time of communion and instruction as they spent their last evening together. On the morrow would come betrayal, but now they and their Lord were together in the upper room.

But even here strife and dissension had apparently come in. There was probably some difference of opinion as to who should have the place of honor. To teach them the virtue of humility Jesus gave them an example, after which He continued with the precious counsel and prayer which are found in John 14 to 17.

Our lesson presents three things which our Lord gave to His disciples and to us (see John 17:20).

I. His Example—"Do as I Have Done" (13:12-20).

The act of Jesus in washing the disciples' feet placed Him, their Lord and Teacher, on the level of the most menial servant. It was an astonishing thing that He did, lowering Himself below their level to serve them.

His application of the object lesson was equally startling. "Ye call me Teacher and Lord, and ye say well," said He. Then as learners and servants He required of them the humility which would make them eager to do lowly service in His name.

There are more than enough folk who are willing to do the nice, pleasant things in the church, where they will be given recognition and praise. All too scarce are those Christlike folk who will serve in the hidden places where darkness, suffering, disease and sin make the natural man recoil in distress or fear.

II. His Assurance—"If I Go I Will Come Again" (14:1-3).

Following His resurrection Jesus was to go to the Father. He wanted them to be prepared for that time by making known to them the fact of His coming again. In that day His own shall be received unto Himself to abide with Him forever.

The second coming of Christ is not a strange doctrine held by little groups of people who are riding a theological hobby. It is one of the most blessed truths of Scripture. The hope of the Christian—yes, the only real hope of this disordered world—is the coming of Christ to reign. The New Testament is full of plain and helpful teaching on this subject.

While we await His coming, then, is there any encouragment for us as the burdens bear down and the way seems long? Yes, He says: "Let not your heart be troubled" (v. 1). There is little question that this passage has comforted more people than any other word in Scripture.

Countless bewildered and broken souls in all lands and times have here found the steadying assurance of the one who has the power to give them rest and comfort.

There is good foundation for their composure of heart in a troubled world. They believe in God, and in Christ, who is one with the Father. Here is real security—infinitely superior to aught the world can give.

Then at the end of the road are the eternal dwelling places. What they are like is sufficiently revealed in the fact that they are in the Father's house. How shall we reach them? That is our last point. We have

III. His Guidance—"I Am the Way" (vv. 4-6).

To Christ's declaration that they knew the way, Thomas responded with a request for a definite statement. He wanted to be sure, and Christ responded by reminding him that He, their Lord, is the "way, the truth, and the life." Surely there could be no more complete provision for the guidance of the heavenly pilgrim.

Christ is "the way." If one takes the right road he will reach the right destination though he "cannot at first see it clearly. Perhaps this is the commonest mistake of the Christian. He frets too much about what lies ahead . . . and not enough about taking the right road" (Lesson Commentary).

He is "the truth." He is the final and complete revelation of God, and is therefore the One who will lead all those who walk the way by faith into the fullness of the truth. To know Christ is to know God.

He is "the life." He is life, and He alone can give eternal life to man. There is none other to whom man may turn for life, but in Christ it is found, and from Him it may he received by faith.

We have only touched the briefest beginning of what took place on that remarkable evening in the upper room. It was a time of richest spiritual significance, of dark betrayal, but also of closest communion. We continue next Sunday.

BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

SHADOW THE WEASEL ENJOYS HIMSELF

When I start to do a thing I always see it through;
I find it really is the best and only way to do.

THAT'S a little rule that Shadow the Weasel made for himself a long time ago and which he tries to live up to. Of course sometimes things happen to prevent but usually he does whatever he sets out to do. It really is a very good rule if you add to it this:

I never try to do a thing I shouldn't if I could,
And always try to make that thing a thing that's really good.

But Shadow never has added that last part. In truth Shadow would just laugh at that if he should hear it. The fact is, Shadow the Weasel has a bad heart. Yes, sir, Shadow has a bad heart, a black, black heart. It is such a black heart that sometimes it seems as if there was no good in it. None of his neighbors believe there is. They all hate him, even his own cousins, Billy Mink and Jimmy Skunk. And Shadow doesn't seem to care. It seems sometimes as if he actually enjoyed being hated. Certainly he enjoys seeing other little people afraid of him, as most of them are.

This particular morning Shadow had been very much out of sorts.

This particular morning Shadow had been feeling very much out of sorts. Yes, sir, Shadow had been feeling very much out of sorts. You see he had hunted most of the night without finding anything to eat, and so he was hungry, very hungry, indeed. He had been out on the Green Meadow hunting for Danny Meadow Mouse when he heard Chatterer the Red Squirrel scolding over in the Green Forest. Shadow lifted his head to listen. Then a cruel hungry look crept into his eyes and he showed his sharp little teeth in a cruel, hungry smile as he said: "That sounds to me like last night's dinner and this morning's breakfast both in one. I think Chatterer will make a better meal than even Danny Meadow Mouse." With that he licked his lips and started in the direction of Chatterer's voice, and he actually had started up the tree Chatterer was in before Chatterer saw him. It was then that Chatterer had started on his mad flight of fear through the treetops.

Now while Chatterer raced and jumped through the tree tops as fast as ever he could, and so tired himself out, Shadow the Weasel took his time in following. He ran swiftly, but not swiftly enough to tire himself. He didn't try to keep Chatterer in sight. You see, he trusted to his nose to tell him where Chatterer had gone, and his nose never deceived him. It told him just what branches Chatterer had run along and just where he had jumped to the next tree.

Now, Shadow is himself a nimble climber, and he had no trouble in going wherever Chatterer had gone until he reached the place where Chatterer had made the long jump and fallen. Shadow just glanced at it and turned around. He had no mind to risk any such fall as that. He knew that all he had to do was to run down the tree and up the next. When he reached the ground he started at a gallop across to the next tree, but from habit his nose was busy on the ground as he ran. Suddenly he stopped.

"Ha!" said he. "Seems to me I smell Chatterer down here! What does that mean?"

His nose led him straight to the tree and up. Shadow grinned. He knew perfectly what had happened. "Chatterer missed that jump and had a bad fall. I guess it must have shaken him up a little and he won't be able to run so fast," thought he. Then he started on as lively as ever. He was enjoying himself. He didn't mind that run through the tree tops because he didn't have to hurry any faster than he pleased and because he was sure of a good dinner at the end.

Here's a Whopper

Out in California the natives tell tall tales about their giant Redwood trees.

"Big trees? Why, out our way they felled a hollow tree over a ravine that was too deep and wide to build a bridge across. One day when I was driving through this tree with a trailer, I met a big moving van coming through from the other end. I couldn't back up or go ahead, so I just edged the trailer into a hollow branch and let the other fellow go past."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Scientists have determined that rubber latex as it drips from the trees is about 60 per cent water, 24 per cent chemically pure rubber, the balance resins, minerals, proteins and sugars.
Clothing made water-proof by the use of rubber was being sold in England as early as 1791.
Beads of the five and ten cents variety have a stronger influence than ordinary currency in encouraging the Yumbo Indians of Ecuador's Oriente jungle to haul rubber out from the waters of the Amazon. Next to beads, guns and machetes put the "go" in the Yumbo.
The first rubber to be imported into the U. S. was in the form of water bottles. They came direct from the Amazon district.
A full grown Hevea rubber tree averages 30 to 60 feet in height and its average life is 40 years or more.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become overtaxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

LIVESTOCK PRODUCTION NOTES

The following is a brief summary of timely livestock information prepared by the College of Agriculture according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. More detail information on feeding and prodution problems are available at the county agents office in Burlington.

HOGS—

It pays to raise hogs the clean way—free from worms. Healthy pigs make their gains on 20 per cent less feed and are ready for marke in a third less time. When hogs are worth $15.00 per hundred a litter of pigs net the farmer from $75.00 to $100.00 more than a liter of wormy pigs.

Access to clean soil the first week prevents anemia in young pigs. Anemia is characterized by wrinkled skin, dull listless appearance, quick breathing, rough hair, dropping ears and tail.

Slanting the floor of the farrowing house toward the door helps prevent over laying or mashing of pigs. Feeding the sows liberally before farrowing helps to prevent many pig diseases.

BEEF CATTLE—

Farmers who have plenty of roughage and pasture and some grain should find beef cattle profitable this year.

SHEEP—

Ewes should be fed to produce a good supply of milk. Plenty good legume hay and small grain pasture will supply most of the protein and mineral repuirements.

The creep feeding of lambs produces better lambs with superior carcasses. Corn alone in four experiments gave faster gains on less fed and at considerable less cost than complicated grain mixtures.

There are many interesting results from experimental work in the feeding and management of livestock.

From funds received from the fat salvage, members of two home makers' clubs in Caldwell county are buying war bonds.

Approximately 200 hogs have been taken into Leslie county in the past few weeks, 50 of them being registered Duroc-Jerseys.

War Boards to License Meat Handlers, Farmers

Permits and complete instructions for registering farmers, butchers, and slaughters for the sale of meat are expected to be in the hands of county war boards this week or early next week, according to Daniel K. Young, acting State Supervisor of the Food Distribution Administration.

Under new FDA regulations, everyone who slaughters livestock after March 31 for the purpose of selling meat must register and secure a permit.

"A fair share of meat for everyone will be assured as soon as the orders of Secretary Wickard are operating smoothly," Mr. Young believes.

"The Government is relying on the cooperation of farmers, livestock dealers, slaughters, butchers and housewives to stamp out the black market in meat. The Government has no intention of policing every farmer and butcher to see that he is playing according to the rules. If everybody cooperates, everyone will get his share.

"The meat orders are elastic and make provision for adjusting local situations. No particular hardship is involved. The orders were carefully worked out with one purpose in mind: To guarantee the civilian population and the armed forces a fair share of good, sanitary meat. Every requirement of the orders is essential if the government is to protect our meat supplies."

A digest of the three meat orders follows:

Everyone, including farmers, butchers, and slaughters who kill livestock after March 31 for the purpose of selling the meat (not for home consumption) must register and secure a permit from his county Department of Agriculture War Board office or an FDA office, if there is one in his county.

Every piece of meat sold after April 1 must be stamped with the permit number of the slaughterer.

Every dealer in livestock must also register and secure a permit from his War Board or FDA office. A farmer who raises or feeds livestock, keeping them for more than 30 days, is not considered a dealer, however, and need not register, but must keep records of all purchases and sales of livestock for FDA inspection.

In registering, every farm slaughterer (anyone engaged primarily in agricultural production as a resident operator of a farm, who did not deliver more than 10,000 pounds of live weight meat for sale in 1941) must declare the amount he slaughtered for sale by seperate quarters of the year 1941. The farm slaughterer will then be given his quota for future three-month periods, equal to the amount he delivered for sale in the corresponding quarters of 1941. Home consumed meat is exempt.

The butcher (anyone who did not slaughter more than 300,000 pounds of live weight meat in 1941, other than a farm slaughtered) must declare the amounts he slaughtered by months in 1941. For each month after April 1 his quota for slaughtering will be the same as for the corresponding month in 1941.

Local slaughters (those who slaughtered more than 300,000 pounds of meat in 1941 and who are not registered with OPA as slaughterers) are limited in their April slaughtering to 80 percent of the amount by live weight slaughtered or meat produced in April of 1941, in addition to any meat sold to Government agencies this year. Quotas for each succeding month will be announced by the Director of FDA and will be based on the corresponding month of 1941 production.

Slaughters in establishments having Federal inspection (in the main, large packers) will receive communications direct from the Administrator, and will have quotas set separately according to local conditions. In this way, consideration can be given to local needs in cities where unusual conditions prevail, as contrasted with previous OPA regulations which set flat quotas without regard to varying needs.

The registration and license for both the farm slaughterer and butcher are mandatery before any meat can be sold. Anyone who violates the provisions of the new orders may be prohibited from selling meat in the future, as well as being subject to criminal prosecution under the Federal laws.

In determining quotas for future months or future quarters, the farmer and butcher may choose between slaughtering the same gross live weight they slaughtered in the corresponding period in

John Dudley Breeden Now in U. S. Navy.

Great Lakes, Ill.—John Dudley Breeden, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Breeden, Walton, Kentucky, has entered the Navy as an apprentice seamen and is undergoing recruit training at the U. S. Naval Training Station here. Upon completing several weeks of basic training he will be given a nine-day leave after which he will be assigned to a Navy trade school for instruction in a specialized service or be assigned to active duty at sea.

"Boot" training consists of instruction in the rudiments of seamanship, Naval customs and procedure, participation in a strict physical conditioning program and taking a series of aptitude tests. The latter are used to determine what type of work each recruit will be assigned upon finishing training.

1943 Live At Home Program Important

The 1943 "Live at Home" or "Grow Your Own Food in 1943 Program" is of greatest importance this year according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Three hundred-seventy-one neighborhood leaders began work this week supplying "Live at Home" information to their neighbors and are cooperating in an important war service.

It will not be a difficult job to convince every rural family that they should:

1. Milk—Have two cows, one spring freshening and one fall freshening.

2. Poultry—A small flock of chickens—with five laying pullets per person in the family.

3. A good garden that will supply 21 servings a week through out the year.

4. Where possible — have 200 strawberry plants, 100 raspberry plants, 12 fruit trees and 10 grape vines to supply the family of five fruit needs.

Such a program has three outstanding features—it is patriotic, economical, and healthful.

It will not be so difficult under the present and prospective food rationing program to convince rural people they should carry such a program. The great difficulty will be in carrying out in a workman like manner such a program after it is planned. The County Agricultural and Home Economics Extension Services are ready to advise with rural people not only on their production but on the preservation and storage of food products after they are produced.

Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Ryle returned on Thursday from a six weeks stay in Florida, their many friends welcome them home.

Sparta Woman Injured Fatally

A twenty-seven-year-old Gallatin County, Kentucky mother was injured fatally Monday when a truck driven by her husband turned over on Sparta-Glencoe Road five miles south of Warsaw, Ky.

The victim, Mrs. Martha Miller, Sparta, Ky., died Monday night, shortly after her arrival at St. Elizabeth Hospital.

Dr. James P. Riffe, Kenton County Coroner, who returned a verdict of accidental death, said Mrs. Miller suffered a skull fracture and internal injuries.

Dr. Riffe said Mrs. Miller and her husband, Raymond Miller, drove to Warsaw to have a door on the truck repaired.

Mrs. Miller and her husband were returning home when she told him that the door of the truck had opened. Miller told Dr. Riffe that when he attempted to look at the door the truck skidded on loose gravel.

When he tried to right the truck Mrs. Miller was thrown through the open door. The truck then turned over, pinning Mrs. Miller beneath it. Miller, who escaped injury, and passing motorists worked for more than an hour before they released Mrs. Miller from the wreckage.

Her husband, a seven-year-old son, and her mother, Mrs. David Clifton, Sparta, survive her.

Symbolic of the role the Red Cross is again playing, the 1943 Red Cross War Fund poster depicts the organization as a mother ministering to the needs of the men of the United States armed forces and the victims of war throughout the world. The poster is an appeal to all men and women for contributions to the War Fund. Lawrence Wilbur, noted illustrator, designed the poster. Helen Mueller is the model.

William M. Miller

William M. Miller, age 93, retired farmer passed away Sunday, March 14 at the home of his son, R. C. Miller in Mt. Zion after several weeks illness from Cerebral Hemonhage.

Mr. Miller was the husband of the late Sarah Hall Miller, a lifelong resident of Verona and Mt. Zion. He was a faithful member of the Mt. Zion Baptist church.

He is survived by four children. Mrs. Ed Vest, Verona; Mr. R. C. Miller, Mt. Zion; Mrs. E. P. Evans, Rising Sun, Ind.; Mr Frank Miller, Covington; one sister, Mrs. Betty Swain, Cincinnati, Ohio; three brothers, D. A. Miller, Patriot, Ind.; John Miller, Cincinnati, O.; George Miller, Owenton; also thirty grand-children and twenty-five great grand-children.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at 2 P. M. at the Mt. Zion church by Rev. Abernathy, with burial in the Mt. Zion cemetary.

Hamilton & Son had charge of the funral arrangements.

Eliza Marie Jackson

Eliza Marie Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kirby Jackson of Warsaw, Ky. died suddendly Tuesday, March 9th at Dr. Stalard's office at Warsaw, Ky.

She was born November 3rd and died March 9th. The funeral was held at the Paint Lick church and her body was laid to rest in the Paint Lick Cemetary by the side of her brother who died a year ago. She has gone to meet him—Gone but not forgotten by the family.

Lusby and Mrs. Pearl Bedinger-Mrs. Mary Scott Moore gave out some papers on point rationing, also some literature of interest on Victory Gardens.

The meeting was closed and we only hope a few more members can be present at our next meeting which will be made know befor the next meeting date.

Roy W. Eason Promoted to Third Class Petty Officer.

Chicago, Ill., March—Promoted to the petty officer rating of aviation machinist's mate, third class, Roy W. Eason, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Eason, Star Route, Walton Kentucky, has been graduated from the U. S. Naval Training School at Navy Pier here. He awaits assignment to duty with the fleet or at an aviation base.

The Bluejacket was a member of a class composed of avation machinist's mates and aviation metalsmiths. Machinist's mates are instructed in assembling, servicing and repairing airplanes and airplane engines. Metalsmiths are taught to make temporary and permanent repairs to airplane metalwork, such as radiators, pipe connections, instruments and joints. Both are given instruction in the principles and theory of flying.

Men are selected to attend service school upon the basis of a series of aptitude tests taken during recruit training.

OPA Places Ceiling on Used Farm Machinery.

Regulation No. 133 places a ceiling price on five types of used farm machinery, namely tractors (except crawler tractors), combines and hay balers. The maximum price is 85% of the list published manufactures list price if the equipment is less than one year old and 70% of the list price if it is over one year old.

The regulation applies to dealers, farmers and auctioneers.

A copy of these regulations has been posted in the county agents office, Burlington.

Piner Boy Reported Missing In Action

Pvt. Woodrow H. Menefee, 26, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orive Menefee, Piner, Kenton county, has been reported missing in action in the North African area since February 21, the War Department informed his parents in a telegram late Thursday.

A farmer in civilian life, Pvt. Menefee enlisted in the Army in August, 1940. He received his basic training at Ft. Bragg, N. C. and was sent overseas several months ago.

Pvt. Menefee has two brothers serving in the armed forces—Staff Sergt. Lloyd Menefee is a member of the Army Air Forces stationed at Augusta, Ga., and Sgt. Tilford Menefee is with the Army at Camp Hood, Tex.

Harold Griffith Vest Graduated from Ten Weeks Training Course.

Great Lakes, Ill.—Harold Griffith Vest, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Vest, Rt. No. 2, Verona, Ky., was graduated today from the 16 week training course in the school for Fire Controlmen, at the Service School of the U. S. Naval Training Station here. He is now eligible for advancement to a petty officer rating.

The graduate awaits assignment to the fleet or to an advanced Service School for additional instruction. He will serve under veteran petty officers in his specialized field, and may obtain a rating as soon as he is able to pass the qualifying examination.

Nineteen of the 49 specialist trades used in the Navy are taught in the Service School here at Great Lakes.

Gasoline Rationing Must Continue

There will be no relaxing of gasoline rationing restrictions for pleasure driving this year.

Indeed the increasing consumption of gasoline and fuel oil by the military and war industry is draining our petroleum reserves faster than we have been replacing them.

These and other enlightening facts about the oil situation are discussed by Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior and Petroleum Co-ordinator for National Defense, in the April issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine.

"I wish I could make a prediction with respect to gasoline that would be popular, but I cannot," writes Mr. Ickes.

Mr. Ickes gives a simple, lucid explanation of the oil problem and its importance to the United Nations in the current global conflict.

In commenting on any possible Nazi fuel shortage, Mr. Ickes says:

"I am not depending upon the evaporation of the Nazi oil supply to end the war soon, and I wouldn't advise anyone else to do so."

He cautions Americans to expect a continued tightness in the gasoline situation.

"The East Coast will be called upon for more and more supplies for ourselves and for our Allies," says Mr. Ickes, "not only in North Africa, but wherever else they may be fighting like Titans against the Huns. And barring discoveries of important pools that have not yet been made, California is faced with the prospect of having to import oil in the not far distant future. This would institute a further drain upon our Eastern and mid-continent supplies.

"With the coming of warm weather, our primary duty will be to fill our storage tanks with fuel oil against the demands of next winter. This duty will be even more imperative than it was last summer. The use of gasoline save for the most essential purposes is out for some time to come!"

Grace McBride Y. W. A.

The Grace McBride Y. W. A of the Walton Baptist church met for the March meeting at the home of Mrs. Bryan Rector. The topic of the program was "Land That I Love." Those present were: Miss Jean Farris, Annabel Percival, Mildred Soden and Mrs. Bryan Rector. Refreshment and social hour followed the meeting.

Boys and Girls 4-H Enlistments Still Open.

Boys and Girls may still enlist in the 1943 4-H Victory food and fiber production program according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Enlistment cards may be secured from local school teachers, 4-H Club officers, adult leaders or from the county agents office.

More than 600 boys and girls have already enrolled in ten organized community clubs. The number is expected to exceed the 700 mark before the enlistment period closes.

The projects are adapted to meet the war needs of each individual farm. The dairy, hog, beef, sheep, poultry, garden corn hemp, castor beans, tobacco, farm machinery repair, labor service, cooking canning and clothing are all planned to meet varied situations in which the boy or girl may serve and receive a certificate of service.

Emery L. Arnold Retired Farmer Dies

Most surprising was the news Friday evening of the sudden passing of Mr. Arnold, father of Mrs. B. F. Elliott, with whom he had made his home for the past eight years.

Mr. Arnold, 74 years of age, had returned from Crittenden in his car about a half hour before his passing, had been to the grocery and going about home as usual. He had gone to the basement and when he did not return he was called, no answer was returned. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott were notified and upon their arrival found Mr. Arnold had passed away from a heart attack. Dr. Daugherty was called, but all human aid was of no avail.

He was a faithful member of the Baptist Church all his life, being a member of the Walton Baptist church at the time of his death. A sincere husband, and most loving and tender father, who will be greatly missed by his devoted daughter.

Mr. Arnold was born near Falmouth, later moved to his farm at Plingsville where he lived until the death of his wife about eight year ago.

He is survived by his only child, Mrs. B. F. Elliott, his mother, Mrs. Nannie Gardiner Arnold of near Falmouth, one brother, Wm. M. Arnold, two sisters, Mrs. C. L. McMillian and Mrs. Warren Cox, all of Falmouth, Ky., three grandchildren, Mrs. Ira Harris, Bennie Elliott and Jo Ann Elliott and a host of relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon at the Chambers & Grubbs Funeral Home, with Rev. C. J. Alford in charge, assisted by Rev. C. G. Dearing, in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends. Burial was in Gardinersville Cemetary, Gardinsrsville, Ky.

Chambers & Grubbs had charge of funeral arrangements.

Farm Bureau To Hold Banquet

The Farm Bureau Banquet at Burlington school Friday evening, March 19, is expected to be the largest meeting of its kind ever held in the county according to the program committee. A record attendance is expected to hear J. E. Stamford, New Farm Bureau Secretary who will address the meeting.

The Farm Bureau Organization started out on January the first with a 1943 goal of 25 members. The membership has already passed the fifty mark and is growing daily.

The Farm Bureau is an orginization made up of farmers. It is independent of all commercial, political and other connections, is made up of county organizations and set up to service only farmers needs, whatever they might be. It affiliated through directorship with the State and National Farm Bureau Federations.

The meeting Friday evening will offer an opportunity for every farmer to attend, to enjoy farmer fellowship and to hear important phases of state and national farm problems discussed. Farmers, their wives and families are invited to attend. The banquet diner is served by the Burlington P.-T. A. at 75 cents per plate. Those who make their reservations early will help insure plenty of plates for all who will attend. Make your reservations today.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Nazi Counter Drive in Kharkov Area Wins Back Part of Russ Winter Gains; Wallace Warns of Future War Menace; Allies Tighten Ring on Rommel Armies

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

NORTH AFRICA:

Rommel Rages

Like a wild animal in a cage, Marshal Rommel had struck out at the forces hemming in his 250,000 army in Tunisia. His principal offensive had been a heavy thrust at Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's British Eighth army before the strategic Mareth line in Southern Tunisia.

But the wary-Englishman had anticipated the German move and his deadly artillery fire had repelled repeated Nazi attacks with "very heavy losses."

Rommel, a master of tank warfare, had attempted to break through the British lines with his heavy mechanized equipment, but when he was forced to withdraw wrecked German tanks were strewn over the battlefield.

In the north the British First army had regained the initiative and was pressing the enemy, while on the central front the American forces were moving steadily to hem the Axis in.

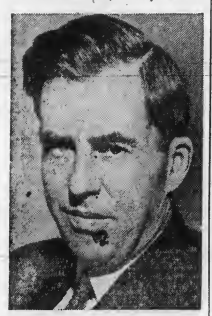
DRAFT:

Plan to Save Farmers

Plans of the administration to take the pressure of the draft off the nation's shortaged pool of farm labor apparently contemplate the induction of unmarried men over 38 or those in that age group without dependents. This, at least, was the interpretation of Washington observers concerning orders by the War Manpower commission to the selective service to reclassify such men 1A beginning May 1.

The Manpower commission's action followed the announcement of a four-point plan for the deferment of essential farm labor. It came at a moment, too, when the congressional farm bloc had launched a drive to clarify the farm labor confusion.

Local draft boards were under orders hereafter to place no more men in Class 4-H and to reclassify out of 4-H into 1-A all such men now deferred because over the military age limit. At the same time draft boards were ordered to begin reclassification immediately of all men over 38 who may become eligible for class 2-C or 3-C because connected with farm work.



U. S.-RUSSIA:

Need More 'Trust'

Although the storm over Ambassador-Admiral William H. Standley's complaint concerning Russia's failure to inform its people fully about the great extent of American aid had subsided and future lend-lease shipments on an ever-bigger scale were assured, the need for greater mutual confidence between the two Allies continued.

This need was stressed by Vice President Henry A. Wallace in a speech which coincidentally enough was delivered at the time Standley's statement was made public. Mr. Wallace had stressed the fact that a third World war might result unless the western democracies and Russia reach a satisfactory understanding.

"War will be probable in case we doublecross Russia," Wallace said.

VICE PRESIDENT WALLACE
. . . beware World War III.

"Such a war would be inevitable if Russia should again embrace the Trotskyist idea of fomenting world revolution, or if British interests should again be sympathetic to anti-Russian activity in Germany and other countries."

RUSSIA:

Nazis Uncoil

Three reasons were cited by military observers for the initial success of the sudden German counter-offensive west of Rostov and south of Kharkov which in its early stages had swept forward 100 miles and resulted in the capture of eight key cities in the Donetz basin which had been taken earlier by the Soviets in their great winter drive.

One reason was the use by the Nazis of 25 fresh divisions. Twelve of these had been rushed from western Europe and the others replenished after previous action. A second reason was the draining of troops from this southern sector by the Russians to supply momentum to their drive on Orel and Vyazma to the north. The third was the superiority of Axis supply lines and communications in the Donetz area.

The serious extent of these early German successes was evident in the fact that Russian official communiques had admitted the loss of the cities the Germans had claimed. Russ reports disclosed that the German move had actually started late in February.

The setback in the south had not prevented the Russians from continuing their drive on Vyazma. Red communiques had reported the capture of Tiomkino.

FOOD SUPPLY:

Nutrition Level Dips

That the food situation in the United States is rapidly bringing the American people down to the Canadian and British level of nutrition was the opinion voiced by Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard.

Mr. Wickard likewise disclosed that the amount of food available for civilians "is going to be something less than it is at the present time," in testimony before the senate appropriations committee.

CLAUDE WICKARD

Because of the increasing demand for proteins and fats — including meat, dairy products and some oil crops—from our military forces and our Allies, Mr. Wickard said the American people will probably have to live more on vegetable fats and proteins than they formerly did. "We have about reached the place now where we cannot expand our meat production any more," he said, "because we are not going to have enough of the basic element—feed—to support much more increase."

LABOR MANHUNT:

French Fight Nazis

Adolf Hitler's desperate need for manpower had caused the Nazi to put more than usual pressure on the collaborative Laval regime for more French workers.

The German demand had been for 400,000 men. When Nazi soldiers abetted by the Vichy government set out to meet this goal, the trouble started.

Street fighting, guerrilla tactics and sabotage were the French Patriots' answer to this effort to bolster Germany's waning manpower resources. Reports received by the Fighting French in London indicated that in a single 72-hour uprising, more than 350 German soldiers had been killed.

Swift and cruel were the reprisals taken for this insubordination. But the repressive measures only served to fan the flames of French hatred against the German conquerors.

WHO is fighting whom?

COUNTRIES AT WAR

THE FOLLOWING STATES HAVE SEVERED RELATIONS WITH THE AXIS:

Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Paraguay, Uruguay, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Chile.

The above chart shows at a glance which nations of the world have declared war against the others. Of all the United Nations only three—Britain, Czechoslovakia and China—have declared war on the entire Axis tribe. The United States excepts Finland which yet may be induced to quit the Axis.

PACIFIC FRONT:

Jap Power Wanes

In the Far Eastern war theater, reports from China disclosed that the main Japanese offensive in Western Yunnan province along the old Burma road had been halted on the west bank of the Salween river. Waning enemy air power in the Burma-China area was indicated by Allied reports that repeated attacks by American and British fliers on Jap objectives had failed to lure any Nipponese planes into battle.

On the Solomon Islands battlefront, American planes roved to the northward raiding Kahili, Buin and Ballale in the Shortland Islands area and Viru Harbor in New Georgia. The Japs retaliated with a raid on Tulagi close to Guadalcanal.

Summarizing the situation in the Pacific, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox said that American forces are stronger than ever before in the Solomon Islands sector while throughout the South Pacific, the Japs are having increasing difficulty in supplying their island bases.

Without adequate shipping, the secretary explained, the Japs cannot maintain their South Pacific bases and face further retirement.

ANTI-VICHY:

Action in No. Africa

Increasing evidence that Gen. Henri Giraud's North Africa regime will move steadily further away from Vichy influences and ever closer to the democratic methods of the United Nations was seen in the high commissioner's summary action in repudiating all Petain decrees relating to African colonial affairs and liquidating the entire government bureau concerned with restrictions on Jews.

"A decree signed in Vichy has no effect in North Africa," was Giraud's terse explanation. "The German occupation interrupted the free exercise of national sovereignty."

General Giraud's action followed that of Governor General Nogues of French Morocco reinstating government workers dismissed under Vichy's orders and repealing the ban on listening to certain foreign broadcasts. In repealing the Vichy anti-Semitic decrees, High Commissioner Giraud ordered General Bounty, who dealt with Jewish problems, to be removed from office.

CHINA:

Destiny's Crossroads

A 10-year reconstruction program for China, including the building of 20,000 transport planes, was proposed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in his book, "China's Destiny."

While his wife, Madame Chiang, was busy winning friends for China on her visit to the United States, the Generalissimo disclosed plans calling for 2,460,000 graduates from various grades of technical schools to aid in developing postwar China.

Hitler in Mental Decline? Close Observers Say Yes

Reliable Reports Indicate Fuehrer Subject to Uncontrolled Emotions; German Physician Believes He Will Have Mental 'Explosion.'

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Where is Hitler?

That question can't be answered with any certainty at this writing and nobody seems to care. For more than a month, the communications from the German High Command have not borne the Fuehrer's signature. The anniversaries of two of the great events in Nazi history have come and gone, the celebrations were held with very little display in comparison with other years and entirely without appearance of the No. 1 Nazi himself. Hitler has made no public appearance for months.

It is true that communications supposedly from the Fuehrer have been made public but always through a second party, notably the speech on the anniversary of the founding of the National Socialist party. The set excuse is that Hitler is with his troops in the Russian front. But at the rate that front is moving these days, it is doubtful if he is very near it. It is quite possible that he is elsewhere or even nowhere but the interesting thing is that this man, who has managed to turn the world upside down, does not seem at all essential to the great political and military machine he has built up. It may be functioning without him and this would seem to indicate that if he is not dead, but should suddenly die, it wouldn't make much difference.

Some time ago, a report received from underground sources was received in London. It said that "Hitler either has been given an ultimatum by his generals, who pointed out his military blunders, or he is suffering from one of his hysterical fits and is in ill health as a result of his Russian reverses."

Recent Developments

What about these fits? They are no fiction but well-authenticated events. Before several witnesses he has frequently burst into tears, and in other ways given vent to utterly uncontrolled emotions. But these fits are of less importance than certain other likewise well-substantiated but not widely known developments which have taken place within the last year or two.

There are several stories which I heard from the lips of a man who has closely watched Hitler's career from its earliest beginning. The man is Fred Oechsner, a former colleague of mine. In fact, I was instrumental in having him sent to Berlin as correspondent for the Consolidated Press just about the time Hitler was beginning his political career.

Long before anybody else took Hitler seriously, Oechsner wrote to me: "This man is some day going to be the bull in Europe's china shop." Oechsner, who is now in Washington, told me the following story which he also repeats in his excellent book, "This Is the Enemy."

As you know, Hitler was always a teetotaler. He never drank anything but some very weak beer especially brewed for him and he only took sips of this pale beverage.

Recently his habits changed.

"Persons who visited him at his headquarters early in the winter told me," Oechsner says, "that he was becoming grave and irritable and that it was not uncommon for him on a cold night to drink three or four glasses of grog. He also took occasional drinks of a Bavarian liquor called Enzian which is not unlike gin."

Now Oechsner is an exceedingly reliable reporter and when he says the Fuehrer finished three grogs in an evening, I believe it—also I believe that a man unused to taking alcohol must have been higher than Berchtesgaden when he went to bed.

Oechsner also said: "There is a German physician of international repute who believes that some day Hitler will have a brain disturbance of a serious nature. This physician has treated Hitler since 1921 and knows his physical condition as well as his personal life. It is his opinion that Hitler is an outstanding example of a half-trained, half-educated person with a phenomenal talent for absorbing and co-ordinating information and detail gleaned from other sources. This attention to detail and pattern, he says, is obvious in Hitler's drawings, in his speeches, his military campaigns. It is a phenomenal mental power but some day it is going to explode."

Suicide the End?

Without revealing the source, I have heard the opinion expressed by a man who has seen and met with Hitler many times and is exceedingly familiar with his life, that it is quite possible that a mental decline has started which, he believes, may end in suicide.

On my own score, I may say that when I heard Hitler deliver his famous speech at the start of the war in 1939 in which he said that he was going to the front and would lead Germany to victory, that he would not take off his uniform until this had been achieved, and in the next breath named his successors, I thought he was preparing for suicide.

I doubt if he is now dead. He may not even be ill but the thing is, there has been no report of any public appearance for a long time.

That, of course, is hearsay evidence—or long-distance diagnosis but what Oechsner reports comes from first-hand authority.

So Hitler may already be in a padded cell—and nobody seems to care!

Fourth Term— Does FDR Want It?

Will the President run for a Fourth Term?

A number of cross currents are definitely in motion, some directly moving toward an attempt to draft Mr. Roosevelt as candidate in '44; some which at present seem to be carrying him in the opposite direction.

One thing that many people fail to realize is the fact that when the precedent against a man serving in the White House for more than two terms was broken, the first olive was out of the bottle and the chief obstacle to a fourth term was removed. As has been pointed out, the American people never before wanted a man for a third term candidate, although twice before candidates would have made the attempt —Grant and Theodore Roosevelt.

When the first whispers for a possible third term for Franklin Roosevelt were heard, I talked to a seasoned political observer. He said: the President doesn't want to run again but he will be persuaded to by his friends.

I make bold to state at this juncture that exactly the same statement can be made today with one modification: The President doesn't want to run for a fourth term but his friends are trying to persuade him to.

I feel sure that the President does not want to run again. I do believe he passionately desires to preside at the peace table. But some of his friends have a different view. As Joseph Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, once remarked about the White House: "It's a nice boarding house, you hate like the dickens to move out."

Friends' Demands

Two things are acting in favor of persuading the President: One, this earnest and insistent demand of his "friends" who don't want "to move out" and some of whom honestly believe that it would be for the general good if the President stayed on. Their arguments are many.

The second factor and the one which could elect Mr. Roosevelt for a fourth term, if he does run again, can be expressed in the well-known slogan, "Don't swap horses while crossing a stream." It is the reasoning behind this homely expression which, of course, provides the most persuasive argument to any President.

On the other hand, if by 1944 Hitler has been defeated, the President might feel that he could serve even better at the peace table if he were not the head of a political party, if he were not bound by certain domestic policies which the head of an administration must administer with one eye on the votes in the next election.

I believe that if the President felt positively that he would be allowed to play the principal role in the peace-making, even though someone else were in the White House (perhaps a Republican), or if he felt that as President, he would be less effective as a peacemaker, he would not consider a fourth term.

Sam Was Entirely for Peace and Harmony

It was the weekly meeting of the colored "Sons of I Will Arise Society." At the end of the usual business, a loud voice yelled from the back of the hall: "Mistah Chayman, Ah makes a motion dat Sam Jackson am a low-down, sneaking mis'rable chicken thief."

Down in the front a little fellow leaped to his feet.

"Who makes dat motion dat Ah'm a low-down, sneaking mis'rable chicken thief?" he cried, glaring round the room.

A huge, scar faced Negro jumped up.

"Ah makes da motion," he said, menacingly.

"Mister Chayman," said Sam, quickly, "Ah seconds dat motion."

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

CHICAGO: With an abundance of billing and cooing, 5,605 fast-flying doves were drafted in Chicago for the army, reducing the city's peacetime pigeon population by one-sixth. The war first drafted a big group of racing pigeons from the city a year ago. These traditional symbols of peace were reported in action from Bataan to Britain, according to a report received here.

WASHINGTON: How Lieut. Chester W. Nimitz Jr., son of the Pacific admiral, won the silver star medal was disclosed in a navy report. The citation made public here says young Nimitz served with "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity" as torpedo and gunnery officer and later as executive officer on two war patrols. During a third patrol near Java, he also won distinction.

Twenty-two states have entered into co-operative arrangements with the Forest Service to develop a forest products marketing service for farmers.

Forester to Help Farmers Who Have Timber to Market

To advise with farmers who have timber to sell, the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station announces that H. Bennett, a forester, is now at the Western Kentucky Experiment Substation at Princeton, where he will work with farmers owning about 300,000 acres of timber land in Caldwell, Hopkins, Lyon, Muhlenberg and Trigg counties.

About two-thirds of the lumber used in army camp construction and in other war work east of the Mississippi river is coming from farm woods. Taking advantage of the good market, large numbers of Kentucky farmers are cutting and selling timber at this time.

More than a third of all the saw mills in Kentucky are located in the above five counties. This area has a well advanced second growth of timber which should yield a good income to farmers now and in the future, if well managed. Timber cutting is being done at an alarming rate over much of Kentucky, and concern has been expressed that misuse of timber may create a lumber shortage.

An effort is being made to help farmers select the trees that should be cut now and to leave trees that need to grow more in order to make good lumber. In this way farmers will make more money from their woods and a supply of lumber will be assured for the future. Farmers also are being urged to plant trees, and to replace those cut, on certain types of land that tend to wash badly.

Mr. Bennett, who is being employed cooperatively by the Kentucky Experiment Station and the United States Forest Service, will add to the services of W. E. Jackson, Jr., extension forester of the State college of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Poultry raisers in Elliott county will increase production at least 25 per cent this year, some by using electricity in their laying houses.

When the home of Mrs. Shirley Cobb in Jessamine county was destroyed by fire, homemakers contributed 600 qts. to replace the amount destroyed.

Checking Livestock Losses Would Supply Meat Needed in War

In an appeal to farmers to give better care to their stock, the Department of Animal Pathology at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station indicates that the extra meat needed in the war could be supplied by saving animals that die from preventable causes. The statement follows:

To supply the meat and other animal products estimated to be needed for the war and civilian use, it is only necessary to prevent the loss of animals that die from preventable conditions. In Kentucky many animals die annually from infectious diseases for which there are reliable methods of immunization. Two examples are hogs from hog-cholera and cattle from blackleg. If the animals that die from preventable causes were saved no material increase in the number of breeding animals now on farms would be necessary.

Every pig in Kentucky should be vaccinated against cholera one week after weaning, and every calf against blackleg at 4 to 6 months of age.

Shoats, calves, colts, lambs, and ewes especially should be kept free of parasites of the digestive tract. Pigs should be wormed after they are weaned. Lambs not sold by June 15 to July 1 should be treated for stomach and nodular worms. All sheep should be treated for worms from one to three times a year. Phenothiazine is the best treatment to use. Provide clean pastures for young animals and their mothers. This means pasture that was not used for that species of animal during the past year, or better two years.

Select healthy and prolific animals for breeders. Make sure that they have normal mammary glands. Feed the sow, cow, and ewe well. It will result in better and healthier offspring and the dam will produce more milk. Milk is the best and cheapest feed for calves, pigs and lambs.

Undernourishment causes animals to be more susceptable to all diseases and parasites. Three common mistakes made in the feeding of farm animals are: They do not get enough to eat; an adequate amount of clean water is not supplied, and they do not have free access to common salt.

Sanitation is an important part of any disease preventive program. By sanitation is meant cleanliness, not the spraying of filthy materials in stable, pens and yards with a commercial disinfectant. Stables pens and yards used continually for animals become badly contaminated with disease-producing bacteria, protozoa and parasites. It is especially essential to protect young animals from all sources of filth. Water should be clean and free of surface drainage. The feed, hay and grain should be fed in racks and mangers so constructed as to prevent contamination with animal excreta and other filthy disease bearing material. Good ventilation, clean barns, pens, yards and pasture, fresh water and adequate feeding will do much to keep animals healthy. Every possible precaution should be taken to prevent exposure of healthy flocks and herds to other animals that may be carriers of infective agents and parasites.

Our policy should be vaccination for the prevention of those diseases for which there are reliable vaccines; strict cleanliness for the so-called filth diseases; treatment of those diseases for which effective treatments are available; eradication of all diseases for which there is no cure, either vaccinal or medicinal; the prevention of parasites, and treatment as far as possible, of those parasitisms for which there is a reliable agent; better care of young animals, especially from birth to weaning time.

Many nutritional diseases can be avoided by feeding the proper amount and kind of available natural hay and grain.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

It's getting about that time of year when the weather often slows down egg production.

Well, just remember Dr. Hess Poultry Pan-a-min stimulates appetite and urges the hen to eat more feed. And that's what it takes in cold weather to help keep up egg production.

To show you what I mean—hens on the Research Farm getting Pan-a-min lay as many as 23 more eggs per bird per year. Now that's a nice egg bonus. See if Pan-a-min won't give that same bonus to you.

Yours truly,
Conrad Hardware, Walton, Ky.

"You'll come back alright, Bob. But you remind me of that poll made among service men. A big national magazine interviewed 10,000 boys at Y.M.C.A. and U.S.O. and Salvation Army places—asked them what duties the American public had during the War. And answer No. 1 was 'to make sure that all soldiers can get jobs when they come home'."

"That's a good point, Judge. Do you remember any others?"

"Yes, Bob, one of the most important points was that we prevent the drys from putting prohibition over on the boys while they're away."

"Well, I agree with that, too. I don't drink, but I don't see how you can dictate to people about personal things like that, and still claim you live in a Democracy. To me, that's just plain un-American."

THIS WEEK ON THE HOME FRONT

What's the war going to do to the Monday morning wash day in the old homestead? Well, the washing will go on in just about the way it always has; there will be a few changes, but not very many.

The armed forces are going to get most of the $46,000,000 worth of commercial laundry machinery that will be produced this year—and when you consider that they are going to buy 48 million pairs of socks in the next 6 months, you can see that they need the equipment.

There won't be any new washing machines or mangles this year, but there will be repair parts for the old machines and there will always be a wash board, although it may not be of metal. Glass now faces many a wash board.

Hand wringers have changed, but the new ones, with only 9 lbs. of metal in them still separate the clothing from the water. Galvanized and painted metal water pails and wash tubs are being released and manufacture of them is on the up-grade again.

Borax, washing soda, and sal-soda are still available for softening hard water, the soap supply probably will be ample, and sunlight will still whiten fabrics if bleaches are found not to be so readily obtainable. Several types of bluing are in unrestricted production. Starch is available in as large quantities as ever.

Clothes lines are still to be had, but pulleys will be of wood. Ironing boards and ironing board covers are in stock; cotton padding is abundant.

The supply of new electric irons is diminished and the old fashioned irons are coming back.

Late last week, the secretary of agriculture authorized the OPA to institute rationing of meats, edible fats and oils (including butter), cheese and canned fish on or before April 1st.

Thus the people take another step forward in assuring a fair distribution of the available food supply. The per-capita supply of these foods in 1943 will be just about that of the period from 1935 through 1939. Weekly rations of meat for individual consumers is expected to be in the vicinity of 2 pounds weekly—more or less—to start.

ot rationed are fresh and frozen fish, poultry and game, unblended olive oil, soft or perishable cheeses.

Reserve automobiles, trucks and trailers may not be stripped to supply parts for emergency use.

WPB hopes that 95 million gross tons of ore can be brought down the Great Lakes this season. This is about 3 million more tons than moved in last year's record-breaking season.

Rationing Calendar

PROCESSED FOODS: Blue A, B, C Stamps good through March 31; COFFEE: Stamp 25 good through March 21; SUGAR: Stamp 12 good for 5 pounds, good through May 31; SHOES: Stamp 17 good for one pair through June 15, (certain shoes not rationed); GASOLINE: No. 4 stamps in A-book good through March 21; TIRES: A-book holders must have tires inspected by March 31 (grade F recapping now unrationed); FUEL OIL: Coupon 4 good through April 6. Coupon 5 now valid.

The inland waterways need more sailors.

American women will save an estimated $50,000,000 a year in their hosiery bill as a resuut of reductions from 5 to 40 cents per pair for rayon stockings, announced by the OPA. For instance, 45-gauge, full-fashioned type rayons now selling at $1 and $1.15 a pair, will be sold after April 15 at from 81 to 92 cents a pair.

Regional OPA offices may adjust the maximum price of any seller of fresh lettuce, spinach, carrots, green beans, snap beans, tomatoes and cabbage when the ceiling is higher or lower than others generally prevailing in the area and likely to disrupt normal distributio.

The OPA is going to stop certain wholesalers who have used various dodges to pay creameries higher prices for butter than the legal ceiling permitted.

Peas, beans and lentils when bought exclusively for use as seed are exempt from the processed foods rationing program and do not require point stamps or ration certificates, provided they are legally labelled as seeds, the OPA has decided.

Shark steaks are being added to the nation's menu. The soupfin shark is the victim, and the keppered flesh, especially, has a delicate flavor not unlike that of smoked salmon. The steaks are so good that the demand for them has driven the Seattle price from 4½ cents a pound dressed, to 8 cents a pound.

The Victory Hour, official radio progam of the High School Victory Corps, is on the air Tuesdays at 3 P. M., EWT, over more than 100 Blue Network stations. Next week's program (March 23) is entitled "A Victory Corps in Action".

Hotel operators and owners are feeling the pinch of manpower and material shortages to such an extent that WPB is studing plans to assure continued operation of the country's hotels for the duration without curtailing essential services.

Landlords of tourist cabins, tuto courts, cabin camps and similar establishments are now required to offer such living accomodations at monthly rates in addition to daily and weekly rates, OPA expects this action to correct the existing situation whereby defense workers who use the cabins as their permanent homes are paying rent many times greater than the maximum rents for comparable dwelling units.

Further clarification of the OPA shoe ration order reveals that the following types of shoes are not rationed: sueded sheepskin or kipskin uppers; men's house slippers with leather soles; women's house slippers with fabric uppers; leather-topped lumberman's 'overs'.

More than 42,317,000 copies of information publications and press releases of the federal government have been eliminated in adjusting government information operations to wartime needs.

The OPA denies a widespread report that it has placed a ban on civic club luncheon meetings and club suppers at which food is served.

Red Cross Needs $125,000,000 To Finance Wartime Program

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Faced with the greatest wartime program in history, the American Red Cross will launch its 1943 War Fund appeal for $125,000,000 on March 1, Chairman Norman H. Davis has announced.

Pointing out that the bulk of the fund will be used to expand Red Cross services to the men of the armed forces and their families, Chairman Davis urged every American man and woman to contribute to the fund.

With the approval of President Roosevelt, who also is President of the American Red Cross, the month of March is being observed as Red Cross Month. Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is chairman of the Red Cross 1943 War Fund.

"Red Cross services to our armed forces and to the needs of distressed civilians on the battle and home fronts can be supplied only by great expenditures and sacrifices," Chairman Davis said. "We are exerting our utmost efforts to accomplish these tasks with the least possible drain upon the resources of the people in funds, time and energy. We must never falter in our determination to meet these definite obligations. The Red Cross is confident that all our people will be generous in their support of the 1943 War Fund."

More than 65 percent of the fund received by the national organization will be devoted to meeting Red Cross responsibilities to the armed forces. These include the Red Cross overseas club program, recreation and hospital program, the stationing of field directors at all foreign and domestic military camps and bases, the huge surgical dressing production program, and the blood plasma project which recently was expanded to a total of 4,000,000 pints at the request of the Army and Navy.

Chairman Davis pointed out that the 1943 program will be vastly greater than the accomplishments of last year, in which the Red Cross aided millions of war victims through its foreign war relief program; gave aid to thousands of prisoners of war; collected 1,500,000 pints of blood for the armed forces; produced 520,000,000 surgical dressings, and aided more than 1,500,000 servicemen and their families.

The $125,000,000 quota, he said, will finance the local, national and international work of the Red Cross for the entire year, barring unforeseen emergencies.

"Volts For Victory" Is War Slogan of State's 4-H Electrical Wizards.

With "Volts for Victory" as their war slogan, 4-H Club boys and girls in Kentucky and nearly all other States are making electricity do every possible practical job in their homes and on the farms to offset labor shortage, and help meet the urgent need for record food production this year.

Among the 4-H'ers' applications of electricity to produce, as well as to conserve, more food are electrically-lighted henhouses to stimulate egg output, and electric milkers, milk churners, and coolers; chick, lamb, and pig brooders; hotbeds for increasing production of fresh vegetables, and appliances for better canning methods.

Many of the State's club members are participating in the current National 4-H Rural Electrification activity, in which they develop an understanding of electricity and its efficient use for light, heat and power in rural areas. Awards provided by Westinghouse for outstanding records of electrical achievements include medals to county winners, an all-expense trip to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago to each State champion, and $200 college scholarships to six winners of national honors.

Present enrollment figures indicate that upward of 15,000 club members will participate in this activity, which is conducted in conjunction with nearly all 4-H projects under the direction of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, State Agricultural Colleges, and County Extension Agents.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

Nobody's yelling "too little and too late" about what's being produced in the feedlot. Everybody knows the farmer is turning out fighting food even if there is a big labor shortage.

Facts is, though, that still more and more meat is needed and I want to make a sugestion about your hogs. I'm going to suggest, if you're not already doing it, that you give them Dr. Hess Hog Special. You see, Research Farm hogs getting Hog Special gain faster and on as much as a third less supplement and a tenth less corn.

I also hope you're worming your hogs with PTZ, another mighty fine Dr. Hess Product.

Yours truly,
Conrad Hardware. Walton, Ky.

United States' Purchase of Autos Would Aid Taxpayers, Says Ickes.

Civilian automobiles immobilized because of gasoline rationing would be purchased by the Government to enable the owners to use the proceeds of such sales to pay their income taxes, according to a suggestion made by Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior and Petroleum Co-ordinator for National Defense, Mr. Ickes believes that such a plan would ease the strain on taxpayers' budgets and would enable the Government to accumulate cars and rubber tires for war purposes.

Mr. Ickes suggestion is contained in an article in the April issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine in which he analyzes the current oil crisis.

"Incidentally," writes Mr. Ickes, "I have been wondering if perhaps the Government might not make some arrangement for the purchase of those cars which are forced into retirement, paying the owners the current Blue Book value thereof instead of the low prices prevailing today in the second-hand market. Payment might be made in the form of some Treasury certificate that would be accepted on account of income taxes.

"Many car owners this year will be paying income taxes for the first time. When March 15th turns up on the calender many may not know where to find the money to meet their obligations to the Government. In such contingency an unusable automobile, which is a considerable capital asset to most owners, would come in handy. The strain on the domestic budget would be lessened; thee Treasury would get its money, and the Government would have an accumulation of cars and rubber tires for war purposes."

FARM FOOD PRODUCTION SURVEY BEING MADE

Farmers Intentions for 1943 Studied.

Recent farm survey of Farm Plans in the food production program for Kenton county show an increase for 1943 over 1942 in the following; Hogs, Milk Cows, Sheep, Laying Hens, Potatoes for Market, Commercial Vegetables.

Decrease in Beef Cattle Indicated

The survey also shows there will be a considerable decrease in beef cattle produced in 1943 as compared to 1942. If the intentions of the farmers food production programs can be carried out the survey indicates there should be an increase for the year 1943 over 1942 in most food products.

According to Geo. A. Eubanks, Chairman of the Kenton County Agricultural Conservation Ass'n. the survey has been conducted for the county by the County Agricultural Conservation Association Community Committee under the direction of the State Committee and the US Department of Agriculture.

The estimated percentage of increase for milk cows for 1943 over 1942 according to the survey is 16%; the estimated production of hogs for 1943 over 1942 is 16%; the estimated production of sheep for 1943 over 1942 is 10%; the estimated acreage production of potatoes for market for 1943 over 1942 is 12½%; the estimated acreage production of commercial vegetables for 1943 show an increase of 12½% for 1943 over 1942.

Problems That Will Affect Production Plans

There are a number of factors that will determine whether or not this intended Food Production Program can be carried out in 1943. The farm labor situation, extreme shortage of skilled farm labor on most farms; the limited amount of new farm machinery which is available; the shortage of hay and feed crops to carry out the increased livestock program.

The weather conditions are also an important factor in determining the food production program in 1943. 1942 was a much better crop season than the average and nobody can predict what kind of a season we will have in 1943.

Castor Beans To Be Grown

The Department of Agriculture has also requested that other needed war crops be produced in addition to Food Crops. Kenton County has been assigned a quota of from 40 to 50 acres of castor beans which are vitally needed in the war program.

Farmers Intentions Should Meet Quota Set By State Committee

Acording to the information obtained in the survey, it appears that the quota increase in food production assigned to Kenton county will be met if the labor requirements and livestock feed requirements can be taken care of.

POULTRY POINTERS FOR MARCH
By J. E. Humphrey

Plan your poultry work now. Suppose you ask yourself these questions:

1. Have I purchased or ordered my chicks?
2. Did I place an order for 2 or more pounds of starting mash for each chick ordered?
3. Has my brooder house been repaired, cleaned and moved to new ground or a sunporch provided?
4. Have I forgotten the 4 s's—Sweeping, Scraping, Scrubbing, Spraying?
5. Have I provided one inch of fedder space for each chick for the first 4 weeks and 2 inches thereafter; also provisions for one gallon of water for each 50 chicks?
6. Is the brooder stove in working order?
7. Have I provided a pesture for the chicks to save feed and grow better pullets?

Are you getting at least 50 per cent production from your layers? If not, check the following:

1. Dispose of overly fat and broken down hens.
2. Destroy lice and mites.
3. Provide 3 inches of fedder space per bird.
4. Provide plenty of water. 100 hens will drink from 4 to 8 gals. each day. Remember that the egg is 66% water and the hen's body 55%.
5. Keep oyster shell or limestone before the birds all the time.
6. Provide plenty of well-balanced feed. Don't stop feeding a mash just as soon as the grass gets green. Uncle Sam needs more eggs. We know you will do your part in winning this war. Remember to "Keep 'em laying" so the boys can "Keep 'em flying!"

Mrs. Robert Clore of Oldham county, who has new kitchen cabinets in a newly decorated and rearranged room, did much of the work herself.

ANNOUNCEMENT:
We wish to announce that the firm of J. L. Hamilton & Son, Verona, will continue to offer their services to the public under the direction of Mrs. J. L. Hamilton & Son Their pledge; Courteous and Efficient service..

Soil Conservation District Cooperates In Emergency Program.

The Kenton County Soil Conservation District under the direction of the Board of Supervisors has expanded the service to meet the War Emergency and to reach more farmers thruout the county in addition to those farms having the regular five-year cooperative agreement with the Board. The writing of agreements has been largely referred for the Spring months in an effort to give more time to the War Emergency Program.

The Board of Supervisors consist of S. W. Durr, Chairman; Geo. A. Eubanks, vice chairman; Frank D. Cooke, secretary; and Earl F. Metcalfe, and B. F. Stambough.

In order to carry out the emergency program, the Board has recently appointed a group of farmer-aides in the various sections of the county to assist in carrying the work of the district to the farmers. This service includes assistance in making a survey towards securing more and better livestock water reservoirs, cistern filters; assistance in laying out diversion ditches, contour cultivation of row crops; using recommended practices in meadow seedings for emergency hay crops because of the loss caused by the open winter and alternate freezing and thawing weather; pasture seedings to provide more and better grass; use of ground limestone and prosphate for alfalfa and pasture; rotation grazing and supplemental pasture for the summer months.

The Farmer-aides recently appointed, and actually on the job for the work outlined under the emergency program, re Clif J. Eubanks of the Crescent Springs section, C. D. McDannold of the Independence section and George F. Ballinger of the Atwood section. Other Farmer-aides will be appointed as the work progresses.

Mr. Joe Dougherty has resigned from the Soil Conservation Service to go with the Haitian government in the West Indies. And his position in the Kenton County District has been filled by Julian M. Dyer, thru the State Soil Conservation Service, Lexington, Ky. and with the approval of the Kenton County Board of Supervisors. Mr. Dyer has been in the Service for the past 7 years in Oklahoma. He reported for duty at Independence on February 22nd as representative of the Soil Conservation Service for the Kenton County District. Mrs. Dyers and the family expect to move to Independence when the school year closes.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Six dairymen in Lawrence county sold their herds in January because of the high cost of feeds and the labor situation.

Lafayette, Russell Cave and Shelby schools in Shelby county collected 1,229 pairs of silk and nylon hose in the war effort.

Homemakers' clubs in Mason county have each chosen a club flower to grow, to build up community pride and beauty.

Mrs. Emma Dalton of the Pride Home makers' club in Union county, collected and sold nine tons of scrap iron last year.

In Christian county. 295 families reported using an average daily amount of four quarts of milk per family of four.

One hundred and ninety-eight 4-H club members in Jefferson county delivered 5,166 pounds of castor beans in the hull, grown on five acres.

C. C. Hancock of Hickman county reported that barley on land treated with phosphate is four inches higher than that on untreated land.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

You haven't time to feed and clean out the barn for a bunch of cows that are not giving every cadgummed drop of milk they can.

This makes me more insistent than I ordinarily would be that you try Dr. Hess Stock Tonic. Here's exactly why I want to try it. Cows getting Stock Tonic on the Research Farm give as much as a fourth pound more milk per pound of feed consumed.

Stock Tonic stimulates appetite and promotes better use of feed. And believe me, that's the reason right there a lot of people ought to be using it right now.

Yours truly,
Conrad Hardware, Walton, Ky.

Kidneys Must Work Well-
For You To Feel Well

84 times every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Every amateur ought to have a cold frame, if only to grow lettuce in. If seeds are sown the latter part of March there will be lettuce to eat in a few weeks, with radishes as a sort of side crop grown between the lettuce plants. When hot weather comes it will be found that lettuce grown in the cold frame will head nicely and be crisp and tender, while that grown in the open ground will mostly go to seed. This is the secret of growing good summer lettuce, and few people know it.

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Ann Lee and Cole Cody, beneficiaries under two identical wills of Old Bill Cole, were attempting to discover who fired the bullet which caused his death. Suspicion centered around Rance Waldron, who, posing as Old Bill's nephew, had taken up residence at the ranch. Trailed by Cody one night to a deserted cabin, Rance was discovered arguing with the notorious Tom Gough over the many "jobs" they had pulled. Later that night Rance left the ranch, apparently to join Gough at the deserted cabin. Cody delivered his copy of Old Bill's will to the Judge for safe keeping, and Ann gave her copy of the other identical will to Doc Joe.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XV

Young as the summer was, it was a lazily languid day by now, and both the judge and Doc Joe were inclined to a sort of dreamful ease, the horses had expended their first, early morning zest, and the homeward journey lacked the speed and dash marking its first phase, from Bald Eagle to the King Cole Ranch. Now the sun was higher and warmer, now the two old cronies were drowsy and pleasurably sentimental, their eyes heavy-lidded from last night's indulgence—and in a spot where the narrow road wound down into a cool and shady ravine both men were rudely startled when a man on horseback cut unexpectedly into the road in front of them and issued his orders. The man wore a mask improvised from a bandana handkerchief, and his voice was a strange muffled voice—he might have had pebbles in his mouth—and his few, briskly spoken words were to the effect that the Judge and Doc Joe were to stop where they were and not reach for any guns provided they carried such articles—as, naturally, both did.

"Who do you think you are," the old Judge snorted, "telling us where to head in?"

"I want everything in your pockets," he said, "and I want it quick. If you make a fuss about it I'll kill the two of you inside ten seconds."

They reached for their purses and tossed them into the dry, dusty grass alongside the road.

"There you are, Stranger," grumbled Doc Joe. "Take it."

"I said I wanted everything in your pockets," he was reminded in a voice which rankled long in his memory. "Everything you've got."

"That's all we got," roared the Judge, his hand itching to reach for the old Colt he hadn't gone without for many and many a year, but never stirring an inch toward it because he knew better.

"Get a move on, you fools! Turn your pockets out."

They strove to fumble and to hide the papers they had carried, that given Doc Joe by Ann Lee, that entrusted to the Judge by Bill Cole Cody. But the steady eyes bent upon them were too watchful.

"Everything, I tell you! Empty your pockets to your nose rags and tobacco. Everything you've got. Pitch it out and drive on—and get a move on doing it!"

Doc Joe had a pet corn, and he was apt to slaughter a man who trod on it. And certainly none knew about this corn better than did the Judge.

And now the Judge trod heavily and deliberately on Doc Joe's corn. And Doc Joe, already stung almost beyond endurance, caught the signal and was glad to have the Judge with him, and like one man the two of them went for their guns.

Well along in years they might be, but they were not the type of man whose coat tail you tread on with impunity any more than you go poking a stick at an old rattlesnake.

Actuated by the same instinctive impulse, alike not caring for their present position on the buggy seat, as they snatched at their side arms they threw themselves clear, over the wheels into the road, landing anyhow, sprawling. Doc Joe sat up and began firing at the masked rider; the Judge rested on his knees and loosed his own screaming bullets.

Their horses, left to their own device, startled by the crash of gunfire, bolted, headed straight toward the man at whose command they had been halted. He, too, was firing, rapidly yet not so rapidly as to bespeak any nerve-storm; wasting no time, yet spacing his shots coolly.

His horse started to lunge, as the frightened team almost ran him down; his bandana slipped; both Judge and Doc Joe saw who it was.

"Rance Waldron!" roared the old Judge and, his shooting skill not being quite what it had been once upon a time a long time ago, shot Waldron's horse through the throat. The beast reared and screamed and fell, pawing the air with flailing hoofs; Rance Waldron leaped clear.

A sharp cry of warning hurst from Doc Joe.

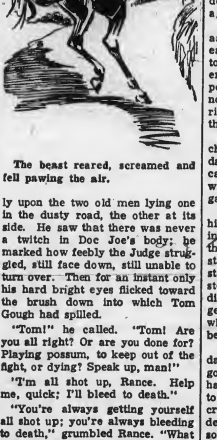
"Judge! Look out! There's another of them hid in the bushes—like when they held the stage up the other day!"

The runaway team went thundering down the road. Taking advantage of a moment of confusion, the Judge strove to scramble behind a big pine. Rance, on foot now was firing again, and bullets came whizzing from the man whom Doc Joe had glimpsed joining Rance's attack from a point of some small shelter.

The Judge got a good clear view of him and, steadying his hand and taking time for it, drove two bullets into Tom Gough's body.

The Judge had but half a dozen paces to go, to come to his big pine, but never made the short distance. Rance shot him through the upper body, and the old fellow sprawled on his face and for a moment lay there, clawing at the dust.

Doc Joe couldn't spare time off to look at him; he could only yell, "Get up, Judge! You're all right, you old fool." But he couldn't help but see how little puffs of dust arose from under the claws which his old crony's hands had become; and how the lean tall figure writhed, seeking to roll over, to get back into the fight, his strength failing him.



"We got one down!" panted Doc Joe. "We'll get that Rance varmint in a minute."

But somehow his eyes weren't as clear as they used to be; he had to blink them once. And there was a tremor in his hand, no matter how steady and firm his will. Rance, unafraid it would appear, and contemptuous, laughed at him and fired and sang out all together,

"That for you, you meddling old fool!"

Old Doc Joe spat back at him with verbal vitriol and hot lead—glad to be fighting—even though he knew the Judge had not as yet risen. Doc Joe himself surged up to his feet at last, but only in time to drop again, his weapon falling from his suddenly limp grasp, and when he fell, lying crookedly on his side facing the Judge yet failing to see him or anything else on earth, the reason for his fall was written in a bright red dripping smear upon his temple.

Rance Waldron stood stone still where he was, save for the swift, sure movement of his fingers reloading; his eyes were hard and bright and suspicious, bent shrewdly upon the two old men lying one in the dusty road, the other at its side. He saw that there was never a twitch in Doc Joe's body; he marked how feebly the Judge struggled, still face down, still unable to turn over. Then for an instant only his hard bright eyes flicked toward the brush down into which Tom Gough had spilled.

The beast reared, screamed and fell pawing the air.

"Tom!" he called. "Tom! Are you all right? Or are you done for? Playing possum, to keep out of the fight, or dying? Speak up, man!"

"I'm all shot up, Rance. Help me, quick; I'll bleed to death."

"You're always getting yourself all shot up; you're always bleeding to death," grumbled Rance. "What are you good for? Bleed and be darned to you."

He stepped along then, not toward Tom Gough but toward the two old men in the road, a fully loaded gun in each of his hands. He came first to Doc Joe, stopped and stood looking down at him, then moved on, muttering, "Deader'n a door nail, and a good job, too."

The Judge, as a final spasm of strength swept along on a final spasm of pain, sat up; he even groped for his fallen gun and found it. All the strength he could summon was needed to lift the heavy Colt .45. But there was living murder in his eyes and, though he did not speak, he cursed Rance Waldron.

Deliberately, not hastening, Rance Waldron shot him square between the eyes . . .

He turned then, still deliberate, and broke his way through the brush to where Tom Gough lay with his shoulders wedged against a rock, his hands pressed against his chest and side. There was a terrible look in Tom Gough's eyes, a look of fear and of dumb agony and of wild pleading, a hopeless pleading for there was no spark of hope in those dulling eyes.

"So you're done for, are you, Tom?" said Waldron. He didn't exactly taunt, didn't exactly smile, but there was the stamp of infinite cruelty, callous and unfeeling, in his look. He said quietly, no emotion whatever tinging his tone, "Here, I'll lend you a hand."

Heavy man though Tom Gough was, Rance Waldron lifted him easily and bore him the short distance to the roadside. There he put him down, not more than a score of paces from where the still bodies of the Judge and Doc Joe lay.

"Those two are dead, Tom," said Rance. "You'll find them tomorrow. They'll find you, too. They'll say you stuck 'em up, and you three shot it out—and all three of you cut one another down."

"For God's sake, Rance!"

Rance shot him twice through the body. It wouldn't do to have all three men shot through the head!

He emptied the pockets of both the Judge and Doc Joe. He glanced at the two wills and put them into his pocket. He gathered up the rest of their personal effects, money and watches, and dropped the lot close to Tom Gough's outflung hand. Then he went to Tom Gough's horse and rode away into the thickest of the wooded hills, leaving his own horse, not dead yet, but dying slowly, to kick its life out.

It was a sweet day, averred young Gaucho Ortega, idling homeward from Bald Eagle, as he came first of all upon the wreckage of brutal tragedy.

Only three or four miles from town, where a canyon debouched upon the valley on the farther rim of which Bald Eagle sunned itself, he saw the runaway team. He recognized the horses with a sweeping glance: Doc Joe and the Judge had had a runaway. But where were they?

Then, a couple of miles farther on, he came upon the three bodies asprawl in the road or at its edge.

"Holy Mother of God!" gasped Gaucho, and turned sick, horror struck. "Three men dead! And the old Judge and Doc Joe two of them!"

When his wits returned to him he thought straight to the point: It was less than half a dozen miles back to Bald Eagle, more than twice that distance to the ranch. So he rode back toward Bald Eagle like a dark streak through the afternoon sunshine.

And it was the same Gaucho who later brought the heavy tidings to the King Cole Ranch.

Aunt Jenifer and Ann Lee were in the patio, and when Gaucho burst upon them they stared back at him, speechless. At first, so great was the shock, that they felt nothing; they couldn't make his running words make sense, there was no reality in what he was voicing so wildly. The Judge and Doc Joe, dead? Dead! When so little a while ago—

And they didn't say a word, didn't ask a question, didn't even look at each other until Gaucho sped away to find Carl Roundtree and the other hoys and tell all that had happened. For one thing, there was nothing to ask, so complete if hurried had been the boy's details. And there was nothing to say.

Slowly their impassive faces changed and their eyes met. The dazed look had gone and in its place came horror, then grief splashed with sudden tears. Those two fine gallant old men, dead!

Ann Lee wept softly then, her face hidden in her hands, her body rocking, convulsed. Aunt Jenifer dashed the tears from her eyes and sat very straight, her head up, her eyes steady now with almost the glint of steel in them, bent upon far away distances. Presently she spoke very gently, but she did not stir from where she sat on the old green bench.

"They were two fine men, Ann darling; they were old; they had to go sometime; like Early Bill they had had their fun." Her lips thinned to bleak silence; then she added crisply, "And they killed the murderer who shot them down! That's something."

Ann was hushed, but not for long. Hope that will not down without a death struggle sprang up in her breast.

"Maybe they are not really dead!" she exclaimed excitedly. "A man can be shot, he can be badly hurt, unconscious even, and yet live!"

And she started running to the men's quarters.

She came upon a small knot of men, Cole Cody and Cal Roundtree and Porfirio and two others, grouped in a sort of circle, their heads down, their boot toes for the most part scraping in the dirt, as they listened to Gaucho's words. She screamed at them before she reached them to hurry for a doctor, to do what they could to save two lives which otherwise might be lost even while they stood here doing nothing.

Cal turned on his heel.

"I'm off to town, boys. I'll take care of things if anything's needed. Come along, Cody?"

Cody shook his head.

"Later maybe, Cal; in the buckboard, if I do come, so you better not wait."

SPEECH DEFECTS

A pupil at public school was a member of a special group preparing for scholarships. This class, of which I was a member, remained in the classroom until 5 p. m. and attended Saturday morning 9 to 12. When the results were announced this girl stood first despite the fact that she stammered so badly that she was unable to read in front of the class. As she was very brilliant I was not surprised at her beating the rest of us, but I figured she would lose so many marks in her reading that some of us might overtake her. The explanation was that when she took her reading examination she read before the teacher only and read clearly and distinctly without stammering in the slightest.

Dr. Barton

Despite the fact that school teachers knew this fact that stammerers did not stammer amid home or familiar surroundings it is only within recent years that the general public and stammerers themselves are learning that while some speech defects are due to some disturbance of the structures that control speech, most cases of stammering are due to nervousness and self consciousness.

I am writing about stammering at this time as I have at hand a handbook of the Chicago Speech Correction society. The society was organized by a group of speech correctionists in the Chicago area, its purposes and qualifications being in accordance with the standards and ethical codes of the American Speech Correction association. The purposes of the society are to foster ethical principles and practices in the field of speech correction. To this end the qualifications demanded for membership are very high.

"The speech correctionist or therapist is one whose technical training has been such as to enable him to conduct the examination, make the diagnosis (find the cause of the defect) and direct re-education of (1) individuals whose voice or speech problems call unfavorable and embarrassing attention to themselves and constitute an educational, social, or business handicap; and (2) individuals who suffer from voice or speech conditions that are abnormal to such a degree that they are able to converse with others to a very limited extent."

My thought is that as the stammerer or a sufferer with other speech defects can now be helped, he should look well to the qualifications of the speech correctionist he consults.

Why Overweights Dislike Exercise

It is estimated that about nine of every ten cases of overweight are due directly to overeating, another 5 per cent to inactivity of certain glands, and the other 5 per cent to overeating combined with lack of gland activity. This means that 95 of every 100 overweights should follow a reducing diet containing an insufficient number of calories, the extra calories really needed to do the body's work being made up from the excess fat in and on the body.

What about exercise?

If overweights realized the benefits derived from exercise, they would be more willing to take it regularly. All that most of them find is that exercise increases their appetite and so little or no weight is lost.

Why do overweights so greatly dislike exercise? Exercise means effort and there is less than the normal desire for effort in overweights. Every movement they make—walking, jogging, bending—means the lifting or carrying of much more weight than for one of normal weight. So, rather than use this severe effort, they are willing to do without some of their daily intake of food. They simply choose the lesser of two evils.

If, however, they are willing to take the exercise instead of doing without the food, they will not only use up the excess fat and so bring their figure back or nearly back to normal, but will get rid of their dislike for exercise and be more willing to take it regularly. As they grow lighter and more "limber," they may actually develop a desire for exercise.

Remember, exercise is useful in reducing weight before middle age. After middle age, cutting down on food is the safest method.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Do nerves cause shortness of breath; if not, what is the cause?

A.—"Nerves" can cause shortness of breath. Other causes are: Blocked nose, too much acid food; heart muscle getting weak.

Q.—What type drug is hyoscyamus and what are its uses?

A.—Hyoscyamus belongs to the belladonna group. It is used as a "quieting" drug and to relax tight nerves and muscles. Used in bronchitis also.

OUR LORD'S INTERCESSORY PRAYER

LESSON TEXT—John 17:1-8, 16-26.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are."—John 17:11.

There are some times and places so sacred that one is instinctively hushed into reverent devotion. When Christ prayed in holy intercession (as recorded in John 17) on the night before His suffering His disciples must have been lifted into the very presence of the Eternal One. It was a holy experience.

He prayed for Himself, but even more did He pray for His believing followers. To know that someone is praying for us is indeed an anchor in a time of storm, a strong help in the hour of conflict or of service for Christ.

But to know that the Master prayed for you and me—that is enough to send us, like the disciples of old, out to face an unbelieving world in His conquering name. He prayed for Himself—and He prayed for me!

I. He Prayed for Himself (vv. 1-8).

He looked up and said: "Father," and then He was ready to pray. So do we when He to God that there was just this simple recognition of their communion. In Christ are we not as close as He?

What did Jesus ask for Himself? At first thought it seems a little unusual that He asked

1. For Recognition of His Divine Glory (vv. 1-5).

Why would He who had just given the disciples an example of and an admonition to humility desire to have His glory manifested? Be sure it was not a matter of selfish pride. He had finished His work (for He counted redemption as complete throughout His prayer), and now the glory which He laid down when He came to earth (Phil. 2:6-8) was to be regained.

He wants man to see Him now not only as the compassionate Son of man, but the glorious Son of God, able to save. It is right that the glory of Christ should be magnified and recognized by the whole creation. He is worthy!

2. For the Manifestation of His Grace (vv. 6-8).

The Father had given Christ the heart devotion of those who believed in Him. Note that their faith rested on the name of God (v. 6), and upon His Word which had come to them and to us through Christ.

He recognized their position and standing in Him and established it before God and man. He then prayed for them (read vv. 9-17) that they might be kept in an evil world as a testimony to the grace and power of God in the human heart.

This leads to His intercession for all believers.

II. He Prayed for All Believers (vv. 18-22).

Christians are not simply the avowed adherents to a particular form of belief, they are "sent" ones. As the Father sent Him into the world, "even so send I them into the world," said Christ.

Christ has gone to be with the Father, but He has left those who believe in Him as His witnesses, His representatives. For this they need holiness. He prayed:

1. For Their Consecration (vv. 18, 19).

For their sakes He consecrated Himself. Surely if He needed it, we do far more. It is not only His will for us, but His prayer. How wonderfully that prayer was answered we see as we look back over the intervening 19 centuries, from His immediate disciples on through the martyrs, the missionary pioneers of all ages, the faithful preachers and teachers of the gospel, yes and "livers" of the gospel too. He knew, He prayed, God answered. Are you in that blessed host of consecrated believers?

2. For Their Unity and Glory (vv. 20-26).

There is a refreshing simplicity about the Christian faith which is utterly different from all the complications which man has prepared and superimposed upon it. Essentially it is a matter of God having sent His Son into the world to be the Redeemer of men. He and the Father are one, He and His followers are one, and so we are all one. We who today believe are included (read vv. 20-23).

This is an inward unity of the Spirit, not an outward union of organizations. The answer to our difficulty is not the dissolution of denominations (although there do seem to be far too many subdivisions, too), but the uniting of all groups in a oneness of love and devotion to Christ, and a united emphasis on the gospel.

There is something more here. This unity puts Christ's followers into the place where His glory may be revealed in and upon them. It is His prayer that we should behold in our Saviour the glory which God had given Him because He loved Him before the foundation of the world.

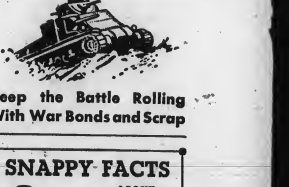
Confirming Jap's Death



The Japanese military authorities usually announce that a soldier or sailor is dead when he is only reported as missing and his fate is unknown, because his family would "lose face" if he had allowed himself to be captured. Often the authorities also send a sealed urn of ashes to the family to "confirm" his death.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Akron, Ohio had its beginning as the WORLD'S RUBBER MANUFACTURING CAPITAL in 1870 when its first rubber plant was started by Dr. B. F. Goodrich.
The switching of Dakar, French West Africa, to the side of the United Nations meant the establishment for the Allies of an important port for the shipment of crude rubber, among other important war essentials.
Atabrine, the chemist's answer to the war time shortage of quinine, is serving to stop up the galleries of rubber-like tissue mosquito-infected lungs of malaria. Here is a case of a synthetic product being used to stimulate the gathering of a natural product that is rapidly being replaced by synthetics in the United States.
Ordinary tires are now cured in molds at factories in 40 to 50 minutes. Before organic accelerators were developed by B. F. Goodrich it took about five hours to vulcanize a tire.

Make Slip Covers for That Unusual Chair

THIS cover was a twofold conservation measure in the most literal sense. Its purpose was not to cover shabby upholstery but to protect handsome damask from everyday wear and tear, in a household where there were children. The substantial striped cotton material chosen harmonizes perfectly with the rather elegant lines of the chair frame.

If you have an especially difficult chair to cover, you will save time by fitting a muslin pattern first. Then you can snip until it fits perfectly around arms and other supports and, if you make a mistake in the pattern just stitch a patch over it and start over again. Before removing the pattern from the chair, plan the openings so that they will lap neatly and be sure they are long enough. In the finished cover either bindings or facings may be used for irregular edges.

ENDING ABSENTEEISM

Undersecretary of War Patterson's labor advisers have a one-point program for ending absenteeism in war plants. Here is the one point:

Communities should adjust themselves to the hours of the factories. Stores, banks, doctors, lawyers, plus other services should be available not merely for one shift of workers but for all shifts.

At present workers on the swing shift, beginning at midnight, find themselves out of gear with the life of the community. The greatest absenteeism is among workers on the odd shifts, and can be attributed not to indifference to winning the war but to the inconvenience of trying to live and buy food and get Johnny to the doctor, while the swing shift turns night into day.

Absenteeism is higher among women than men, which may mean nothing more than trouble with the ration board. A woman will take a day off from the factory because she has to register for canned foods, or because a child is sick in the family, or because she hasn't had time to buy a new dress at the store.

Remedy for this is nothing less than two or three shifts on the part of the services that serve the workers. The ration board, it is suggested, should come to the factory.

In many cases, war department advisers say, absenteeism is caused not by loafing but by overwork. In certain machine-tool areas, such as New England, men have been working 50 and 56 hours a week for years. They are simply exhausted.

Incidentally, this factor is the principal cause of absenteeism in Germany, where workers are worn down by unremitting labor and long hours.

Note: There is little sympathy in Undersecretary Patterson's office for the Rickenbacker crusade against labor. It is regarded as useless and unsound to try to appeal to workers over their leaders.

NO RUSSIAN HURRAHS

American observers in Russia report that the public is not throwing its red cap in the air over current military successes. The reaction is not much different, in fact, from the reaction to losses.

"The mood of the Russian people," says one report, "hasn't changed much since last summer when they were being driven back to the Volga. Nor has it changed much from the years of peace."

It is explained that Russians have become accustomed to tumult and personal danger. For 25 years they have lived in an atmosphere of revolution, purges, and starvation. War has brought no sudden shock to them as to us.

Even in the face of the terrific losses Russia has suffered in this war, the losses forced upon Russia by her own government ten years ago remain almost unsurpassed. When the Soviet government was imposing on the people, the unwelcome system of collective farming, farmers were denied seed for planting, and a vast number of people, estimated between two and five million, starved to death.

The Russians are stolid, taking defeat or victory in their stride.

SPANISH DAGGER AT U. S. BACK

Here is the lowdown on the visit of Franco's special representative, ex-Spanish Foreign Minister Beigbeder, to this country.

Franco's regular representative, Ambassador Juan Cardenas, has been sending him what he wanted to hear, rather than the truth about the way the American people have put their hearts into the war. Cardenas has emphasized the clash of personalities and inefficiency of war production which get into the headlines but is not the general rule.

When U. S. officials learned of this, they conceived the idea of bringing a special Franco envoy to the U. S. A. to get the real picture. Actually it was the war department, not the state department, which hatched the inspiration and which is taking him on a tour of war plants and army posts to drink in the real spirit of the war effort.

Note: Many high-up officials here believe Franco is an opportunist who, regardless of pledges, will jump whichever way he sees the war is going in the spring. He could, if he wished, plunge a dagger into the back of U. S. forces in North Africa. Beigbeder has a background of friendship for the United States.

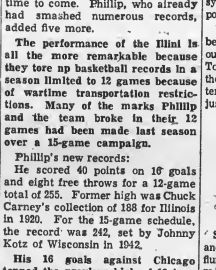
SPEAKING of SPORTS

by Col. McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



MIDWEST sports writers ran completely out of adjectives recently when the University of Illinois basketball team rearranged Western conference records to their own liking.

The "Whiz Kids" from Illinois left little doubt that they comprise the greatest basketball aggregation not only in the extremely basketball-conscious Midwest but possibly in the nation.

Keepers of Big Ten conference records were kept busy for days cutting new stencils for the books. Every important scoring mark compiled since the Western conference began official play in 1906 was boosted to new all-time heights by the more than terrific Illini and their amazing forward, Andy Phillip.

New Targets

When Illinois beat Chicago 92 to 25 in their final conference game, they blasted 11 records, sweeping the platter clean and establishing a set of standards which probably will defy conference cagers for a long time to come. Phillip, who already had smashed numerous records, added five more.

The performance of the Illini is all the more remarkable because they tore up basketball records in a season limited to 12 games because of wartime transportation restrictions. Many of the marks Phillip and the team broke in their 12 games had been made last season over a 15-game campaign.

Phillip's new records:

He scored 40 points on 16 goals and eight free throws for a 12-game total of 255. Former high was Chuck Carney's collection of 188 for Illinois in 1920. For the 15-game schedule, the record was 242, set by Johnny Kotz of Wisconsin in 1942.

His 16 goals against Chicago topped the previous high of 13 in a single game.

His 40 points erased Bill Hapac's 34-point record in a single conference game, set in 1940 against Minnesota.

Two-Year Total

He broke Illinois' three-year record, set in 1920-21-22 by Carney, 696 points. Phillip compiled a two-year total of 414.

In 12 games Phillip broke Kotz's field goal record for a 15-game schedule. The Wisconsin star had 95 last year and Phillip boosted his total to 111.

Against Chicago Andy made more field goals than any other player ever made before in the Big Ten. He made 16 and eight free throws. Only five men had ever been able to make as many as 13 baskets before.

Team records were:

The "Whiz Kids" broke their own record for field goals in a single game, 38 against Northwestern, by plumping in 41 against Chicago's Maroons.

The Illini total of 755 points for a season topped the old mark of 721 established by Iowa last year in 15 games.

The 92 points against Chicago was six better than the mark set a few days previously against Northwestern.

Illinois' 325 field goals for a season shattered Indiana's 288 mark set last year in 15 games.

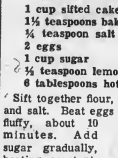
Bottleneck

In fact, of the long list of scoring records, both team and individual, the only one that Illinois failed to crack in 1943 is the one which reads: Most points one game—two teams. And the only reason they failed to crack that was the fact that their opponents weren't able to co-operate.

As it was, they missed tying it only by two points in their 86-44 rout of Northwestern when the total score read 130. The record is 132.

Just to make it unanimous, the final game saw the Maroons from Chicago drop their 39th consecutive conference game, a mark they have been shattering every time they played a game.

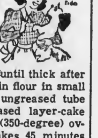
In that particular game, Phillip had 20 points at half time when the Illini led, 40 to 17. Seven minutes of the game remained when he shattered the individual single game scoring record.



Today's Cake Fixings Are Simple, Food Saving
(See Recipes Below)

Bake Your Own!

Those of you who have chosen homemaking as a career can set aside a half day for baking your own goodies right in your own oven. There are few things nicer than coming into a kitchen full of busy bustling, testing the cake, plumping fat loaves of bread on racks to cool, or packing cookies in fresh wax paper for pantry shelves—for those fine boys in the service!



When sugar rationing first came into the picture, most of us feared that it would not allow enough for home baking needs, but we have found ways to make sugar stretch. Or, perhaps we should say, corn syrups and honey to make baking possible.

With eggs up in price and fats becoming scarce, we have changed our recipes to fill these needs, too! Today's recipes may not call for the quantity of materials that yesterday's did, but they can make just as tempting a product.

Hot Water Sponge Cake.
(Makes 2 8-inch layers)
1 cup sifted cake flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon lemon juice
6 tablespoons hot water

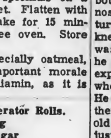
Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Beat eggs until thick and fluffy, about 10 minutes. Add sugar gradually, beating constantly until thick enough to hold a soft peak. Beat in lemon juice, add hot water, and beat until thick after each addition. Fold in flour in small amounts. Bake in ungreased tube pan or lightly greased layer-cake pans in a moderate (350-degree) oven. A tube cake takes 45 minutes to bake, layer cakes 25 to 30 minutes.

Ever tried a fragrant gingerbread baked in a ring? The slices can be fairly thin and the cake will really go far! Or, you can fill the center with apple sauce and serve as a dessert!

Gingerbread Ring.
1 cup molasses
1 cup sour milk
2½ cups sifted flour
1¾ teaspoons baking soda
2 teaspoons ginger
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg, well beaten
½ cup melted shortening

Mix milk and molasses. Sift dry ingredients. Add to milk and molasses, then mix in egg and shortening and beat until smooth and creamy. Pour into a greased pan and bake in a moderate oven 30 minutes.

It might be said of this cookie that it's spice and all things nice—but you'll notice I didn't say sugar, because it uses corn syrup:



Raisin Cookies.
(Makes 50 to 60 cookies)
½ cup shortening
1 cup white corn syrup
1 egg
½ teaspoon cinnamon extract
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup apple sauce
½ cup chopped nutmeats
½ cup chopped raisins

Cream shortening with corn syrup and egg. Add flavorings. Sift dry ingredients together and add to creamed mixture. Alternate dry ingredients with apple sauce. Fold in chopped raisins and nuts. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven 15 to 18 minutes.

Who ever heard of carrots in cookies? Well, the surprise is a nice one, and the cookies are popping full of vitamins when you make:

Honey-Carrot Cookies.
(Makes 5 dozen)
2 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
2 cups quick-cooking oatmeal
1 cup raisins
1 cup chopped nutmeats
½ cup shortening
1 cup strained honey
2 eggs, well beaten
1 cup grated raw carrot

Sift dry ingredients together. Sift again. Add oatmeal, raisins and nutmeats. Mix well.

Cream shortening, add honey, creaming thoroughly. Add eggs, then carrots, beating well. Stir in dry ingredients and blend thoroughly. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased baking sheet. Flatten with a floured fork. Bake for 15 minutes in a 350-degree oven. Store only when cold.

Whole grain, especially oatmeal, is rich in that important morale vitamin, B1, or thiamin, as it is sometimes called.

Oatmeal Refrigerator Rolls.
½ cup shortening
3 tablespoons sugar
1¼ teaspoons salt
½ cup boiling water
1 cup quick-cooking oatmeal
1 cake yeast
½ cup lukewarm water
1 egg, beaten
2¾ cups all-purpose flour

Add boiling water to sugar, salt, shortening and oatmeal. Stir well. Cool to lukewarm. Soften yeast in lukewarm water, then add with beaten egg to oatmeal mixture. Stir in half of flour, add rest of flour. Place in a greased bowl. Cover with waxed paper and store in refrigerator. When needed, remove from refrigerator and form into cloverleafs in greased muffin tins. Cover and let rise in a warm place until almost double. Bake 12 to 15 minutes in a 425-degree oven.

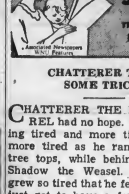
Lynn Says:

Tie a String Around Your Finger: The technique's different when you do your own vegetables—and you must keep these pointers on tap if you would get the most out of them:

Peel potatoes thinly—their mineral treasures are hidden right under that skin.



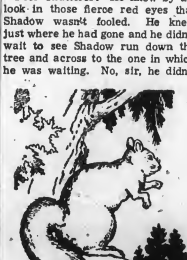
Use green vegetables as soon as possible after buying. They lose quantities of their vitamin C just sitting and being exposed to air.

Add dressing immediately to vegetables and fruits after cutting them. The coating prevents some vitamin loss.

Put away the soda box when cooking green vegetables. It's alkaline and destroys vitamins.

Shell peas or lima beans only just before using. Wash leafy greens just before cooking. The percentage of vitamin loss will be lessened.

Start cooking frozen foods before thawing. It is believed that less vitamin C is destroyed by that method.



CHATTERER TRIES SOME TRICKS

CHATTERER THE RED SQUIRREL had no hope. He was growing tired and more tired and still more tired as he ran through the tree tops, while behind him came Shadow the Weasel. At last he grew so tired that he felt that he had just got to have a few minutes of rest. Perhaps he could fool Shadow. Anyway he would try. He ran down to the ground, wiggled his way through a big pile of brush, hurried over to another tree and started up. But instead of going nearly to the top as usual and then leaping across to another tree he ran out on a little dead stub of a branch only half way up the tree and jumped straight over to the trunk of another tree, where his sharp claws caught in the rough bark. And as he jumped there was a snap behind him. Chatterer knew what it meant. The little stub from which he had jumped had broken short off close to the trunk of the tree.

The first little ray of hope he had, had stole into Chatterer's heart. There would be nothing now to show Shadow the Weasel in which direction he had gone. Chatterer crept into an old nest of Sammy Jay's where he could watch and rest and get his breath. He didn't have to wait long. A long slim form came bounding along the ground in long leaps. Chatterer trembled all over when he saw it. It was Shadow the Weasel. Straight to the tree from which Chatterer had jumped he went and up to the place where the little dead stub had broken off. There the trail ended. Shadow ran up a little way above and circled wholly around the tree trunk. His nose told him that no Squirrel had been there. Then he returned to the place where the little dead stub had been broken off and looked across to the tree in which Chatterer was hiding.

Poor Chatterer! He knew by the look in those fierce red eyes that Shadow wasn't fooled. He knew just where he had gone and he didn't wait to see Shadow run down the tree and across to the one in which he was waiting. No, sir, he didn't wait. He had a wee bit of rest and a chance to get his breath, and now he started on again headlong as before with the same great fear clutching at his heart and the little ray of hope quite gone. But that little trick had given him a few minutes in which to rest, and so presently he tried to think of some other trick, though right down inside he felt that it would be of no real use.

This time he tried criss-crossing his own trail, running back and forth and round and round all over the branches of a spruce tree, and then once more ran on, this time along the ground, until he came to a hollow log. He ran in at one end, out to the other, back along the outside of the log and then did it all over again, finally making a long jump from the end of the log off to one side.

And behind came Shadow the Weasel. He actually grinned when he reached the spruce tree and found the criss-cross trail. It didn't bother him a bit. His wonderful nose led him through every twist and turn Chatterer had made and he knew perfectly well that Chatterer was growing very, very tired. When he reached the hollow log he half expected to find Chatterer there, but when he didn't he wasted no time. He came out at the other end and then ran in a little circle around the old log with his nose to the ground, just as Bowser the Hound circles when Reddy Fox has tried to fool him by making a long jump to one side. In a few minutes he had found Chatterer's trail once more and he knew by the smell that Chatterer was only a very little way ahead. He began to run a little faster.

"I may as well end this chase right away," said he to himself. "I have had all the exercise I need and my stomach is quite ready for that foolish Squirrel. Ha! There he is in the very next tree!"

But Flat

"I have all my money in copper at present."

"And all I have is in coppers at the present time."

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Men of Draft Age Now Able to Volunteer for Service in the SEABEES.

Once again it is possible for men of draft age to volunteer for service in the SEABEES, the Naval Construction Regiment. Men from eighteen to thirty-eight years of age may now volunteer at the Covington Recruiting Station and, if found professionally qualified, be assigned a Petty Officer rating in the SEBEES. All such must still pass through the induction center as formerly, but are now assured of obtaining enlistment in the SEABEES.

Seventeen year olds and men of thirty-eight to fifty years are also desired, but do not have to go through the induction procedure.

Here is an excellent opportunity for qualified men, especially those whose induction is to occur in the near future, to obtain a Petty Officer rating in this specialized branch of the Naval Service. Any men desiring more information on this may call at the Covington Navy Recruiting Station and receive all the particulars.

Fruit Specialist Urges Growers to Spray Crops.

Fruit growers should spray their crops to produce needed high quality fruit according to W. W. Magill in addressing Boone County fruit growers in two meetings last Tuesday.

Scab is the apple growers greatest production problem in this section, Two lime-sulphur sprays, a perpink and pink are the most important scab sprays. A weak full bloom Bordeaux, a petal fall and a cover spray two weeks later are the minimum sprays that should be applied.

Prospects for good peach crops were found on the farms of Frank L. McGlasson and C. L. Hempfling, of Constance. A leaf curl spray consisting of either lime-sulphur or bordeau and oil should be applied before the buds begin to swell.

Norman erbstreit, of Constance and William Moore of Hebron, both commercial grape growers report good prospects for a grape crop.

Recommended fruit spray schedules are available at the county agents office.

At least 90 per cent of the bicycle industry's facilities are devoted to war production, making airplane parts, bombs and bomb parts, small arms and other articles of war.

In England it has been estimated that one efficient man or woman, averaging four hours a day working in a "Digging for Victory" garden, can produce more than $100 worth of food in a year.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

Did you get a card from Secretary Wickard asking you to put as much weight on your hogs as you can and get them off to market as soon as you can?

Anyway, that's one of the things the Secreatary wants to help the war effort. And along that line, I got what I think is an important suggestion—use Dr. Hess Hog Special!

Here's why: Hog Special hogs on the Research Farm finish out SOONER and use as much as a THIRD less supplement and 10% less grain. I'd sure feel I was doing you a good turn if I could convince you to try Hog Special.

Yours truly,
Conrad Hardware, Walton, Ky.

War Boards to License Meat Handlers, Farmers.

1941, or the same number of each type of livestock. Any farmer who does not declare the amount he slaughtered for sale in 1941 when he registers for the permit, or who slaughtered more for sale that year, is limited to slaughtering not more than 300 pounds of meat for sale in any calendar year, or not more than three head of livestock, only one of which may be cattle, unless he secures another quota by special action of his War Board or FDA office.

In register at the War Board office, each farmer or butcher will be given a permit number and instructions for stamping this number in a special purple ink on every cut of meat sold. The public will be asked not to buy meat of any kind after April 1 which does not carry a permit number. Each farmer and butcher and dealer will also receive instructions as to forms and records, which are required to be kept for two years, on sale of both livestock and meat.

Every slaughterer of meat, both large and small, must also present evidence before the War Board or FDA office that he has adequate facilities for conserving and preserving edible and principal inedible parts of the carcass. This means equipment in good order for proper skinning and dressing of animals, for rendering of fat or tallow, and storage and other equipment for retaining by-products to insure against spoilage and waste. Before a permit will be given, the farmer or butcher must also present evidence that he operates under sanitary conditions, but compliance with Federal, state, county, or city sanitary provisions is sufficient.

Local War Boards will probably be given authority to make adjustments in slaughter quotas to correct unusual hardships. The Director of Food Distribution may also adjust quotas in areas where insufficient meat is available to meet ration requirements if there is an excess supply of livestock in that area.

All quotas set by the Food Administrator for future months or quarters will be reduced if it is found that previous quotas under OPA were exceeded. These OPA quotas were based on the same amount of slaughtering in the first three months of this year and the last three months of 1942 as was done in the corresponding quarters of 1941.

"Though drastic, the new regulations will be enforced with justice and discrimination," said Colonel James H. Paimer, southern-born regional FDA administrator in charge of this part of the country. "Permits will not be difficult to secure; adjustments to prevent undue hardship can be secured from county War Board members who know conditions best; normal slaughtering can continue. But the regulations must be obeyed.

"Meat is as important on the food front as bombs on the battle front. The needs of our fighting men and the fighting men of our Allies must be met. We are pledged to Victory and lack of food supplies shall not stand in our way."

Special Effort Being Made in Gallatin County to Encourage Safety on the Farm.

The Soil Conservation Service, in cooperation with other agricultural agencies in Gallatin county, is making a special effort to encourage safety on the farm, according to P. A. Whitehead, work unit conservationist in the Gallatin soil conservation district.

Prevention of accidents is not the only matter of personal concern to farm families, but is an important consideration in the farm war production program, Mr. Whitehead points out. Compliations from National Safety Council reports show that 30 million man-days were lost last year as a result of preventable accidents on the farms.

If this amount of work were applied continously in the production of food crops, it would provide enough to feed 7,500,000 people for a period of 105 days, Whitehead says. Through the practice of safety measures, virtually all of this time could be avoided, he adds.

Rapid progress has been made in the reduction of accidents in industry, as a result of organized safety programs. But virtually no progress has been made in the reduction of accidents on farms, where the rate is extremely high.

Now that labor is scarce on most farms, lost time accidents present a serious economic as well as a personal problem. With farmers working longer hours, accidents are likely to increase unless every possible safety measure is used, Mr. Whitehead said.

Production Important To War Program

The production of the home food supply is a most important war program according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The 1943 farm goal is 75% home production of the rural family food supply.

The state will award certificates to those families who produce three fourths of their family food supply this year and report to the county office this fall. Enrollment certificates in the home food supply program are being supplied all rural families through their neighborhood leaders.

Neighborhood Leaders have held meetings on the home food production program recently in Constance, Verona, Hebron, Burlington and New Haven communities. Meetings in other communities will be held as follows: Belleview—Tuesday, March 23; Petersburg—Wednesday the 24; Florence—Town Hall, Thursday the 25; Walton—Tuesday the 30; Hamilton—School soon as the river falls below flood stage.

While the food production program may not carry the thrill to farm people as the salvage program and some of the other war programs it does serve one of the most important means in which rural people may serve. Efficient food production under war conditions involves all the skill and hard work along the lines of production, harvesting, preservation and consumption of all food produced so that America may be strong in the war effort.

Important farm sources of food production are dairy, poultry, garden, fruit, meats, cereals and sweets.

A good slogan will be—"Produce twice as much as you think you will need-see that nothing is wasted."

Egg Profits at New High Record.

Kentucky poultry keepers cooperating with county agents and the State College of Agriculture and Home Economics reported an average income of 28 cents per hen above cash expenses in January. This is the best poultry income for that month since 1932, when the profits was 12 cents a hen.

The highest flock production in January was almost 24 eggs a hen, and the 10 best flocks and an average production of almost 22 eggs, while the 10 lowest producing flocks had an average of less than four eggs a hen.

Mrs. Lonnie Hopperton Has Enjoyable Visit With Her Son at U. S. Naval Training Station.

Mrs. Lonnie Hopperton spent a lovely visit with her son, Harry W. Hopperton at the home of Miss Myia Mae Kettleson and Mrs. Kettleson at Aurora, Ill. and the U. S. Naval Training Station.

Harry has just completed his "Boot" training at Great Lakes, Ill., and was on his nine day furlough. After his furlough he will be assigned to a signalman's school for four months.

After having an enjoyable visit in both Chicago and Aurora she has now returned home.

Mrs. Hopperton stated that she never was treated better in her life than she was by the personel at the Naval Station and stated that the boys has the best of everything.

Charlie Olds

Charlie Olds was struck by a machine and killed near his home at Middletown, Ky. He was brought to Verona, Ky. and buried in the New Bethel Cemetery. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bettie Peek Olds.

Boone County 4-H Club Work

The 4-H Club work in the county for the next two weeks, will center a round dairyin gand the many problems arising in producing and handling of milk for the farm family. Such questions, as to what to feed the cow while on short early pasture; how to care for and groom a cow in order to produce clean milk and how to handle the milk after it is taken from the cow, will be discussed. Many 4-H Club members are taking care of one or more cows as a labor service project and they will want to know the best way of carrying on their work. There will also be discussion on making butter, care of milk pails and cans. The food value of skimmed milk and comparison of it's relative value to other high priced protein foods will be discussed.

All adult leaders of the livestock project are urged to be present at their 4-H Club meeting which will be held at the schools; the dates will be given later.

Mr. and Mrs. Rod Hughes and son Jack, returned home Tuesday after spending several months in Clearwater, Fla.

87 Attend Farm Bureau Banquet

Eighty-seven farmers, wives and friends attended the first annual Farm Bureau Banquet held at Burlington last Friday evening. Floods, heavy rains and high water were estimated by the program committe to have reduced the attendance by fifty percent.

J. E. Stanford, executive secretary of the Kentucky Farm Bureau urged that all farmers support their county: state and national Farm Bureau Organizations in the attempt to get a fair represention in the national income. The war and post war period presents serious problems for the farmer unless he maintains a strong militant organization.

Stanford praised the Boone County Farm Bureau. It is the youngest of 82 county organizations in the state. Its 1943 goal of twenty-five members has been exceeded by 100% and is growing fast.

The banquet program committee expresses thanks to all who helped make the meeting a success. They invite membership of all farmers. Membership blanks may be secured from Lloyd Siekman, president; Stanley Ransom, Vice president; John E. Crigler, secretary; or from the following directors C. L. Hempfling, Charles B. Beall, John J. Klopp, William H. Presser, H. E. White, George Heil, J. C. Acree, S. D. S. Ransom, Walter King and Joseph A. Huey.

Willie R. Coyle at U. S. Navy Traning Station.

Great Lakes, Ill.—Willie R. Coyle, 19, son of Mr. James Coyle, 15 Neemore St., Walton, Ky., is in the Navy now. He reported to the U. S. Naval Training Station here last week to begin recruit training. Upon graduation he will be given a nine-day leave after which he may be assigned to one of the Navy's trade schools to learn a specialized skill or be sent to active duty at sea.

While in "boot" camp he will be taught the fundamentals of seamanship and Naval customs and procedure. He will be physically hardened through participation in the Navy's strict physical conditioning program and take a series of aptitude tests designed to help place him in the type of work for which he is best qualified.

Mrs. Edith Percival and daughters, Annabelle and Margaret are visiting Dr. C. L. Bakers wife and family of Cridersville, Ohio over the week-end.

Kentucky 4-H Girls On Alert

Rural girls throughout Kentucky are on the alert to achieve "all-round" records in a twofold project that doubtless will be one of the most important undertakings of their careers—to help win the war, and to fit themselves for peace. Tersely, they seek to be come highly efficient homemakers.

To achieve that ambition, many of these future managers of their own household are enrolled in the National 4-H Girls' Record activity to gain a broad understanding of, and take part in the major phases of homemaking, and thereby contribute to the nation's 1943 wartime program by helping to relieve the farm labor shortage.

Outstanding records of achievements in this activity will receive honor awards provided by Montgomery Ward, which include medals to county winners ,an all-expense trip to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago to each State's champion, and a $200 college scholarship to one national winner from each of the four extension sections, and two at large.

This is the twenty-first consecutive year of 4-H Club work support by the donor of the current activity, which will be conducted, along with other 4-H Victory projects, under the direction of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, State Agricultural Colleges, and County Extension Agents.

MOTHER SHIPTON'S PROPHECY

This prophecy is over 350 years old and was written by Mother Shipton:

Carriages without horses shall go
And accidents fill the world with woe;
Around the earth thoughts will fly
In the twinkling of an eye.
The world upside down shall be,
And gold found at the root of a tree.
Through hills men shall ride
And no horse be at their side;
Under water men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep, shall talk;
In the air men shall be seen
In black, in white, in green.
Iron in the water shall float
As easy as a wodden boat.
Gold shall be found and shown
In a land that's now unknown;
Fire and water shall wonders do;
England shall at last admit a foe.
The world to an end shall come
In nineteen hundred and eighty-one.

A printed copy of the above, yellow from age, was handed in by Mrs. Charles Dorsey, Walton, Ky., R. F. D. 2.

Robert Bruce Dickerson

Robert Bruce Dickerson, age 73, passed away suddenly at his home on High School Court.

When his wife returned home from Cincinnati Friday she found Mr. Dickerson had passed away sitting in the rocker, as he was when she left.

Mr. Dickerson was born in Pendleton Co., but had lived in Walton for several years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Hattie Norton Dickerson, two daughters, Mrs. Shirley Hamilton of Covington, Ky., and Miss Helen Dickerson of Cincinnati, Ohio; three sons, Roy of Owenton, former Town Marshall of Walton, Harold of Erlanger, and Cecil of Beaver Lick; two sisters, Mrs. C. H. Kuyper of Cincinnati, and Mrs. Fred Simpson of Walton.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, 2:30 at Willmington Baptist Church on the 3 L Highway by Rev. C. J. Alford with burial in the Willmington cemetery.

Chambers & Grubbs had charge of the funeral arrangements.

College To Train Wool Shearers

To help take off Kentucky's big wool clip this season, the State College of Agriculture announces that it will offer two short courses in shearing sheep at Lexington April 5 and 6 and April 7 and 8, and one course at the Western Kentucky Experiment Substation at Princeton April 12 and 13.

Training will be given to new shearers, and to increase the speed and efficiency of men who already have done some shearing. The selection, care and adjustment of shearing machinery also will be discussed.

Along with the general farm labor shortage there is a scarcity of sheep shearers in Kentucky. In fact, there was a shortage of shearers last year, and it is thought the situation will be even worse this season.

In addition to about 1,100,000 ewes to be sheared this spring, several hundred thousands lambs will need shearing in July and August, in the shearing pelt program.

Most of Kentucky sheep now are sheared by machinery, although a few farmers still shear by hand. In the central counties of the state, custom shearing is used by many flocks owners, when professional shearers are to be had.

While plans call for full use of all shearing machinery in Kentucky, it is believed that some new equipment will be available. Manufacturers of shearing machines have been granted the normal amount of metal. Most shearing of ewes is done in May, but shearing may have to be spread over a longer period this season.

Willing Workers Class Entertained Tuesday Evening.

The Willing Workers Class of Walton Christian Church were delightfully entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Hall and family Tuesday evening, Mar. 23rd with Mr. and Mrs. Powers Conrad as co-hostesses.

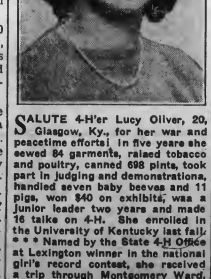
Those who enjoyed the beautiful supper and meeting were: Aleen Conner, June Bush, Minnie M. Crouse, Nell Campbell, Martha J. Carpenter and daughters, Elizabeth Caroland, Helen Ruth Gardiner, Elizabeth Gross, Lula Huey, Mr. and Mrs. Cloyde Johnson and son, Mary Ransler, Virginia Schawb, Mr. and Mrs. Guy St. Clair and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Watson, visitors were: Mrs. Gardiner of Lexington and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Pruett.

The W. W. Class is planning on sending eggs to the Orphans Home. Anyone who would like to help in this worthy cause by donating some eggs will be appreciated by the members of the class. The eggs may be left at the Community Public Service Office.

Conservation

Sowing annual lespedeza on small grain, a simple conservation practice in itself, will enable farmers to make a substantial contribution to the feed production program, says L. E. Gex, supervisor of the Gallatin soil conservation district.

Lespedeza provides ideal summer grazing, Mr. Gex explains, and since dairy and other livestock products are in urgent demand, grazing crops will play a vital role in the food production program.



However, he points out, the lespedeza does not necessarily have to be grazed to contribute to the food production program. Used in normal crop rotations, and turned under for soil improvement it will keep the soil fertile and in condition to produce large acre yields of crops farmers might be called on to grow later.

If lespedeza is sown now on small grain, it can be done when the farmer is not busy with other crops, and if left to the second year it reseeds its self. When cowpeas or soybeans follow small grain, the supervisor points out, the land has to be plowed about the first of June when other crops need work. Frequently dry weather at this period makes it impossible to get these crops planted in time. on the other hand, heavy rains often cause severe soil losses before the ground is covered by the new crop.

Under favorable conditions, lespedeza makes large yields of good hay, and if cut early will make additional growth before frost to give excellant protection to the land and leave considerable material to be turned under later. On land which is easy to wash a small amount of timothy or other grasses should be added to hold the soil.

Mrs. Glenn Laws and son, Tommy Glenn of Dayton, Ohio are visiting relatives here.

TOP RANK 4-H'ER

SALUTE 4-H'er Lucy Oliver, 20, Glasgow, Ky., for her war and peacetime efforts! In five years she sewed 84 garments, raised tobacco and poultry, canned 698 pints, took part in judging and demonstrations, handled seven baby beeves and 11 pigs, won $40 on exhibits, was a junior leader two years and made 16 talks on 4-H. She enrolled in the University of Kentucky last fall. • • • Named by the State 4-H Office at Lexington winner in the national girl's record contest, she received a trip through Montgomery Ward, to the first wartime National 4-H Club Congress held last December in Chicago. The contest is continued for the twenty-first year.

New Haven Seniors To Present Play

Sunbonnet Jane of Sycamore Lane will be presented by the New Haven High School Seniors at the chool on Friday night, April 2.

The Seniors of New Haven High School are very much in a stir. Why? They are completing the rehearsals necessary for presentation of one of the liveliest comedies presented on New Haven's stage in a long time.

The Scene is laid in Indiana—the farm home of Miss Miranda Jasper, the spinster aunt of Jane Jasper.

You will enjoy seeing Catherine Carroll portraying the role of the lovable spinster aunt, while Jeannette Edwards takes the leading part in the character of "Sunbonnet Jane." Frances Barlow, quiet and reserved, has the lovely role of Grace Jesper and is smitten by cupid when Bobby Slayback appears as a lawyer in the role of Schuyler Pell. Bobbie Smith will portray the character of a good natured hitch-hiker, who serves as a farm hand and later comes back to reveal himself as a well bred city boy who would like to claim the hand of, Jane—when she grows up some more. However, he has a very active rival—Toby Simpkins, a partner in all the pranks and mischief at school, played by Clinton Shields.

Equally strong character parts are played by the following students: Ollie Dinklebury—the school teacher, Vera Robinson; Jason Grouch—a stingy and rather testy old gentleman who is in love with the school teacher, Ben Al Riley; Crystal Cluett—the villainess, Anita Gullion; Nola Miller, the 15 year old school girl who always does her "dooty" (reports Jane's mischief), Anna Jean Love; Marion Marsh—Jane's Mother, Betty Thomas.

Don't fail to see this play if you are looking for an evening of fun and first class entertainment. Time: 8:30 (E. W. T.), Admission 17c and 28c.

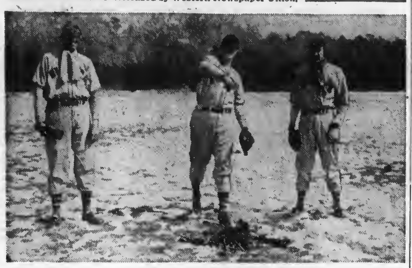
Timber Is Valuable As A War Material

Frankfort, Ky., March—The importance of timber as a war material was emphasized today by K. G. McConnell, Director of the Division of Forestry and coordinator of Civilian Defense Forest Fire Fighting activities, in an appeal for the prevention of forest fires throughout Kentucky during the coming weeks.

Records of the Division of Forestry show that March, April and May are the bad fire months, particularly in the eastern and southern parts of the state, and also show that the majority of field and forest fires were the result of carelessness in the burning of brush and in discarding lighted matches or burning tobacco. Almost every forest fire in Kentucky can be traced to carelessness.

Uses of wood for war purposes have increased materially as a result of recent developments such as the wodden "mosquito" bomber that the Royal Air Force has been using effectively. Shipment of food, supplies and war materials abroad has been increasing steadily and this requires additional wood for crating, boxes and other containers. The importance of wood in the war program makes the prevention of forest fires an essential for victory.

War-time importance of wood and timber was recognized by the 77th Congress when the Federal Salvage Act was amended a few weeks ago to define 'forest products and standing timber suitable therefor' as war material. This law makes wilful injury or destruction of forests by fire punishable by a maximum fine of $10,000 or a maximum prison sentence of 30 years or both.



Volunteer forest fire fighters are now being organized and trained in counties of the state by the Division of Forestry as a part of the Civilian Defense program. These units will work with and supplement the Division's forest fire-fighting organization which has given effective service in the past. In those parts of the state where the Division has no organization, the FFFS units will carry the whole burden of suppressing forest fires.

See-Saw Offensives Rage on Red Front As Nazis Hurl New Divisions Into Drive; Battle Lines Drawn for Skip-Year Tax; Aerial Action Paces Activity in Tunisia

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

With snow underfoot, these muffler-bound, ear-muffed members of the New York Giant pitching staff are going through their paces in one of the most unusual spring training seasons in baseball history. Their camp is located at Lakewood, N. J. Left to right: Cliff Melton, Van Mungo and Carl Hubbell. Southernmost of all major league training camps is that of the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals, at Cairo, Ill.

GIVE AND TAKE:
In Russia

Kharkov had fallen once more to the Nazis and still they pushed eastward. This was the story from the Ukraine sector of the broad Russian front. In another important sector, further to the north, the Russians were having the better of it as their four-pronged offensive swept swiftly through the area around Smolensk.

This and the fighting around the anchor point of Orel were more immediately important to the Russian cause than what happened at Kharkov. For Orel serves as the turning point between the southern and central fronts. Hitler could ill afford to lose this base.

While Russian sources admitted that Kharkov was important they also pointed out that a strong defense line had been established beyond the city and further claimed that Hitler's troops found nothing but dead Germans on the city's streets when they took it. Military experts reasoned that Hitler had thrust about 25 fresh divisions into his drive for that point. Moscow said that the reason Germany wanted the city was to atone for the great losses suffered by the Nazis at Stalingrad in midwinter.

TUNISIA:
Aerial Action

Bad weather which has slowed ground activity in Tunisia has been no barrier to the growing Allied Air force.

As a prelude to General Montgomery's expected push against Marshal Rommel, Allied planes have been pounding the Mareth line. An elaborate system of fortifications hewed into the mountains, this line stands between the bulk of the opposing armies.

After a month of offensive operations against the American and British lines in central and north Tunisia, Rommel has pulled in his wings. Although the Allies restored much of their original position, they have concentrated their effort on softening up the enemy from the air.

Allied air operations have been particularly extensive over Sicily. American and British bombers have been pounding the great Axis base at Palermo. Prosinone and Pozzallo were the latest Sicilian centers hit.

MORE TIRES:
On April 1

Liberalizing tire rationing for the second time, Price Administrator Prentiss Brown expressed the belief that all motorists would be able to keep their cars on the road as the result of the release of additional tires by Rubber Administrator William Jeffers.

Effective April 1, grade 2 tires will be available to drivers with gasoline mileage allowances exceeding 240 miles a month. This includes most B, C and T card holders. Motorists eligible for 560 or more miles will be allowed a limited number of grade 1 tires, the highest grade casing. However, all must be obtained with certificates issued by local ration boards.

These changes do not affect A card holders, who are eligible for used or recapped casings. Most of the rationing formalities on recapped tires have been removed by Brown.

SKIP-YEAR TAX:
Battle Lines Drawn

When House Democratic leaders decided to support a tax collection system, without abatement, as approved by the ways and means committee, their action presaged a pay-as-you-go tax battle which may reverberate in the 1944 political campaign.

Party lines in the house were well defined, for the most part. Republican leaders were lined up for and Democrats against the Ruml plan to skip an entire income tax year. However, there was some cause for worry among opponents of the skip-a-year proposal. In addition to the powerful Republican membership which had lined up for abatement, some Democrats indicated they would vote with the Republicans.

THUNDER:
Over Germany

Since the RAF staged its first colossal 1,000 plane bombing of Cologne last spring, Nazi industrial and communications centers in both Germany and the occupied countries have been subjected to concentrated pounding from the air. Out of 500 bombers, 475 returned after the last shattering attack on Essen.

Railroad lines and the big automotive center of Rouen have been the principal targets in France. The extensive system of canals has been bombed in Holland and Belgium. And in Germany, the great naval base at Wilhelmshaven, the big port of Hamburg, the steel industries of the Ruhr, and the engine factories of Dusseldorf and Nuremberg have been steadily plastered.

In flights into the interior, the RAF has been using giant Lancasters, Halifaxes and Stirlings, which carry the devastating block busters in their bomb racks. Wellingtons have headlined in the bombing and strafing attacks on communications centers.

The great raids, with hundreds of planes participating on a daily schedule, are believed to have caused considerable damage to communications which the Nazis will need to shift troops and supplies to meet an Allied invasion. German war industry appears to have been badly crippled. But with the American air force joining in the attacks in increasing numbers, raids to date may have been only a good beginning.

FARM PLAN:
From Cornbelt

The importance of a strong home front—especially in the food sector—was re-emphasized when officials of 12 cornbelt states concluded a series of meetings to offset what former President Herbert Hoover calls "symptoms of a dangerously degenerating agriculture."

Governors of eight states and high ranking officials of four others drafted a series of recommendations that, among other things, would:

Recognize farming as an essential war industry; release immediately all present stock of farm machinery now in the hands of leaders or distributors and provide sufficient material for completion of other units not now finished; grant selective service deferment for "all experienced labor essential to farm production" and "terminate the present unsatisfactory system" which sends farm machinery where "it is not adapted."

FLARE-UP:
In France

Hopeful eyes turned for several days on the high mountain passes near the French-Swiss frontier where large numbers of French patriots had mobilized to launch guerrilla warfare against Italian and German troops. For the most these forces consisted of young Frenchmen who were being recruited for forced labor inside Germany.

First reports from Zurich and Berne, Switzerland, indicated that British RAF planes were dropping guns and ammunition to the men waiting in the Alps. German sources soon claimed that many of the men were deserting because of the lack of such supplies. This claim was substantiated by neutral reports.

Much support and advice to the movement was given by the Algiers radio. This source claimed that Italian troops in the area were refusing to help pry the patriots loose from their positions.

An ultimatum had been issued by the Germans before the fighting began but the French declined it saying that they were ready to fight through to the end.

While non-Axis nations were cheered by the news of the resistance there was little hope that the uprising could spread far.

DINNER TABLE:
And Points

While American housewives were studying what the effects of the rationing of meat, canned fish, butter, cheese and edible fats would be on their family diets, the Office of Price Administration announced that April points for processed foods would be same as in March—a total of 48 per person. These would be the points on the blue stamps lettered D, E and F in war ration book No. 2.

RATION DATES

March 29—First day for rationing of meats, canned fish, butter, cheese, edible fats and oils.

March 31—Final date for first inspection of passenger car tires for "A" card holders and motorcycles; last day on which A, B and C stamps in war ration book 2 may be used. (Stamps of second ration period may be used from March 25.)

April 12—Expiration date for Period 4 fuel-oil coupons.

May 31—Last day for use of stamp No. 12, good for five pounds of sugar.

June 15—Last valid date for stamp No. 17, good for one pair of shoes.

September 30—Expiration date for Period 5 fuel-oil coupons.

In announcing the meat rationing, government officials were careful to point out that while the total amount to be consumed by the nation would be cut 12 to 15 per cent, there would still be enough meat to allow healthy diets for U. S. citizens.

Meanwhile the department of labor reported that the average increase in food costs throughout the nation during the past month had been 0.5 per cent.

SECRET AIRFIELDS:
Held Dutch Harbor

The story behind Japan's failure to seize Dutch Harbor, the navy's Alaskan stronghold, is due largely to the "existence" of two imaginary salmon packing companies. The facts have just been revealed.

The two packing firms were no more than covers for one of the Alaska defense command's most remarkable jobs—the secret construction of two airfields to guard Dutch Harbor. When the Japs approached the naval base last June 3 (with two carriers, three cruisers, eight destroyers and four transports—perhaps as strong as the forces which struck at Pearl Harbor) they understood there was no airfield within 800 miles of Dutch Harbor.

In the midst of their assault the Japs found themselves hit from behind by land based planes and bombed and torpedoed by land based planes. Their spy work—so successful at Pearl Harbor—had failed.

LITTLE STEEL:
Formula Fades

A source of comfort to almost every labor union official is the fact that the Little Steel formula is fast disappearing as a factor in wage increases approved by the War Labor board. The bulk of wage adjustments now is based on "inequalities."

Reason for the disappearance of the much-debated formula is that a majority of employees already have received the 15 per cent general increase permitted by the formula as a cost-of-living adjustment. WLB officials state that scarcely any important branches of industry have not raised wages at least that much since January 1, 1941.

JAP FORCES:
Above Australia

Word from Allied headquarters in the South Pacific indicated that Japan's invasion forces appeared shifting to the ring of islands north of Australia.

This new menace was emphasized when 49 enemy planes—25 bombers and 24 fighters—attacked Port Darwin in Australia. It was one of the heaviest raids in months, although the Japs were driven off with only slight damage and casualties.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND
By DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

'FLYING MINUTE MEN'

(The brass ring, good for one free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round, is awarded this week to the Civil Air Patrol.)

This brass ring goes not to one man but to 68,000 men and women. They are members of the Civil Air patrol who have been fighting the war in little single-motor planes flying within the boundaries of the United States, and who carry the torch for the future of civil aviation in this country.

How long they will be allowed to carry that torch is the important question. At present they are orphans of the storm—carrying military responsibilities without military standing. They fight submarines, but they had to fight for weapons first. The army and WPB are slowly throttling them by refusing new equipment or repair parts. Thus in order to keep their gradually deteriorating machines going, the Civil Air patrol is almost certain to be swallowed by the army.

The army has been wanting to take over because civilian fliers in wartime are considered a nuisance by the military—with justification in some cases.

Youths and Fathers.

But the owners of 25,000 private planes thought they had something to offer. The younger ones went into military service. Others, many being married men with families, organized the Civil Air patrol, which for more than a year has been flying the coastal waters and maintaining a courier service throughout the United States.

These are the "Flying Minute Men." At first their submarine patrol was merely a spotting job. If they spotted a submarine, they were supposed to radio a shore base and then hover around waiting for a bomber to come to the scene of action. But they had so many heart-rending experiences, that they clamored for bombs of their own. They would dart low over the water, discover a submarine location, radio to a shore base, hold the contact, hover and pursue—and then sometimes lose the prey because the army never came along.

For months they called in vain for bombing equipment. War department insisted that no civilians are allowed to carry weapons, and thus the Civil Air patrol should not be armed. The army would not even release life rafts, and as a result several CAP pilots have lost their lives on submarine patrol.

Finally the restriction was waived, and today these little single-engine planes carry small bomb racks, bombs, and bomb sights.

But they have not been allowed to reveal the success of their submarine patrol. War department calls it "military information," and insists that CAP shall say no more than that they have "attacked" submarines—without indicating the result.

Subs Sunk.

But we can reveal that submarines spotted by CAP observers have actually been sunk. The authority for this statement is Maj. Gen. Follett Bradley of the army air corps, who also emphasizes that these "Flying Minute Men" have provided their own planes, tools, radios, and other equipment.

A year ago German submarines were sinking merchant ships within sight of the Atlantic coast. This brazen activity ceased after establishment of the Civil Air patrol, which the submarines were driven into deep waters, for the small planes, flying low and flying slowly, were able to do a better job of spotting than big patrol bombers which whizzed past the scene too rapidly for close observation.

WHY THE JAPS KNOW

Here is an excerpt from the interior department's annual 1941 report, which indicates why the Japs know so much about the Aleutian Islands:

"The floating plant Kosei Maru, with auxiliary craft consisting of 9 trawlers, was engaged from May to August, 1940, in taking halibut and cod in Bering Sea about 100 miles northeast of the Pribilof Islands, with one additional trawler during the last week or two of the season. The vessel was reported to have left for Japan toward the end of August.

"This is the eleventh consecutive year that Japanese floating plants have operated in these waters, the number of vessels having varied from one to four, with the usual complement of tenders."

Note: Under international law it is impossible to prevent foreign fishermen from fishing in foreign waters.

Wickard Is Made Target Of Farm Policy Critics

Attack on Agriculture Chief Seen as a Continuation of Farm Bureau Assault On Farm Security Administration.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

You will read in your favorite newspaper that congress is out to "get" Secretary of Agriculture Wickard. The reason being offered is: "There's going to be a food shortage and he's responsible." That isn't the half of it.

In the first place, the folks who have been leaning back with their feet on the Washington cracker-barrel and watching administrations, wars and panics come and go, aren't taking these fiery debates, these charges and counter-charges too seriously.

The fight in congress today on the surface is the farm bureau, the big farmer (who isn't so big in many cases) versus Wickard. One layer below the surface, you'll hear it called the fight of the extension services against the Farm Security administration. Back in the cracker-barrel corner it's just the fight against the administration and what's left of the New Deal.

Criticism 'Political'

One of these old timers shifted his stogie, took down his feet and said to me: "This is just politics. The idea is that 1944 is coming up and if you are an honest 'out' you've got to do all you can to discredit the 'ins.' I think Wickard will weather the storm. The Farm bureau people have nothing against him except as a symbol of the administration. He's an old farm bureau man himself."

"But," I interjected, "what about the war effort, what about hiking up the farm prices and smashing the price ceilings? You can't give the farmers higher prices without having to boost wages."

My friend caressed his stogie and smiled. "Don't worry," he said, "nobody is going to do anything in the long run that will interfere with war plans. But in a political fight, everybody leans as far out of the tree as he can without falling. Everybody says the other fellow is playing politics — but everybody plays the game just the same."

What is this "extension service" versus Farm Security fight? Well, it goes back a long way.

In the old days, the extension service, the idea of the "county agents" was started by commercial organizations which wanted to improve farm prosperity so they could sell more city goods. Later, the system was financed by the states with the help of federal grants. But the states dominated. Then the American Farm Bureau federation was formed, officially in 1920.

The organization pushed certain ideas for attacking surpluses not very different from what the AAA developed later. As the farm problem grew worse, a farm conference was called in Washington in 1932. This group prepared a bill containing many features similar to those finally incorporated into the Agricultural Adjustment act.

Then came the first friction between the farm bureau and the administration. There was a good deal of politics in that, too. It was a struggle between the AAA representatives in the field and the state set-ups.

Farmers' Union Formed

Later, the Farmers Union came into the picture. It was started among the low income farmers in Texas. It was the left wing of Agriculture and to the other farm groups, it was "pink." It had the strong backing of Mrs. Roosevelt; its policies were reflected by the Farm Security administration, a rival of the more conservative Farm Credit administration which ministered to the financial ills of the bigger farmers. The friction has never ceased.

A blow-up came when Wickard started his food administration. As an old farm bureau man, he always leaned over backward in an effort not to be prejudiced against Farm Security. Also, as a cabinet member, he couldn't stray too far from White House preachments. So he named Parisius, a Farm Security man, to head up his food conservation machinery and immediately a nest of hornets was loose. There was no choice. It was a question of making a left turn against traffic. Parisius had to go.

Wickard was accused of turning right by one group but that didn't save him from the wrath of those opposed to the administration. Nor did his incentive, payment policy which would not help the Democrat cotton raisers in the South nor the Republican wheat raisers in the north since what we don't need to feed America today is more wheat or more cotton.

So the storm rages. Farm Security will probably be the burnt offering as anything with even a faintly pink complexion is a red flag to congress.

Gardens Nothing New; They Were Old Treat

You've heard the expression: "he ain't what he usta be and what's more, he never wuz."

In a number of ways, these United States of ours ain't what they used to be—but they WUZ!

Take these victory gardens.

My goodness! It was long after we moved into town (population 20,000) that I had my real private gardening experience. Back on Spruce street, of course, there was a whole orchard and the garden was so big, it was ploughed. But big or little, the backyard could produce plenty for mother to "put up" (we never called it "canning"), everything from tomatoes and corn and those cucumbers—'what memories the name conjures up'—to those wonderful watermelon pickles.

I was talking with another oldtimer, and he isn't so old either, about his little Kansas town. He said he couldn't remember anybody who didn't have a garden; or had milk delivered to the doorstep either.

When the onions and the radishes stuck their sprouts up, I used to watch them with an eagle eye hoping I would be able to deliver a luscious bunch of them before the corner grocer had his somewhat wilted product to display. Of course, I never could beat him by much and by the time the fat tomatoes were asking for a piece of lath to keep their chins out of the dirt, all the neighbors had them too. But that didn't matter. Came the day when the kitchen was redolent with entrancing odors and the womenfolk's aprons were stained red as a victorious banner, and when evening fell, the mason jars were cooling in the pantry before they were stored in the cool cellar.

In those days, about the only time a can opener was used was when somebody broached a Sunday evening can of sardines as a special treat to go along with the fudge (made in a chafing dish if you were a little doggy) and flavored with songs around the piano to mandolin obligato.

And what about the dry throats? No ice cubes. No cocktail shakers. Perhaps a bottle of raspberry shrub from the top shelf from the preserves closet—a rich purple liquid which had been squeezed through a cheese cloth bag with strong and loving hands, the fat berries inside plucked from those sprawling bushes along the back fence.

What good things came out of the backyard garden by way of the fruit jars and the jelly glasses! Can you forget the quinces, smooth and shiny and hard that hung on the gnarled tree, harsh fruit that mysteriously turned into a delightful pink delicacy, which spread over a crisp cracker like a benediction.

Drill Congressmen

On Tuesday, March 2, 1943, there appeared for the first time in the history of America, the following item in the Congressional Record, the journal of day to day happenings of congress:

RECESS

THE SPEAKER. Pursuant to the inherent power lodged in the Presiding Officer in case of emergency, the Chair declares this House in recess subject to the call of the Chair for the purpose of participating in a practice air-raid drill. The alarm has sounded. Members will leave the Chamber as rapidly as possible, and the galleries will be cleared.

Accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the House stood in recess, subject to the call of the Speaker.

AFTER RECESS

At 3 o'clock and 4 minutes p. m., the House was called to order by the Speaker.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Japanese officials have decided to establish six more training centers to meet present demands for 80,000 brides for Jap colonists in occupied Manchuria. As recorded by the foreign broadcast intelligence service of the United States, the Tokyo radio said current plans call for 250,000 "colonists" and that "about 80,000 brides to go to the continent are desired."

The treasury's cache of gold now amounts to $22,743,000,000.

Spring Burning of Pasture Lands Destroys Fertility of Soil and Ruins Grass.

Frankfort, Ky., March—Burning off pasture lands in early spring, a practice still followed in some parts of Kentucky, not only fails to improve the grazing, but may cut grass production in half in a single year, while doing considerable damage to the forests, according to a statement issued today by K. G. McConnell, Director of the Division of Forestry.

Experiments with blue grass pasture in Kentucky by the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, showed that burning in winter or spring reduced yields the following year from 50 to 75 per cent. These results were believed due to the damage by fire to the roots and crowns of the grass plants, some of which were killed entirely.

McConell pointed out that observations have revealed that on land consistently burned, the perennial grasses and other more valuable for age plants are rapidly replaced by annual weeds that are nearly worthless for pasture.

A still greater loss caused by fire, although not so apparent in a single year, is the destruction of soil fertility. Burning off grass or woodland litter increases water run-off from 5 to 30 times, and speeds up soil erosion 4 to 11 times.

who passed away February 19th, 1943.

One month ago you left me
Left me wondering why,
That you were taken from me
No one will ever know.

But God knew best and taken you from me
To be with the angels above
To meet me at the gateway
And welcome me along the way.

Dear Elmo is not dead
He is just away
And on resurection morning
I hope to meet you there.

We have traveled the road of life
Together in our loneliness
And you were taken away
And left me to go alone.

Dear Elmo my thoughts of you
Are with me both morn and nite
And will be forever
And hope to meet you over there.

High Mark Set for Victory Gardeners.

Mrs. Maynard Ragsdale, a member of the Pottertown Homemakers' club in Calloway county, is again mapping out a large Victory garden this spring. Last year, for her family of three, she canned 600 quarts of food, most of it vegetables. Included were poke, turnip greens, mustard, tendergreen, green beans, two kinds of lima beans, okra, squash, tomatoes, tomato juice, two kinds of pumpkin, corn, corn-on-the-cob, two kinds of shell beans, four kinds of peas, kraut, kraut juice, carrots, beets, soup mixture, baked beans and pimentoes. She also canned rhubarb, grape juice, grapes, pears, apples and Damson plums, as well as chicken and beef. She had 50 quarts of peaches and berries left from the previous year.

In addition to putting up her own food supply, Mrs. Ragsdale gave two canning demonstrations, and assisted six families in canning 1,500 quarts with her pressure cooker.

FAN MAIL

This is a new kind of fan mail. It's addressed to America's Man of the Hour . . . to the man in uniform.

Brave letters from Mom and Dad . . . scrawled notes from Sis . . . envious banter from the kid brother . . . soft, sweet whispers from the girl who waits.

Fan mail . . . weighted with inspiration and encouragement and love... sealed with silent, fervent prayers . . . voicing sturdy confidence in Victory and echoing a nation's swelling hymn of hope for a happier world.

The men and women of the Southern Railway System know what this mail from home means to a fighting man. That's why we are so proud to handle it. That's why we keep it moving, day and night . . . regardless of its ever-increasing volume . . . regardless of the thousand and one difficulties a railroad faces in time of war.

We know, too, that the same faith and hope and courage which today enrich the fan mail of America's fighting men, will tomorrow inspire a new and a greater Southland.

That's why we're preparing today for the job we'll have to do when Victory has been won; the job of handling the travel and the commerce of the New South with the same impressive efficiency that is today speeding troops and war freight—and the fan mail of the nation's fighting forces.

We had proof enough of that during our 13 years of prohibition. What you really vote for is whether liquor is going to be sold legally or illegally... whether the community is going to get needed taxes for schools, hospitals, and the like, or whether this money is going to go to gangsters and bootleggers. Red Stamp Rationing Reminder

Red stamps from War Ration Book Two, which are good for the purchase of meats, cheeses, edible fats and oils and canned fish, will become valid and will expire as follows:

Week Beginning	Red Stamps Bearing Letter	Stamps Expire
March 29	A-(16 points)	Apr. 30
April 4	B-(16 points)	Apr. 30
April 11	C-(16 points)	Apr. 30
April 18	D-(16 points)	Apr. 30
April 25	E-(16 points)	(to be announced)

Easterners Get 6 Gals. Of Gas A Month

Autoists in 17 Easterns states now get only 6 gallons of gasoline a month, although they may use it for any kind of non-occupational driving. The new order does not apply to other areas. A-books will still be good for 3 gallons in the 17 Easterns states, but they must last for four months. Shortage of gas and oil supplies, and greatly increased demands for fuel for farm machinery, caused the PA order, which became effective March 22.

More Meat For Shortage Areas

OPA has empowered regional administrators to report to the Food Rationing Division of OPA whenever an area has an acute meat shortage which endangers public health, moral, or the war effort. OPA will authorize slaughters to increase their civilian deliveries of controlled meats in such areas.

Plenty of Canning Supplies

Plenty of metal closures and rubber jar rings will be available for American housewives who will be doing an increased amount of canning this year. The War Production Board has removed all quota restrictions on the manufacture of certain types of metal lids used to seal the jars. Prohibition of the use of zinc is continued.

More Turkeys This Year

Turkey growers plan to raise about 37 million turkeys this year, according to February 1 returns from over 5,000 farmers throughout the U. S. This would be the largest crop of turkeys ever produced in this country—12 per cent larger than the 1942 crop. Some difference between February indications and actual performance is to be expected, depending on the supply and price of hatching eggs, poultry prices, availability and cost of high protein feeds, and the willingness of growers to accept late hatched poults.

Modifications of Shoe Ration Order

Three modifications of shoe ration order 17 have been authorized by OPA. They are: (1) an additional ration for "safety" shoes, used for health protection in special work, may be acquired from the local board by any person who has spent his ration stamp 17, even though a member of his family has an unspent stamp, (2) sandals which can be sold ration-free are redefined to include all sandals with an open back and a heel height of 1-1-8 inches or less, regardless of the material used in the upper, (3) certain shoes with soles made principally of rope, wood, or other non-strategic materials may be sold ration-free, regardless of the material used in the upper.

Extra Food For Temporary Workers

An employer who temporarily hires workmen for periods of less than 3 days may obtain rationed foods for them by applying to his local War Price and Rationing Board. This is of special importance to farmers who hire labor during the planting and harvesting season, to employers of construction workers on temporary jobs, lumber camp operators, and other seasonal employers.

Ceilings on Corn

Permanent maximum prices on corn — American's top-ranking farm crop in point of size and value—have been fixed by OPA. The ceiling apply from the time the corn leaves the farmer's hand until it is sold by retail dealers. Recognizing seasonal price variations and carrying charges, the new OPA order sets peak prices for all varieties and types of corn sold by farmers, truckers, local levators and terminal market operators and retail dealers. Typical peak under the new maximum price regulation No. 346 (corn) is $1.02 per 56-pound bushel of No. 2 yellow corn at Chicago—key point in the country's grain exchange and marketing set-up.

Special Rations of Fresh Foods Are Scarce

Forest rangers, missionaries, fishermen, sheep herders, and other consumers, if they are located in such remote places that it is impossible for them to get fresh foods except at very infrequent intervals, may now apply to their local board for special rations, according to an amendment issued by the OPA. Means were also provided for certain logging camps and similar institutional users to get processed food if no other sources of food can be made available.

Higher Prices For Canning Crops

A price-support program, which assures farmers 20 to 50 per cent higher prices for their canning crops than last year has been announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the OPA. Crops for which support prices are established include tomatoes, sweet corn, snap beans, green peas, lima beans, beets, carrots, and cabbage for kraut.

Second War Loan Drive

During April the U. S. Treasury will borrow the sum of $13,000,000,000 (billion) in its second war loan drive. "This money, which is needed to back up our armed forces, will be raised through the continuing sale of War Savings Bonds, and tax savings notes, treasury bills, and the offering of a number of new treasury issues designed for every class and type of investor," said Secretary Morgenthau.

"As we move forward into full production in the war effort, it is increasingly important that every American invest in his Government's securities to the limit of his or her ability."

Can Sell Butter Below Ceiling

There is nothing in any OPA regulation preventing sales of butter at lower than ceiling prices set recently at the creamery and wholesaler levels. These ceiling represent the maximum prices at which this commodity may be sold, Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown said.

Farm Machinery Released

Restrictions on distribution of three types of rationed farm machinery have been lifted by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The order permits manufacturers of farm cream separators to release without restriction 80 per cent of their authorized production of separators as allowed by WPB Order L-170 and all remaining stocks produced under L-26. It similarly permits manufacturers of power spray pumps and horse or tractor drawn rod weeders to release 100 per cent of their production under L-170 and all inventory stocks produced under L-26.

Blue Ration Stamp Calender

Blue stamps, D, E, and F in War Ration Book Two, totaling 48 points will be good from March 25 through April 30. Stamps A, B, and C will be valid only through March 31. Consequently, between March 25 and March 31, blue stamps, A through F, may be used to buy rationed canned foods.

Damaged Shoes "Non-Rationed"

Shoe dealers whose stocks have been damaged by fire, water, steam or other accidental cause to the extent that they cannot be exchanged for ration currency may be authorized by district OPA offices to mark these shoes "non-rationed".

Booklet on Car Care

A manual of ABC's of vehicle maintenance for cars, trucks, and buses, outlining the kind of inspections, checks, and adjustments that should be made to assure efficient and economic operation of all types of motor vehicles, will soon be available through the Office of Defense Transportation and the field offices of the Office of War Information.

Staggered Hours for Women

Staggered hours of work so that women may shop under rationing rules, but still work in war plants and necessary services have been proposed by War Manpower Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt. 6,000,000 (million) women will be in war industries this year and changes must be made in present work systems.

Deferment Appeals Handled Locally

All appeals involving claims for occupational deferment are now being handled by the Selective Service Board of Appeal in the area of the worker's employment. Formerly, these appeals were handled in the area in which the worker was registered.

Better Tires for "B" and "C" Drivers

A driver with a mileage ration of more than 240 miles monthly now can have new casings of the lower qualities—Grade II—when he needs replacements. Motorists with mileage rations between 560 and 1,000 monthly, who have been eligible for new casings in the lower quality bracket only, can now get Grade I tires. The release of these new casings under rationing to "B" and "C" card holders will be for replacement of tires worn beyond the recappable stage, according to OPA..

Food Prices Increase Slightly

The average cost of all foods consumed by the average family advanced between mid-January and mid-February 0.5 per cent as fresh fruits and vegetables went up with increased buying because of short supplies of canned goods and in anticipation of rationing effective March 1. The usual large seasonal decline in egg prices of 13.5 per cent was primarily responsible for holding down the over-all increase. The average cost of foods other than eggs rose by 1.5 per cent, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

From where I sit...

by Joe Marsh

Phibbs' house got struck by lightning a couple of nights ago. The fire was soon out though, thanks to the prompt work of the local fire department.

And when Thad goes to thank 'em, Chief Ed Carey simply says, "That's all right, Mr. Phibbs—that's what you pay taxes for."

From where I sit, that's a pert example of how taxes come back to the people.

Take taxes on beer, f'instance—more than 2½ billion dollars in the last nine years.

Time was when a lot of that went into the pockets of bootleggers; but today it's going for public benefits—to buy things Uncle Sam needs for Victory.

To moderate folks, who like a friendly glass of beer occasionally, there's a heap of satisfaction in knowing that this beverage of moderation is furnishing Uncle Sam with some of the money that he badly needs.

To the Jenkins Family

The American Spirit HAS SEVEN FACES

Seven sons fighting all over the world for the one thing that ONLY AMERICANS HAVE

These fighters for freedom are the sons of Robert M. Jenkins, formerly station agent at Deatsville, Alabama, who served the L & N for over fifty years. That fifty-year record of loyal service is unusual but he gave to the war something matched by hardly any other parent in America—six fighting sons with the seventh in a war industry.

What inspired this group from a single family to leap to the defense of home and country? What steeled that courageous father to see them go with never a quaver in his last goodbye, never a shrinking from his major sacrifice?

It was the American Spirit! And the sons of this typical American are just seven of one hundred and thirty million of such symbols.

That spirit has grown strong on two freedoms which ONLY Americans have to the full... Freedom of the Individual and Freedom of Industry.

1. Freedom of the Individual means...

Freedom of speech and worship. Freedom to progress faster by working harder, doing more. Freedom to save and venture money, time, or labor, for the sake of greater gain. Freedom to do and dare, to seek the highest rewards—or, for that matter, freedom to refrain from doing those things.

2. Freedom of Industry means...

Freedom of the thrifty to invest in business. Freedom to seek a fair profit—and to create an enterprise that gives labor more jobs at better wages. Freedom of business to operate under the management of men selected by merit.

It also means freedom to plan, to employ research and invention, to stimulate and supply new wants, to lower costs of production, to do as Free Enterprise has done in raising living standards in the United States higher than those of any other country in the world.

These are the fundamental freedoms — born with America—which have nurtured the American Spirit—given our country its unmatched development. It is that spirit which sustained Robert Jenkins through his long career, and now sustains his seven sons at their wartime posts. Those seven sons are fighting now to maintain those freedoms and all the things for which they stand... fighting for all the things we, too, at home must keep alive.

L&N

The L&N, like other railroads which share in today's wartime marvel of transportation, is a product of the American Spirit. Because of this Spirit, the Old Reliable has been able to help mightily in the South's development; aiding alike the merchant, the miner, the farmer, the manufacturer, and (far from least) the laborer; contributing materially in taxes to fine schools, good roads and other public services; serving now the cause of victory for all America.

He used to be one of our most valued linemen, but he's climbing poles for Uncle Sam now... in the Signal Corps. He's one of the 100 employees of this company who are serving our Nation in the armed forces. We're proud of every one of them.

Naturally it hasn't been possible to replace all of these men—many of whom were veteran employees—with men of equal skill. But with training and expert supervision to substitute for experience we hope to be able to maintain a high standard of service despite our turnover in personnel

As time goes on, however, operating difficulties arising from manpower and material shortages may be expected to increase. This is inevitable in total war and is not peculiar to our business. Therefore, if at any time in the future our service is not quite what you expect it to be, we know you will understand and make allowances. We'll be giving our best to our job in the drive for final victory.

STAFFORDSBURG

We are glad indeed to report that our S. S. attendance was back to normal Sunday. Glad to see everyone in their place—but we still would like to get others interested. I believe most of us are agreed that a working knowledge of God's word is a potent factor in bringing peace and happiness to the individual and the nation. So lets each realize his responsibility and do his part in the Sunday School and church.

Mr. and Mrs. Farrell formerly of Green Road have moved into their newly purchased home in this community.

Miss Minnie Raff of Dayton, O. visited here over the week-end.

Mrs. Geo. Klein and son, Geo. Wm. visited relatives in Dayton Sunday.

Everyone enjoyed hearing our new District Supt., Rev. Rice as he filled his new appointment with us for the first time. He gave us much food for thought. He really went the "second mile" by staying for the evening also.

Mrs. Inez Chowning visited with Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hanna and on Sunday attended morning worship with us.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gadker visited with Mr. and Mrs. Chester Ballinger on Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Ballinger spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Brannock of Kelat and brought home Miss Nannie Ballinger who has spent the winter with Mr. and Mrs. Brannock.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Richardson were very glad to receive a letter during the past week from Pvt. Wayne Richardson who had been in transit and not able to write for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Hoffman had a letter also from their grandson Harold Stephens who is some where in the Pacific.

Bronze medals will continue to go to servicemen cited for bravery or efficiency, but reduction in copper material for insignia and apparel of the armed forces will save more copper than the amount used in medals.

April 1st Deadline for Slaughter, Dealer Permits.

Food Distribution Orders No. 26 and 27 require all livestock dealers, slaughters of livestock in Kentucky for sale of meat except Louisville and Lexington, have permits by April 1, 1943. This is necessary in order to expedite the stamping out of "Black Markets."

Farmers, dealers, and agents who contemplate the sale, purchase or slaughter of live stock or sale of meat from farm-slaughtered livestock after March 31 must obtain a slaughter or dealer permit from their county USDA War Board.

Meeting Scheduled at Independence, Friday

A meeting will be held at the Court House, Independence, Kentucky on Friday, March 26, 1943 at 1:00 P. M. Eastern War Time, for the purpose of registering and issuing permits to all livestock dealers and slaughters of livestock, including cattle, calves, hogs, sheep and lambs for the purpose of selling meat therefrom. These permits must be obtained by April 1, 1943 to be able to sell livestock, and slaughter and sell meat.

In most cases, slaughter quotas will be established by the county USDA War Boards. These quotas will be based on information concerning the slaughter of meat during 1941. Slaughters who apply for permits should have available all records on 1941 livestock slaughter.

Hebron Homemakers' Club

The regular monthly meeting of the Hebron Homemakers Club was held at the Masonic Hall on March 10th.

Fourteen members answered the roll call of "How Many Vegetables Am I Going to Raise This Year."

The meeting opened by singing "God Bless America" and reading the club "Collect".

Mrs. Bessie Acra volunteered to help with the 4-H sewing project.

Mrs. Albert Dickey reported that seven members had made home first-aid kits and twenty one garments had been made by the members for the Red Cross. She also urged each member to search for more scrap.

Bessie Acra gave a talk on making seed boxes, trimming roses and resetting shrubs. She pointed out that shrubs should be at least 3 ft. from the foundation. She also stated that now is the time to remove all of the dead leaves from iris.

She asked each member to bring some flower seeds to the next meeting so the members may exchange seeds.

The gifts for the raffle was donated by Mrs. Lizzie Graves and won by Mrs. Sue Rogers.

Mrs. Virgina Pope gave the major project lesson on "Dress for Victory." Mrs. Moore had charge of the social program and several games were played.

Members attending this meeting were: Mrs. Hilda Hogan, Mrs. Marie Asbury, Mrs. Alice Schneider, Mrs. Sue Rogers, Mrs. Jennie Goodridge, Mrs. Myrtle Crutcher, Mrs. Bessie Acra, Mrs. Ethel Lea, Mrs. Loraine Siekman, Mrs. Beulah Craddock, Mrs. Lizzie Graves, Mrs. Alberta Dickey, Mrs. Virginia Pope and Mrs. Lorena Clore.

THE STORY SO FAR: Ann Lee and Cole Cody, beneficiaries under two identical wills of Old Bill Cole, were attempting to discover who had fired the bullet which caused his death. Suspicion centered around Rance Waldron, who, posing as Old Bill's nephew, disappeared after he had been spied upon by Cody at a deserted cabin in conversation with the notorious character Tom Gough. Doc Joe and the Judge, commissioned by Old Bill to carry out his last wishes, were returning home from the ranch (each with a will in his pocket for safekeeping) when they were held up by a masked bandit. In the skirmish they recognized Rance Waldron as his mask slipped. Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XVI

Cole Cody and Ann were standing together. He looked down upon the soft loveliness of her curly hair as she, blinking her eyes furiously, looked unseeingly down at the ground and the queer designs the men's boots had made.

"It—it's so terrible—" she said, her voice quivering, and he saw how her breast filled to a deep drought of air.

"It's awful,'" said Cody simply.

"Yes, it is awful. Everything has been awful, hasn't it? Since—Why, since you and I first saw each other, Cole Cody! And somehow you and I seem to be to blame for it."

And then, for the first time he did think of the two wills, and a new light flashed into his eyes. "Maybe you and I are somehow to blame," he said, and she looked up at him swiftly, near-frightened by his tone. "And maybe it was robbery. And maybe two men had a hand in it, and one of them got away!"

"What makes you talk like that?" She drew back a step or two from him; his eyes fascinated her, holding her gaze hypnotically.

"It just dawned on me," he said, cutting across her rush of words, "that you gave a certain document to Doc Joe to keep for you, and I gave—"

"Rance Waldron!" she gasped, and forgot herself and her pet feud so far as to clutch his arm, tight in both hands

"If you guessed right, you know what this is going to mean, don't you?" he said. "If Waldron staged this affair, it was because somehow, though I'm hanged if I can figure it out, he learned that the two old boys had the two wills along with them. And if he got away with them—Well, then it's goodby for keeps to any hope of yours of ever coming to own this outfit!"

"Darn the outfit and all that goes with it!" she exclaimed passionately. "I don't care what happens to it now. It's just those two dear old men—"

"Why, shake!" cried Cole Cody, and shot his hand out, and before she knew it her hand had sped to a meeting with his, to be clasped tight, held hard.

Hand in hand, there was almost a smile in their eyes, though trouble lay back of it. Slowly their hands fell apart and her eyes drifted away.

"I guess I'll drift along," he said.

He was turning away when she called after him, sounding excited.

"Cole! It was Rance Waldron! I knew it at first and I know it better now! And I know how he found out about the wills! I told him myself! Oh, I was right about that other thing: Somehow you and I, or one of us, seem to be to blame for everything! When Rance Waldron was battering at our door, I called to him that I was going to hand over my will to Doc Joe the very first chance I got! I wish I had bit my tongue out first! Don't you see? He couldn't have known that the Judge—"

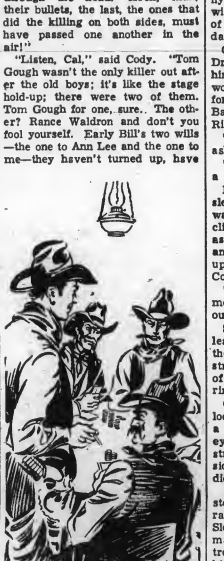
"But he would figure that if he had the one only, yours, he could maybe dicker! But don't you go blaming yourself, Ann Lee girl. I tell you things like this are either in the cards or not, and that's all there is to it."

"You are going to town?"

He hesitated, then shook his head.

Bill Cole Cody rode straight to the lonely, abandoned cabin in the mountain ravine to which he and Cal Roundtree had followed Rance Waldron and Tom Gough. He had no great hope of finding Waldron lingering on here now that the Judge and Doc Joe had been cut down and robbed, now that Tom Gough was dead and in all likelihood would be judged the sole highwayman and killer. Yet Rance must be somewhere, and Cody meant to find him, and here was as likely a place to look as any.

The shadows were long across the mountain slopes, the pines growing black in the deep dusk in the ravines, and there was no sign of life, no up-drifting smoke from the rock chimney when Cody came within sight of it. He dismounted and went to the door, his hand on the butt of his gun. The door was ajar; he threw it open and looked the place over, staring frowningly into its thickening gloom. He saw a pile of blankets on the one bunk; other blankets on the floor; some scraps of food on a sagging shelf. That was all.



He went back to his horse, rode out of the ravine and into the golden sunshine again, crossed the creek and struck across country toward town. It was his thought that he might possibly have word of Waldron there; if not, he could join Cal Roundtree and discuss the new setup with him.

Cody dismounted in front of the hotel, tied his horse at the hitching rail and moved softly and silently as others were moving, seeking some sign of Cal Roundtree. He was conscious of eyes following him and knew that he drew interest here at this hour because he was a stranger; because these men, steadily gathering in numbers, were distrustful of strangers.

Cal Roundtree was turning into a saloon, two friends flanking him, when he saw Cody; he said a word to his companions who went on into the Spread Eagle, and turned back to Cody.

"It was Tom Gough, all right," he said. "The Judge and old Doc fought it out with him like he'd know they would if he knew them at all. All three dead, but here's a sort of funny thing: The shot that killed Gough must have been fired the same split second that he finished off either Doc Joe or the Judge: both the old boys was shot through the head. Heck, man, their bullets, the last, the ones that did the killing on both sides, must have passed one another in the air!"

"Listen, Cal," said Cody. "Tom Gough wasn't the only killer out after the old boys; it's like the stage hold-up; there were two of them. Tom Gough for one, sure. The other? Rance Waldron and don't you fool yourself. Early Bill's two wills—the one to Ann Lee and the one to me—they haven't turned up, have

"The Judge and Doc Joe were killed today, Waldron," said Cody.

they? Not in the Judge's and Doc Joe's pockets, were they? Not in Tom Gough's?"

"Me, I don't know. I don't even get what you're driving at!"

Cody explained swiftly and Cal began to nod before he had finished.

"Rance Waldron is in town right now," he said, his brows puckering tight as he tried to make heads and tails of things. "He's in a back room at the hotel playing poker. I saw him there a while ago. Come ahead in and have a drink before you start anything. This wants a bit of thinking."

Cody nodded without saying anything and the two entered the saloon together to range up along the bar with Cal's two friends. They downed their liquor, the four of them, and stood rolling their cigarettes, grave, thoughtful men.

"We might mosey over to the hotel and see what things look like," suggested Cody.

There were several men in the hotel lobby, a greater number in the bar upon which a door opened at the side. At its rear was another door, standing perhaps a quarter open. It was a small room in yonder, private or semi-private for gentlemen who wished to withdraw for draw or stud.

With a look Cody asked of Cal Roundtree, "In there?" and with a look Cal answered, "Yes." Cody went to the door and pushed it open, Cal and the others keeping three or four paces behind him, stopping when he stopped.

"Hello, Waldron," said Cody.

Rance Waldron looked up from his game and shoved his chair back; he didn't make a move to rise and didn't remove his hands from the table top.

"Hello, Cody," he said. "What's wanted? If there's anything wrong with your eyes, I'm playing cards."

"The Judge and Doc Joe were killed today, Waldron," said Cody. "It was an ugly sort of killing from what I hear. Murder, folks are calling it."

"I heard about it," said Rance Waldron.

"Another man got his come-uppance the same time; a man name of Tom Gough. Maybe you knew him?"

"Maybe," he answered. "Friend of yours?"

"Who wants to know?" Waldron cocked up his brows.

"Been in town all day, Waldron?"

Rance laughed. There were two ways to take a thing like this; he had his choice. Rather than recognize the broad implication seriously, he elected to greet it as funny.

"I'd like to get along with the game, Mr. Cody," he said, sounding now like a man who meant to remain patient as long as he could, but whose patience was fast running out. "No, I haven't been in town all day. I rode in about two o'clock."

Cody heard Cal Roundtree's snort. "Now, Cody," said Rance, and chose to laugh again, "I'll thank you to get out of here."

Cody obliged him.

They had progressed as far as the lobby when a sharp, petulant, eager voice called,

"You, there, Roundtree! Call I want a word with you."

The speaker, wiping his mouth as he came out of the bar behind them, was a youngish man in high laced boots, with a bristle of a scrubby little black mustache, coatless, with his sleeves rolled up on a pair of hrswny, hairy arms, with large, dark and strikingly intelligent eyes.

Cal explained to Cole Cody, "It's Dr. Parke Evans. They sent for him over to Rim Rock as soon as word of a shooting got out, Doc Joe for once not being on tap here in Bald Eagle," and turned toward the Rim Rock doctor.

"Anything private, Doc?" he asked. "I got friends with me."

"Yes. It's private. And I'm in a hurry."

He led the way, rolling down his sleeves, to the stairway leading upward from the lobby, and Cal climbed along after him, wondering as others wondered, what Parke Evans could want with him. Half way up the staircase he called down to Cody,

"Stick around, Cody, and wait for me. I won't be long; then we'll ride out to the ranch together."

So Cole Cody waited. He stood leaning against a post, smoking a thoughtful cigarette, gazing abstractedly at the brightening glitter of the stars hanging over the hills rimming the valley.

Cal Roundtree came out. He looked to be in a daze; he was like a man walking in his sleep. His eyes were wide open; they stared straight at Cole Cody; their expression, or lack of expression, rather, did not alter.

"Hello, Cody," said Cal dully. He stopped and removed his hat and ran his fingers through his hair. Slowly his eyes narrowed to normalcy, but there remained a queer, troubled look in them. "Come ahead, kid," he said. "Let's go get our horses. Let's pile out of here for home."

The two strode along side by side and got their horses. They swung up into their saddles and headed down the road. By starlight nothing could be made of Cal's face, but his heavy silence was disquieting. Cody however held his peace. If a man wanted to keep his thoughts to himself, that was his affair.

"I got to do a bit of thinking," said Cal presently. "And I can't! I'm all tangled up; I'm rattled like no man ever was before. I got to tell you something, Cody; I got to tell somebody or I'll bust, and I'd rather it was you. But I don't know how much to spill and how much to hold back. Because I can't tell it all, get me? I got to hold part back! Maybe I'll go get somebody to cut my tongue out. Shut up a minute, and let me think; let me anyhow try to think."

They rode for ten or fifteen minutes, out across the floor of the valley, striking into the little rolling hills, before Cal spoke again.

"Like I said, Cody, I can't spill the whole sack o' beans, though I wish to God I could! And I could kill that hyena-laughing old Early Bill Cole—only the son-a-gun's dead already! Whoa! There I go again. Well, here's what I can tell you, and you better pull leather whilst you listen good, else you're apt to fall out'n your saddle."

And here is what Cal Roundtree held himself free to tell:

Dr. Parke Evans had led the way upstairs to a locked room; he had unlocked the door, motioned Cal Roundtree to go in, had then closed the door and stood outside, guarding against any interruption. On the far side of the room, with his back turned, a man was standing. The lamp was turned low; Cal did not make out at once who it was. But when the door had been closed, the man moved to the table where the lamp was and turned up the wick. He goggled as his first stroke of bewilderment smote him. Here in the flesh, looking very much alive and in fact as he had looked for the twenty years Cal had known him, save for a terrible grimness on his face, was old Doc Joe.

Doc Joe lifted a sudden warning hand to forestall any explosive utterance from the astounded Cal Roundtree.

"No loud talking, Cal," he said incisively.

Cal swallowed.

"Me? Me, I can't talk at all!" Then a tinge of color, angry color, came into his darkly weathered face. "What in hell's this mean?" he demanded.

THE APPEARANCES AFTER THE RESURRECTION

LESSON TEXT—John 20:19-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am alive for evermore.—Revelation 1:18.

The most important day in all history was the first day of the week following the crucifixion of Christ. Then He appeared to His disciples as their risen Lord. All the hope of all mankind for all eternity depended on His victory over death.

By eventide news had come to the disciples of His resurrection, and half in hope and half in uncertainty they had gathered to talk over these matters. Fearful of the Jews, they met behind closed doors. All at once He was there—the Lord Himself. What a wonderful change came over them as He made Himself known to them. They went

I. From Fear to Gladness (vv. 19, 20).

Their eyes had been upon their enemies and they were afraid. Now they "were glad, when they saw the Lord." We need to learn that lesson. If we look within we are ashamed and discouraged. If we look around us we are confused and fearful. If we look to Christ we are glad and strong.

Notice that their joy was not based only on an emotional impulse. They saw Christ in His resurrection body—the very One who had died. The evidence was there before them. Now they could understand the things He had said to them. The whole realm of spiritual truth was now in focus again, and they were glad. So are we when we really see Christ.

II. From Weakness to Strength (vv. 21-23).

The disciples who were called to be witnesses for Christ had lost their testimony when He died on the cross. Unbelief and discouragement had so weakened them that they were in hiding instead of being out proclaiming His truth.

Now the risen and victorious One sent them forth with the Father's blessing. They were empowered by the Holy Spirit, and given great authority (v. 23). Note that it was given not to one man or to the leaders, but to all the disciples. It was "a declarative right, and it belongs to every true disciple. Those who have received the gift of the Holy Spirit are in a position to declare to men that their sincere repentance brings forgiveness" (Douglass). The opposite is also true.

III. From Doubt to Faith (vv. 24-28).

Thomas, who had doubts and who cultivated his doubts by his stubborn attitude (v. 25), did himself and his brethren a serious disservice by being absent from the meeting on the evening of the first Easter Day. When he did appear he had only doubts to contribute. Let those who make a custom of absenting themselves from the place and hour of service beware lest they do likewise.

His doubts were honest ones—and God always meets such questions, honestly and intelligently. When the evidence was before him, the heart of Thomas leaped the chasm from doubt to faith in one cry of complete devotion (v. 28).

It is significant that down through the ages many doubters have been won to Christ by the proof of the resurrection of Christ, which is by the testimony of historical scholars "the best authenticated fact in all history." The risen Christ stands before men today and says, "Be not faithless but believing." May many respond with Thomas, "My Lord and my God."

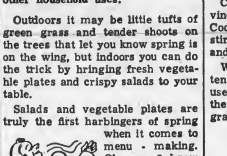
IV. From Death to Life (vv. 29-31).

Christ arose from the dead not just to show that He had power to do so, but, as Paul puts it, "for our justification" (Rom. 4:25). The reality and dependability of the entire plan of salvation hinged on the return of Christ from the dead. Had the grave held Him, His claims of deity and of the ability to forgive sin would have been entirely discredited. Because He lives we shall live.

The experience of regeneration is therefore likened in Scripture to a passing from death to life (John 5:24). Thomas saw the Lord, and believing, passed from doubt to faith. We cannot see Him now, but we have the blessed privilege of believing and thus receiving life (vv. 29, 31).

This was the message which the now radiant and empowered disciples went out to preach. The book of Acts tells us how effectively they did it, and shows how much of their preaching centered on the fact of the resurrection.

The command and the commission was not to them alone, but also to all of us who believe in Christ. May God take out of us the fear of men, overcome our weakness, and send us out with renewed faith to make this life-giving message known to our fellow men.



Crisp, Cool Salads Bid Spring Welcome

Use a lemon juice dressing for these orange slices, salad greens and tomatoes, thus saving oil for other household uses.

Outdoors it may be little tufts of green grass and tender shoots on the trees that let you know spring is on the wing, but indoors you can do the trick by bringing fresh vegetable plates and crispy salads to your table.

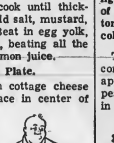
Salads and vegetable plates are truly the first harbingers of spring when it comes to menu - making. Oh, yes, I know you've been serving salads and vegetables during winter, but with spring you have many more choices and fresh colors from which to choose.

Several attractive combinations of vegetables on a single platter—or salads—can tide you over many meatless days. Then, too, they'll bring life-quickening vitamins and minerals to your diet to help get rid of whatever winter's cobwebs you may have accumulated in your system!

Speaking of salads brings up the problem of dressings, and with that the scarcity of fats for salad oils. There are several alternatives, the first of which is lemon juice either alone or with a bit of sugar as dressing for fruit salads.

Many of you perhaps like simple vinegar dressing with just a touch of salt and pepper. This perks up flavors in vegetables, inexpensively, too!

Your french dressing of course can be made with mineral oil in the absence of other oils. Long used in reduction diets, mineral oil makes a nice dressing for light spring salads. It is not absorbed by the body, so if you're trying to gain weight, be sure to include other fats for body use.



If it's mayonnaise you like, here's a recipe which requires only a half cup of oil, and a single egg yolk.

Cooked Mayonnaise.
1 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons flour
½ cup water
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon mustard
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 egg yolk
½ cup salad oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Melt butter, blend in flour. Add water slowly and cook until thickened. Cool, then add salt, mustard, pepper, paprika. Beat in egg yolk, then add oil slowly, beating all the while. Last add lemon juice.

Vegetable Plate.

Stuff tomato with cottage cheese and chives and place in center of platter. On either side place a mound of crisp carrot strips and asparagus, cooked or canned, with a ring of lemon rind. Potato salad and crisp cole slaw complete the plate.

Cole Slaw Dressing.
(For 2½ cups cabbage)
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1½ tablespoons sugar

Lynn Says:

Vitamins Plus or Minus? It all depends upon how you handle them. To retain maximum amounts of vitamins in cooked foods, use as little water as possible—just enough to prevent from sticking.

Get on your mark, start quickly. Not a track race, but a vitamin race. You start with boiling water for cooking, and cook rapidly—thus cutting cooking time to a minimum and saving precious food values.

Covered utensils without stirring are prescribed. Stirring and uncovered utensils put air into foods and destroy vitamins.

Avoid violent, furious boiling. This is modern, streamlined, protective cookery—to preserve valuable vitamins.

This Week's Menu

Vegetable Platter: Tomato Stuffed with Cottage Cheese, Carrot Strips, Asparagus, Cole Slaw, Potato Salad
Hot Biscuits Honey
Cherry Pie Beverage

6 tablespoons cream
3 tablespoons lemon juice

Combine ingredients in order given and mix thoroughly with cole slaw.

If hot slaw is your favorite dish, here is the ideal dressing for it:

Hot Slaw.
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup cold water
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
3 cups shredded cabbage

Combine egg yolks, water and vinegar. Add butter, sugar and salt. Cook on low heat until thickened, stirring constantly. Add cabbage and reheat.

With the absence of pineapple often these days, we like something to use to give tartness to salads. In the following recipe you can use grapefruit to good advantage:

Grapefruit and Carrot Salad.
(Serves 8)
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup hot water
½ cup grapefruit juice
¼ cup vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups grated carrots
½ cup chopped grapefruit

Add hot water to gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add fruit juice and vinegar. Chill until slightly thickened. Add carrots, grapefruit and salt. Pour into mold which has been rinsed with cold water. Chill until firm. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise or french dressing.

A heavy dinner calls for a green leafy salad with loads of crunchiness:

Lettuce-Spinach Salad.
(Serves 6 to 8)
1 head lettuce
½ pound spinach
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 hard-cooked eggs
1 cup sour cream
2 tablespoons vinegar

Chill and chop spinach and lettuce. Add salt, pepper, vinegar and chopped hard-cooked eggs to ½ cup of the sour cream. Just before serving, add to spinach, lettuce and remaining sour cream.

This vegetable plate tastes as delightful as it looks and adds plenty of spring color to your table. Stuffed tomato, carrot strips, asparagus, cole slaw and potato salad are used.

The cottage cheese in this salad contributes calcium to the diet, the apples and celery give vitamins and peanuts are a surprise in flavor and in their contribution to nutrition:

Apple-in-Cottage-Cheese Salad.
3 apples, coarsely diced
1 cup diced celery
½ cup diced cucumber
¼ cup sharp french dressing
Lettuce
1 pint cottage cheese
½ cup chopped, salted peanuts
Mayonnaise

Wash and dice unpeeled apples. Toss apples, diced celery, cucumber in french dressing, until well coated. On each salad plate place crisp lettuce, and then with a spoon shape ½ cup cottage cheese into a ring. Fill ring with apple mixture, and sprinkle with peanuts. Top with mayonnaise or a fluffy salad dressing.

Carrot, Cabbage, Peanut Salad
(Serves 16)
4 cups carrots, shredded
3 cups cabbage, shredded
3 cups diced, unpeeled apples
2 cups peanuts
Cooked salad dressing

Have all ingredients cold. Combine in order given and add just enough salad dressing to combine lightly together. Garnish with sprigs of parsley and chopped peanuts.

TUBERCULOSIS

Some years ago while visiting a tuberculosis sanitarium, I came across a patient, an amateur heavyweight boxer, who calmly informed me that he expected to stay two years in order to allow his lung to become completely healed. At that time the pneumothorax method, in which gas pressure is used to cause the infected lung to rest, was used mostly in advanced cases.

Dr. Barton

More recently, other methods of resting the lung by causing it to collapse have come into use, such as cutting the nerve that controls the lung and removing a portion of several ribs.

As many patients are naturally anxious to get "cured" quickly, the question naturally arises as to why shouldn't these short methods of resting the lung be always used instead of the long months and years of bed rest only.

In order to answer this question satisfactorily, Drs. A. L. Kruger, B. P. Potter and A. E. Jaffin, Jersey City, N. J., analyzed 185 cases of early tuberculosis seen in the Hudson County Tuberculosis hospital and clinics between 1930 and 1939.

From their findings, these physicians agree with those physicians who advise early collapse treatment with "advanced" tuberculosis.

What about the use of collapse treatment in the beginning or early cases. In early tuberculosis they believe that rest, rest in bed, is the treatment most needed to bring about recovery. The disease was stopped or arrested in 78 per cent of these early cases by bed rest.

Treatment by collapse—gas pressure, nerve cutting, removal of ribs—should be used in cases only when the disease gets worse, tubercle germs are found in the sputum, where there is no improvement after a long period of bed rest, or when hemorrhages occur.

As there are many patients who think bed rest treatment is too slow, and perhaps members of the family who think that treatment at home or the outdoor clinic is as effective as hospital or sanitarium treatment, I think the findings of these research physicians should be made known.

Treatment for Ringing of Ears

A few years ago when an individual had tinnitis—ringing in the ears—it was felt that, as there was often some deafness present, the deafness was the cause of the tinnitis. Accordingly, the ear specialist treated the ear for any condition that might be causing the deafness, and when improvement in hearing resulted there was often some decrease in the tinnitis.

Among the causes of tinnitis and partial loss of hearing are (a) wax or cerumen in the outer ear lying against the eardrum, (b) partial blocking of the eustachian tube which carries the air from the back of the throat to the middle ear against inner side of eardrum, and (c) too much liquid in the tissues adjoining the balancing canals of the ears. This latter condition also causes dizziness, nausea and vomiting, and partial loss of hearing; it is called Meniere's disease.

The treatment for these three conditions causing tinnitis is:

1. The removal of the wax by placing olive oil or half strength hydrogen peroxide in the ear, allowing it to remain for a few minutes, and then driving out the softened wax with a hot baking soda solution, using a powerful syringe.

2. The eustachian tube is opened by means of an air syringe which not only blows the tube open but removes to some extent the moisture which is sticking the lining surfaces of the tube together.

3. The treatment of Meniere's disease is by cutting down on all liquids and table salt and avoiding or cutting down on salty foods. Foods to be avoided are bread, salted butter, crackers, eggs, all corned, pickled, smoked or salted foods. Foods that are low in salt and can be eaten are apples, asparagus, cabbage, lettuce, grapes, lemons, oranges, honey, jelly, unsalted bread and butter.

That eyestrain could cause tinnitis will come as a surprise to many of us, but Dr. J. R. Noyes, Brockton, Mass., in "Laryngoscope" states that he has relieved several patients of annoying symptoms by correcting eyestrain due to short-sightedness, and astigmatism.

A.—Your physician can refer you to an orthopedic specialist who will give usual treatment. Pott's disease is usually due to tuberculosis and is cured by rest, plaster cast, sometimes surgery.

BEDTIME STORY

by THORNTON W. BURGESS

CHATTERER HAS A DREADFUL THOUGHT

CHATTERER THE RED SQUIRREL was almost too frightened to think. He knew that the end must come soon unless something wonderful happened. The simple little tricks he had tried had not fooled Shadow the Weasel at all. He was right in the very next tree, and Chatterer didn't even dare stop to look behind. Then an idea popped into his head. It just seemed to come without any thinking on his part. It was a dreadful idea—a truly dreadful idea. At first Chatterer wouldn't let himself think of it at all. But, little by little, he did think of it, and the more he thought of it the less dreadful it seemed. That is a way bad thoughts have—the longer you let them stay the less bad they seem. And it was so with Chatterer now. What was the dreadful thought? Why, it was to lead Shadow the Weasel over to the home of Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel, who, you know, is own cousin to Chatterer.

"If he finds Happy Jack at home he will forget me."

"If he finds Happy Jack at home he'll forget all about me," thought Chatterer, "for Happy Jack is bigger and fatter than I am and will make a better dinner. Of course, I don't like to do it; it really is a very dreadful thing to do. No, sir, I don't like to do it; but—but it is everybody for himself these days, and I—I—can't run much longer. Of course, it won't be really my fault if Happy Jack gets killed, because all I'll do is to simply run past his door. Then, if Shadow chooses to go in there why—why—well, it won't be my fault."

Now, of course, Chatterer knew perfectly well that this wasn't true. But Chatterer is a coward, and he was thinking in just the way that cowards think. He knew that it was his own fault that he was in such dreadful danger himself—that if he had minded his own business instead of tormenting Bobby Coon by waking him from sleep Shadow the Weasel would not have heard him and so been able to find him. But, like all cowards, Chatterer wasn't brave enough to face the results of his own fault and now he was ready to see some one else suffer for what he had done. A little, still voice down inside told him that what he was thinking of was a dreadful and cowardly thing, but he tried not to listen to it.

"Happy Jack is bigger and stronger than I am, and I shouldn't wonder if he could fight Shadow and whip him. In fact, I am almost sure he can," thought Chatterer. Yet all the time he knew that Happy Jack couldn't, for just as likely as not he would be taking a nap, and it would be all over before he knew he was in danger. You see, Chatterer was just trying to fool himself.

"I wish I had thought of it before," he panted. "It's a long way over to Happy Jack's house, and I may not be able to get there before Shadow catches me."

But the thought that he might, he just might, escape gave him new strength, and for a little while he actually gained on Shadow the Weasel. He didn't stay in the tree tops now, but ran along the ground as fast as ever he could in the direction of Happy Jack's house. He was not half way there when, looking over his shoulder, he saw Shadow bounding along with great leaps just a little way behind him, and he knew that in a few more leaps Shadow would have him. Shadow could go faster on the ground than he could. He gave one despairing glance in the tree tops where he had raced and played and been happy so long, and which he felt sure now he would never play in again. Near the top of one of them was a big brown bunch. Chatterer's heart gave a little throb of hope. He saw what he thought might be a last chance.

So Long, Pal

While drilling recruits recently at an eastern army camp, a sergeant picked one rookie for practice in giving orders. The company, at the time, was marching toward a bushy area on a steep hillside. "Give them 'Rear March,'" directed the sergeant. The recruit gulped.

"Give them 'Column Left!'" Silence. "Tell them to halt." Silence.

"Well, Private Jones," said the sergeant resignedly, "if you can't stop them, at least tell the boys good-by."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Indians of the Amazon River region made the first rubber overshoes, which were imported into the U. S. in 1800.

Mistakes of many kinds can cut into the rubber conservation program, as is indicated by the fact that normally 180,000 pounds of rubber was used annually in the manufacture of pencil mark erasers.

Before vulcanization was discovered in 1839 rubber goods hardened like rock in winter and melted in summer. Early rubber goods manufacturers suffered severe financial losses because of the unreliability of their products. That was many years ago.

A check of the tires on 500 vehicles recently disclosed that 80% were under-inflated, even to the extent of from 10 to 13 pounds. This is a heavy waste of rubber because it has been found that 30 per cent under-inflation permits the return of only 74 per cent of the mileage built into a tire.

Temperamental Foxes

Silver foxes are extremely delicate and temperamental animals, says Collier's. On Canadian farms where they are bred for their fur, their diets are worked out to the point where, for example, a 20-pound fox is fed exactly 533 calories a day. Visitors are usually excluded because the animals are so easily disturbed that even the sight of a strange face may irritate them sufficiently to affect their skin.

Here's Easy, Quick Way to Make Draw Curtains With Your Fixtures

IT IS easy to make draw curtains with the fixtures you have, plus a pair of large screw-eyes, some wood or brass rings, and about five yards of cord.

The screw-eyes are placed just under the hooks for the curtain rods; then run the cord through the screw-eye at the right; then through the rings, knotting it to the left ring at center; then through the rings and the screw-eye at the left; and back through the rings, knotting it to the right ring at center.

Now pass the cord through the rings and the right screw-eye and then make the tassels. Sew safety pins to back of curtains so they may be fastened to the rings.

Why Creased Pants

It is interesting to note that the crease down the front of trousers is the result of a royal accident. King Edward VII of England, having slipped from his horse and fallen into a ditch, a local tailor was hurriedly asked to supply fresh trousers. These he so tightly packed in a box that each leg was neatly creased. The king "adopted" creased trousers, and thus started a lasting fashion.

Ukrainians Are Russians With Their Own Republic

The Ukrainians are Russians, and they have a republic of their own which is a constituent member of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. By origin, however, they differ from the "Great Russians," and they have their own language. Their land is one of the most fertile in the world; hence the German desire to conquer it.

Ukrainians were often in conflict with the Czars of Russia, but the disappearance of their native aristocracy has demolished most of their nationalism.

The Hope of Death Kept Spark of Life in Recruit

The army medico was making his cheerful rounds of sick bay on the huge transport that had been working for several days through the long, oily swells of a rough sea. One case was nothing more (or less, depending upon the individual point of view) than an old-fashioned attack of seasickness.

"Well, Private Jenks," boomed the doctor heartily, "it looks to me like you're not going to die after all."

Private Jenks opened a horrified eye, to stare at the doc.

"Not going to die!" he wailed. "Gosh, doctor, I thought I was. That was the only thing that kept me alive."

Soldiers.. ON THE TRANSPORTATION FRONT

YOU hear more and more today about the ground crews—the boys back-stage who keep them ticking . . . and upon whose skill and energy successful prosecution of war and production so much depends.

Just such groups compose the maintenance forces of Greyhound Lines. They, too, are the unsung-behind-the-scene stalwarts to whom we owe so much of our ability to "keep 'em rolling."

Yep—they are all fine performers . . . intelligent, hard-working, loyal . . . specialists as a result of years of training. These boys are in there swinging with both hands to squeeze every ounce of performance out of existing equipment—irreplaceable equipment. For war's extra burden on transportation takes heavy toll and brings hard hours to keep Greyhound fleets up to Greyhound's standards of safety and comfort.

You can just lay your "hard-earned" on these fellows to do a bang-up job. They're real soldiers . . . good, solid Americans who have shown a willingness to work like fury, when few will ever know the importance of their labors.

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Second War Loan Drive To Begin April 12th

Thirteen Billion Dollars to be Raised in the United States by the Sale of Bonds.

On April 12th a campaign of solicitation for the sale of War Bonds will begin all over the nation to raise Thirteen Billion Dollars to finance the war. Boone County's quota has not as yet been assigned but it is safe to predict that our quota will be approximately 50% greater than our quota last December when the quota for the nation was Nine Billion Dollars. This means that every one must subscribe for larger amounts than during the December drive and many who did not subscribe the last time will be asked to lend a hand this time, even though one may have to borrow on future earnings in order to subscribe. A. B. Renaker, Chairman of the Victory Fund Committee and A. D. Yelton, Chairman of the War Savings Committee of Boone County will serve as Co-Chairman of this April drive. These gentlemen are willing and anxious to work with all precinct Chairmen of both the Victory Fund Committee and War Savings Committees. The following will serve as Precinct Chairmen and are the same as served in the December drive; C. D. Benson, Burlington; John L. Conner, Hebron and Bullittsville; C. Liston Hempfling, Constance; C. E. McNeelf, Grant; C. F. Blankenbeker, Florence; Miss Lillian Bristow, Union; C. W. Thompson, Walton; G. C. Ransom, Verona; R. L. Green, Beaver; Thomas Huff, Hamilton; W. H. Presser, Carlton; H. R. Hensley, Petersburg. The War Savings Committee is expected to join with the above committee in this drive. It is planned to appoint a woman in each precinct to work with the precinct Chairmen as soon as the quota is announced for Boone County. The County committee will be called together shortly to map out plans of this campaign for a house to house canvas.

The following bonds will be offered in addition to the Series E, F, and G, bonds: A 2% bond maturing September 15, 1952, callable in 1950, in denominations of $500.00, $1,000.00, $5,000.00, $100,000.00 and $1,000,000.00. All types of investors may subscribe, including banks.

A 2½% bond maturing June 15, 1969, callable in 1964, in denominations of the same as the 2% bond. All types of investors may subscribe to this issue except banks.

Tax Savings Notes will continue to be offered also.

The 2% and 2½% bonds will be dated April 15th and no accrued interest will be charged during the drive on subscriptions of $1000.00 or less, over this amount accrued interest is charged from April 15th.

The soldier boy is being asked to GIVE something, we are only asked to LEND our money to our Government at a good rate of interest with the principal returned to us at maturity. Lets do our bit by subscribing our limit to these bonds and put Boone County "Over the Top" this time.

Work On Airport To Begin This Month

Work on the Airport to be located on the Price Pike near Florence, Ky., is expected to start within a few days.

The contract was awarded to Frank Mashuda of Milwaukee on his negotiated bid of $1,858,105.90.

The runways are to be constructed of 16-inch stabilized gravel with a penetration coat of il, a three inch surface of hot-mixed asphalt, and a final surface of oil and sand, a total thickness of 18 inches.

The asphalt for this construction may be provided by the Latonia Refinding Corporation, a subsidiary of Standard Oil.

The contract calls for the construction of the Airport to be completed in 150 days after the work is begun.

Federal sums totaling $2,325,000 have been set aside for the airport. This amount is in addition to money put up by Kenton County for the purchase of the land and the construction of the hangers and administration building. Approximately $125,000 has been advanced by the county so far, Tohnhorst said.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Rouse received word Thursday from their son, Asa M. Rouse in Utica, N. Y. that he has a new baby girl.

Gallatin County Boy Receives Wings

On Saturday morning, March 27th, Aviation Cadet Giles K. Riley, graduated from the United States Army Flying School, at Roswell, New Mexico, receiving his Silver Wings and Commission as Second Lieutenant. Lieutenant Riley is the first youth from Gallatin County to receive this high honor. Giles, is the thir son of Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Riley of Sparta, Kentucky, and enlisted in the Air Corps in early February 1942. He received his primary training at Santa Ana, California; had practical training in flying in the famous Mirs Loma Academy, at Oxnard, Calif. He later returned to Santa Ana, and then on to Roswell, New Mexico in the Advanced School for flying. Emma Jean Riley, employed in the War Department at Cinnati, Ohio made the trip to Roswell, New Mexico to pin the Silver Wings and Bars on her brother, Giles. She enlisted in the WAVES, six weeks ago and will receive her final physical examination on her return to Cincinnati, from New Mexico.

William P. Riley, the oldest son on Mr. and Mrs Riley also a member of the U. S. Air Corps, in the Administrative Branch, graduated from the A & M. College, in Stillwater, Oklahoma, on February 20th with high honors as a student ranking Excellent; he was classified Chief Clerk in the Alaskan Transport, and is now stationed at Las Vegas, New Mexico, where his young wife joined him on last Thursday to make the trip to Roswell, to attend the Commencement Exercises of his younger brother, Giles. William P. Riley was employed in Washington, D. C. for four years with the U. S. Civil Service.

K. E. A. Cancels Annual Convention

At a called meeting of the Board of Directors of the Kentucky Education Association Saturday, March 20th, the question of the cancellation of the formal program of the K. E. A. convention was discussed.

It was the opinion of the Board that in view of the continued efforts of the government to curtail gatherings, which would involve travel, that as a patriotic measure the convention should not be held this year.

It was further stated that facilities for entertaining such a convention in the city of Louisville in the month of April would be entirely too inadequate, - that the crowded conditions of hotels and the consequent inability of members to obtain rooms would make it impossible for many delegates to come.

Further reasons cited were the fact that service for hotels and restaurants has been so hampered and that the rationing of food supplies has been so necessary that the entertainment of large delegations is no longer practicable.

The Board, therefore, authorized the cancellation of the convention and provided for the holding of the meeting of the Delegate Assembly, the Planning Board, and the Board of Directors. These groups will take care of the business of the Association and establish the machinery for carrying on the efforts to keep the schools in Kentucky open and to provide the teachers of Kentucky with a living wage.

Harold S. Conrad Now 2nd Lieutenant in U. S. Marine Corp.

Harold S. Conrad, son of John Conrad of Walton, Ky., has been raised from a Sergant to a 2nd Lt. in the U. S. Marine Corps. Harold has been in the Marines nearly four years and has seen plenty of action since Pearl Harbor.

Even though he has been far away and busy, he keeps in touch with his family and friends. We're sure that the people here are proud of "Connie" and know that he deserved this advancement.

Wherever you are "Connie" the best of luck to you and keep up the good work.

Dual Birthday Celebration.

Mrs. E. Bruce Wallace delightfully entertained on Sunday with a dual birthday dinner complimenting her husban, Mr. E. Bruce Wallace and her pastor, Rev. C. G. Dearing whose birthdays are on the same day.

The two large cakes were decorated with yellow and green trimmings, the favors were yellow and green baskets filled with nuts and mints and the center boquet was yellow forsythia, with all a very pretty table was laid. The main feature of the dinner was the turkey, baked to a queen's taste, and all the accompaning menu.

Others enjoying this occassion were the Rev. Dearing's family, Mrs. C. G. Dearing and daughters, Ruth and Louise, Mrs. D. B. Wallace, and Mrs. Martha Wallace.

Walton Rollerdrome Now Open to Skaters.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Pruett have purchased the Walton Skating Rink from Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Grubbs, located in the Mayhugh building in North Walton on Dixie Highway. This is a well know couple who have many friends in Walton and the surrounding territory.

The Skating Rink is now open, a fine place for the young folks as well as the older ones to mingle together and enjoy this sport. Come out and bring your friends. If you do not skate, you will enjoy watching the others.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Marshall of Edwards Avenue had as their guest, recently, Mr. William Marshall of Cincinnati, a brother of Mr. Marshall.

Farmers To Report ACP Performance

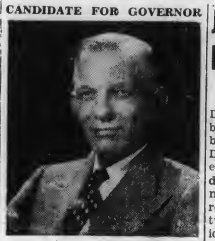
In step with wartime's demand for greater personal responsibility, farmers throughout Kentucky this year will report their performance under the Agricultural Conservation Program, said M. D. Royse, State Chairman of Kentucky Agricultural Adjustment Agency. Last year, reporters employed by local Agricultural Conservation Associations determined performance on the farm.

"Through this new system we expect to save man hours, tires and gasoline, since it will not be necessary for an AAA representative to visit all farms", stated Mr. Royse. "Farmers will report the acreages of war crops and special crops and the extent of production practices carried out on their farms. They will be expected to make measurements where acreages have not been ascertained. Careful estimates will be acceptable for the acreage of corn, wheat and most production practices.

Mr. Royse pointed out that farmers should determine their crop acreages before the crop are planted.

"In making their measurements farmers should exchange services with their neighbors," he said.

Community committeemen of the AAA will assist farmers in preparing their performance reports. If the farmers have their acreage records available, the reports can be prepared in a short time. The report forms will be simple, yet inclusive.



Farmers who carry out soil-building practices later in the year will make an additional report toward the end of the program year which closes in the East Central States on December 31, 1943.

In order to obtain an over-all summary of the general success of the new farmer-reporting system, committeemen will review all reports and will check several farms in their communities. In cases where errors are plainly evident, the committeemen will also make special check-ups.

Notice—

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will meet Friday afternoon at 2:30 at the home of Mrs. Lulu Hudson. All members are requested to be present and to bring a friend with them.

J. Lyter Donaldson Enters Governor Race

Frankfort, Ky., April 1—J. Lyter Donaldson, Carrollton attorney, banker and public official formally became a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor today. In becoming a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination Donaldson yesterday resigned as chairman of the Kentucky State Highway Commission.

Donaldson who by his announcement becomes one of the leading contenders for the Democratic nomination is 52 years old and was born in Carrollton April 10, 1891, the son of Judge J. A. and Mrs. Susie Donaldson.

Donaldson's father who died in 1930 had served as county attorney and county judge of Carroll county and had represented the Carroll county district in the state senate. His father founded the First National Bank of Carrollton in 1881. The bank had only two presidents since its organization, Donaldson's father and himself, Donaldson becoming president after his father's death in 1930.

The candidate for governor has a lengthy record as a public official. He served as county attorney of Carroll county from 1921 until late in 1930 when he resigned to become a member of the Kentucky State Highway Commission. He served as a member of the commission from 1930 until January 1936. With the election of Governor Keen Johnson he was appointed chairman of the commission in January 1940 acting in this capacity until his resignation yesterday.

During his first tenure on the road body Donaldson served as a member of a committee which handled the details of financing and building the present system of Kentucky toll bridges.

Donaldson was educated in the public schools of Carroll county and later attended Virginia Military Institute, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Center College and Cumberland University where he received his law degree in 1913.

He immediately entered the practice of law with his father and one of his brothers. The firm continues today under the name of G. A. and J. L. Donaldson. In addition to his banking and legal connections Donaldsin also supervises the operation of three large farms in Carroll County.

Donaldson married his childhood sweetheart, Miss Jessie Hill, of Carrollton, in 1913 the year of his graduation from law school and his entry into the general practice of law. They do not have any children. He is a member of the Carrollton Presbyterian church and has been active in the business and civic affairs of Carroll county for many years. He has served as treasurer for the Caroll county Chapter of the Red Cross since 1916 and holds that position today.

Donaldson in addition to his brother G. A. Donaldson associated with him in the practice of law has one sister, Mrs. Velma Cochran, and one other brother, Dr. Allen Donaldson, both of Carrollton, Donaldson is the youngest member of his family.

Hamilton—Caldwell

The marriage of Robert W. Hamilton and Miss Katherine Leonora Caldwell was solemnized Thursday afternoon, March 18th at the First Presbyterian church of Paris, Ky., with the minister, Dr. Clodfetter officiating.

The bride's attendant was her sister, Mrs. Chas. Brook Huls, the groom had as his best man, his brother, Fred Hamilton.

The bride was given in marirage by her brother, Martin Caldwell.

Mrs Hamilton is the daughter of Mr. Orin Clyde Caldwell of Robinson, Ill. The groom is the son of Mrs. J. L. Hamilton and the late Mr. Hamilton.

He is associated with Hinton-Turner Funeral Service of Paris, Ky.

The wedding was very quiet with only the nearest relatives attending.

The guests included Mrs C. B. Huls, Mrs. J. L. Hamilton, Mr. Orin C. Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hamilton, Mrs. Harry W. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Caldwell and Mrs. J. S. Trisler.

Mr. Hamilton and his bride are residing in Paris, Ky.

Recruiting Officer Returns to Sea Duty

Local Navy recruiting officers are shown above giving Chief Turret Capt. C. H. Cramer, 37, Milan, Ind., a "good luck" send-off as he turns over his charge of the Covington Navy Recruiting Station to Specialist First Class J. M. Smith, after receiving orders from the Navy Department, Washington, to "return to sea duty."

Capt. Cramer, a veteran Navy man of 16 years service, opened the local recruiting station March 4, 1941, and since that time more than 1,200 recruits have been enlisted. He has become well-known throughout the northern Kentucky area through his many appearances at civic and social gatherings as a speaker. His numerous addresses have impaired knowledge of the many opportunities offered by the Navy to young men both in peace and war time.

While stationed in Covington, Capt. Cramer and his wife and son resided in Erlanger. During that time he became a member of the Covington Aerie of Eagles.

Capt. Cramer left Saturday, March 27th to report to Navy officials at Washington, D. C., before leaving the country.

Specialist First Class Smith, 37, formerly of Burlington, Ky., enlisted in the Navy last October. He now resides with his wife, Mrs. Margaret Smith and their young daughter, at 124 Garrard Street, Covington. He began his local supervision Saturday.

Recruiting officers who will remain on the station personnel under Smith's charge include Specialist First Class J. W. Savely, Park Hills, who enlisted in the service last November; O. D. Reeves, Dayton, Ky., who enlisted last September; C. R. Franklin, Cincinnati, who enlisted last October, and Yoeman Second Class A. S. Hieatt, Lexington, Ky., who has been in the service for 18 months.

The Covington Navy recruiting station is located in Room 8 in the basement of the Covington Federal Building, Seventh and Scott Streets.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. and British Teamwork in Tunisia Forces Definite Shift of Nazi Strategy; Moscow-Bryansk Drive Ended: Russia; Fortresses Smash Jap Base at Rabaul

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

TUNISIA:
Big Punch

Working as a team, Allied armies have thrown their big punch at the Axis in Tunisia.

With Allied planes flying over the southern front in waves bombing and strafing the enemy, the British 8th army opened a powerful assault against the Mareth line. Units of this army smashed through the left side of the Axis positions and raced to within 20 miles of Gabes, a vital communications center for the enemy.

At the same time, Lieut. Gen. George Patton led his armored American forces into Maknassy, which stands 20 miles from the Gabes coastal area. Patton's men held their positions despite the fierce counterfire of German dive bombers.

In the welter of fighting, it appeared as though the British were succeeding in herding the Germans back up the coast, while the Americans were driving eastward to cut off the retreat from the rear. Enjoying air superiority, the Allies claim to have bagged 24 Axis planes in the early stages of the fighting to a loss of seven of their own.

KISKA:
Jap Air Base

The silence shrouding Japanese activities on Kiska island in the Aleutians was broken with word of America's stepped-up air offensive designed primarily to prevent the enemy from accomplishing the task of building an air field on the mountainous island base.

Almost three times as many raids were made in March as in February. The Japs are working 24 hours a day to construct a flight strip from which they can operate land planes. Previously such an installation had been considered impossible, due to the rough nature of the land. Construction of the field would permit the Japs to do a much better job of defending Kiska. From there, too, they might try to raid the American base in the Andreanoff islands.

SILENT TREATMENT:
For Argentina

When Vice President Wallace went no further into South America than to Chile, natives of Argentina began to really wake up to the fact that Washington was handing them a good dose of the "silent treatment." Comment on Wallace's trip became general throughout the country and the government went so far as to issue an official explanation—that it had been learned in Washington that Wallace was visiting only the West coast of South America on this trip.

Argentina, major food producing nation, received no mention in plans for the United Nations' forthcoming agricultural conference and this, too, caused wide discussion of America's policy toward the republic.

Citizens of Argentina realize that their government is being handled this way because of its policy of failing to cast in completely with the United Nations in political and military action against the Axis.

RUSSIA:
Deeds, Few Words

Even while the Germans were claiming new gains in the area west of Kursk, 120 miles north of Kharkov, Moscow communiques told of beaten Nazi forces up and down the line running from Smolensk to Rostov.

Russian dispatches told of strong German forces which had smashed against the Moscow-Bryansk rail trunk. The Nazis were reported to have lost 7,000 officers and men in killed alone. The Russians said the Nazi offensive had ceased.

In their own offensive west of Moscow toward Smolensk, the Red army captured an additional number of populated places. On the Donets river front, far to the south, the Russians fought defensive engagements with German tanks and infantry in the Belgorod area. Belgorod, about 60 miles northeast of Kharkov, is held by the Germans.

For the first time in weeks the Russians announced an advance in the Kuban area of the Caucasus. There they captured the district center and large railway station of Slavyanskaya, 45 miles northeast of Novorossisk.

STEEL:
And Faked Tests

Charges of crookedness vs. patriotism were aired before a senate investigating committee when officers and employees of the Carnegie-Illinois steel corporation acknowledged that tests had been faked on steel produced by its Irvin, Pa., plant to fill war orders.

Steel company officials steadfastly denied there was any motive except patriotism—a desire to win the war. Chairman Harry S. Truman of Missouri said he considered the practice "just plain crookedness and cheating on the government."

J. Lester Perry, president of the corporation, testified that the "regrettable failure" to carry out testing procedures on steel plates for the navy, maritime commission and lend-lease was not known to the higher management and declared he intended to "clear it up."

250 JAP PLANES:
Blasted at Rabaul

The Japanese base at Rabaul, New Britain, shuddered under its third heaviest raid of the war when a strong force of Flying Fortresses dropped 54 tons of bombs on more than 250 Jap planes trapped on the ground.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported that "a substantial proportion" of the grounded enemy planes were destroyed or damaged. The Fortresses dropped bombs ranging in size from small incendiaries to 2,000-pound block-busters. Rabaul has three airdromes—Lakunai, Vunakanau and Rapopo. All Allied planes returned.

On their return from Rabaul, Allied planes strafed and set afire a 10,000-ton Japanese transport off Cape Gazelle. Enemy shipping also was attacked at three other places.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

FISHY TREATY: Russia and Japan are still haggling over renewal of the 1942 fishing treaty, giving the Japs free movement in the waters off Siberia. The treaty is of military importance to Japan since it allows her to operate a weather station on the Kamchatka peninsula, which allows an accurate gauge of atmospheric conditions in the Bering sea.

LIVE AND LET LIVE: "Live and let live" must be the world's motto for the future, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek told 23,000 people in Chicago's stadium. Although the League of Nations failed, she said, concerted action will be necessary for the reconstruction and preservation of peace in the post-war period. Mme. Kai-shek called war the "acme of human folly."

DOWN UNDER:
Subs Big Menace

With submarines operating in packs in the North Atlantic, signs pointed early to the opening of the Nazis spring offensive against Allied shipping to the European war fronts.

That the Nazis were concentrating on such an offensive seemed to be borne out by the appointment of Karl Doenitz as commander of the German fleet. Doenitz is a submarine specialist, who has organized the latest technique of opeating U-boats in packs.

Thirty-two ships totaling over 200,000 tons were sunk in a recent convoy, the Nazis said. The Allies did not confirm the claim, but survivors from a late North Atlantic convoy said their losses were heavy, although partly compensated by damage to the attacking underseas horde.

The Nazis are said to have 500 subs, with at least a third in action at one time. The practice of operating the submersibles in packs under one experienced commander relieves the necessity for training individual commanders. In the new technique, U-boats attack their prey from both sides of the convoy.

Construction of a fast destroyer escort by the U. S. is expected to assist in running down subs. Volume production of these escorts will allow the navy to use them as the Nazis use their U-boats, that is, in packs. Building also has been speeded on small auxiliary aircraft carriers to permit planes to take off at sea and maintain close patrol over convoys at all times.

RATIONING:
Juggling Act

Almost all the items that go into the American market basket are now regulated under the rationing system and the job of juggling points to insure a proper diet is as an important job for the housewife as is juggling the dollars in the family's grocery budget.

When meat, butter, cheese, shortening, lard and margarine joined the foods brought under the point system the full force of war hit the nation's dinner table. OPA indicated that with the 16 points allotted each week during the first weeks for these items would provide approximately these amounts:

1. Meat—Slightly under two pounds.
2. Butter—About ¼ pound.
3. Cheese—About 1.7 ounces.
4. Shortening—About 3 ounces.
5. Lard—About ¼ pound.
6. Margarine —About 1.2 ounces.

Officials reported that in general the attitude to this almost complete rationing of foodstuffs was good. Most Americans realize, it was pointed out, that rationing is the safest way to insure adequate supplies for the armed forces and our allies as well as insure equitable distribution of what is left for the home front.

RATION DATES

April 12—Expiration date for Period 4 fuel-oil coupons.
April 25—Last valid date for stamp No. 26, good for one pound of coffee.
May 21—Last day on which Coupon 5 in "A" gas ration book is valid.
May 31—Last day for use of stamp No. 12, good for five pounds of sugar.
June 15—Last valid date for stamp No. 17, good for one pair of shoes.
Sept. 30—Expiration date for Period 5 fuel-oil coupons.

VIEWPOINTS:
Death, Dust, Ashes

A quiet confidence ran through Prime Minister Winston Churchill's recent speech when he warned the British that it may take two more years to crush Hitler "and his evil powers of evil into death, dust and ashes."

That was Churchill's warning to those people who believe that the war already is won. "I am not able to share those sanguine hopes and my earnest advice to you is . . . not to take your eye off the ball even for a moment."

In a speech both grave and optimistic, Churchill asserted that after Germany is beaten the Allies would turn immediately to "punish the greedy, cruel empire of Japan." The prime minister proposed post-war councils of the Allied nations to insure peace, and drew a hopeful picture of social and economic post-war planning.

Meanwhile, another voice was heard—this one from Berlin. It was the voice of Adolf Hitler, rumored to be dead, ill or insane. Emerging from months of seclusion, Hitler admitted that German soil has become a war zone, but boasted that the eastern front crisis has been overcome and that the German nation was moving toward "success until final victory."

WARNING:

Broadcasts from Tokyo are warning the Japanese people to expect air raids over Japan and increasing submarine attacks upon shipping. A war review broadcast said "the enemy is still continuing air raids on our forces. The American planes in China will be further strengthened and therefore the enemy hopes to carry out raids over Japan . . . The enemy is using her submarines in the hope of destroying our supply lines . . . We must build more ships to replace our lost ships."

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

SOPHOMORE CONGRESSMEN

The President's heralded meeting with congressional freshmen had an unheralded sequel on Capitol Hill. Day after the White House party, 19 second-term house Democrats held a luncheon in Speaker Sam Rayburn's private dining room, at which there was considerable good-natured, and some not so good-natured, grousing about the President's relations with congress.

Object of the luncheon, arranged by Rep. Oren Harris of Arkansas, was to enable the second-termers to "console" each other for not being invited to the White House for a party when they were freshmen.

Among others, Rep. Sam Russell and Eugene Worley of Texas took great delight in joshing Rayburn: "Sam, why can't you get us an invitation to the White House?"

However, the luncheon took a serious turn when scrappy Rep. Edward Hebert of Louisiana lambasted the White House for not consulting with congress on new legislation, and criticized his colleagues for submitting to White House "dictates." Observing that only 26 of the 45 Democratic freshmen of the last session survived the November elections, the Louisianan declared:

"If a lot of us had paid more attention to our constituents instead of to White House advisers, there wouldn't be so few of us here today. In the last year of Huey Long's tenure, he controlled both houses of the Louisiana legislature completely except for one man. But Huey didn't try to ram through any bills without letting each man know what was going on and making him feel like he had a stake in the program. We in congress haven't been treated like that."

Hebert said he held no enmity against the House leadership, adding to Rayburn:

"I've always been very fond of you, but I've never been able to vote for you on a national ticket. I hope I will be able to cast my ballot for you next year, either as top man or running mate on the Democratic ticket."

This brought loud cheers from the luncheoners and blushes from Rayburn, who responded with a fatherly lecture urging those present not to let personal animosities influence their actions in congress.

AMERICAN BOMBERS

Despite the criticism you may hear of American planes, U. S. airmen who have studied the current bombings of Europe say privately that one American bomber is worth five of the British.

American planes are heavily armed and heavily armored. Able to protect themselves, they operate in the daylight, with precision bombing, whereas the British planes, flying at night, must lay down a pattern of bombs over a whole area, hoping that the principal target will be hit.

British planes can carry a heavier load of bombs, but the fewer bombs carried by the American planes are more effective because they go straight to the target.

Further, American planes have suffered fewer losses proportionately than the British, both operational and combat losses.

In fact the American contribution is so important that the all-out bombing of Germany must await the availability of more U. S. planes.

Most people think there is a heavy concentration of American planes in England now, and that the current round-the-clock bombings are the big show. Neither is correct.

There was a concentration of U. S. planes in England last summer and fall, made with intended publicity. This had the effect of sending the Nazis scurrying all over western Europe to mend their defenses. Then the U. S. air strength was pulled out of England for the mission it had been intended for—the invasion of North Africa.

U. S. air strength in England is now being built up again, and when the time comes, the two air forces combined will stage the show intended to knock Germany out of the war.

MEXICO BARS MIGRATION

No one is advertising it, but Mexico has slapped a temporary ban on the recruitment of its workers for farm jobs in the United States.

This was expected to be one of our big sources of farm labor in the Southwest. However, no Mexican laborers have been imported in more than a month, despite feverish efforts by the Farm Security administration to bring in approximately 50,000.

Mexico is not keen about the recruiting program, and some time ago notified the state department that it was reserving the right to specify the sections of Mexico where labor could be recruited. Reason given was that Mexico couldn't afford to have labor drained from industrial sections.

Meanwhile the Farm Security administration has submitted orders for 6,000 Mexicans, but is still waiting for an okay to begin recruiting.

Note: So far we have imported 5,300 Mexican farm workers under 30-to-90 day work contracts.

Results Justify Expenses Of Overseas Propaganda

Axis Has Employed Elaborate Means to Get Its Views Across to Neutral Nations; U. S. Must Use Press and Radio.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building
Washington, D. C.

The other day, Elmer Davis, head of the Office of War Information, held a press conference. He opened it with the remark that we were witnessing an Uncle Tom's Cabin without the Simon Legree. I didn't get the significance of the remark until Davis explained that Representative Tabor, who charged Mr. Davis with using the Office of War Information to distribute propaganda for a fourth term, had been invited to share the conference but had other duties.

Obviously, the purpose of the meeting was to show how the money for the publication of propaganda was being spent and a good deal of time was taken up on comparative costs of British, American and Axis propaganda efforts. If the OWI carries out present plans, it will be spending at the rate of 45 millions of dollars by the end of the year. Britain, with its separate ministry of information, is spending much more than we are—Germany probably four or five times as much. That's a rough estimate. But the figures didn't interest me so much and I'll tell you why. I had come to the meeting a little early and had been studying the array of literature—arranged on two tables—the American and the Axis propaganda material. There were handsome publications like the German magazines "Signal," "Berlin-Rome-Tokyo," and Japan's "Nippon." "Signal" costs 75 cents a copy to produce—the art work in all of them must make "Esquire" and "Fortune" envious. There were tiny pamphlets—these were American—you could slip into your hat band. The OWI's masterpiece is "Victory" which was the target of congressional attack—it isn't so bad in comparison with the expensive Axis magazines but it costs only 35 cents to produce.

Three things struck me as a result of the conference: First, if there is an even chance of obtaining the results expected, the investment is not worth quibbling about; second, since Davis admits that material got into the Roosevelt sketch which should not have and won't again, we either ought to take Davis' judgment or else fire him. Thirdly, the public hasn't had a chance to know what the propaganda is all about and the criticism of one phase of it utterly distorts the general picture of the function, purpose and value of the OWI effort.

In the first place, these publications under consideration are not for our troops abroad or our people at home — though I believe they ought to be given some circulation here simply so that their function is understood, at least when it is compatible with the confidential nature of some of the means of distribution in enemy countries.

It is accepted as the duty and function for one political party to do all it can to discredit the leaders of the other party—according to the rules of the game of politics—but, as Davis quoted the Baltimore Sun, you have to exploit your personalities. People mean a lot more than mere ideas when you are trying to make an impression. Roosevelt can be played up as a powerful symbol to people abroad without affecting the political situation at home. That was done effectively in the case of Woodrow Wilson in the last war, his picture was worshiped all over Europe, as the symbol of the leader of a nation coming to liberate them. But when he came home, he couldn't sell his program to the American people.

'Sell' Allied Cause

I tried to find out what the objective of the OWI was, whether it could show any results.

Purpose one is counter-attack. We know what German propaganda has done, first in softening countries about to be invaded; second, to keep neutrals leaning Nazi-ward. OWI wants to fight fire with fire.

The second purpose is the same as the first and more of it—not merely to nullify enemy effort but sell the prospect the idea that America can win and is winning the war and that American victory will be a greater and better advantage to the prospect than a Nazi victory would be.

How about results? That is pretty hard to reduce to statistics or even concrete statements. We know some Japs have surrendered with our propaganda leaflets in their hands. We know that leaflets dropped over occupied countries or pamphlets smuggled in have started people talking. OWI has reports to this effect. They say that this means that the idea has been spread that America is in touch with the people within the occupied territory.

We know that some of these pamphlets have been photostated or copied in others and given further distribution. It was stated that these copies or excerpts from them have even been circulated in prison camps.

We know that from four to six clandestine newspapers are made up chiefly from Allied propaganda material.

Of course, by no means all of the OWI propaganda is spread through publications. In fact, the radio broadcasts represent the greater part of the expenditure.

OWI is confident that this radio propaganda is not wasted as has been charged although it is admitted that the listening audience is being cut down as short-wave sets are seized or wear out and the depreciation is heavy. On the other hand, it is known that the radio broadcasts are repeated—by word of mouth and in clandestine pamphlets and newspapers.

The chief evidence that propaganda is reaching into Germany comes from two sources: first, the speeches of Goebbels and other German leaders who warn against black listening—warning not to believe the foreign propaganda—and, second, the records of trials of persons arrested for this black listening.

Effective in Turkey

It is stated that American propaganda has been effective in Turkey because Turks believe it whereas they have caught the Axis in too many lies. Since publications printed in Turkish are still forbidden to be sent into Turkey, the printing has to be done there or the material sent in in French or English.

In Spain, it is said that in spite of strong handicaps—that is, the power of the Falangist party which is openly pro-Axis—American propaganda has curtailed this power, has swung many people from a pro-Axis to a pro-Ally attitude. The persecution of the Catholic church in Germany has been used effectively in Spain.

Of course, this isn't the whole story of propaganda. All is fair in love and war and some pretty precarious tight-rope walking is sometimes done—witness democracy's tete-a-tete with Darlan which history will probably disclose was less a desertion of democratic political methods than waiving of the Queensberry rules of gallant combat. We can't expect the Allies to show their hands to the enemy and there is no use disturbing the squeamish by revealing the possible although not entirely immaculate condition which might arise from grappling with an especially noisome enemy.

What Davis did not go into at this meeting was the question of enemy propaganda directed toward us. That is a very delicate matter and sometimes governments are willing to give the enemy credit for the circulation of certain sentiments expressed by people who are just mad at their own public servants and are exercising the inherent right of grousing.

As I said before, I am much more interested in whether the propaganda job we are doing is effective. As to getting in puffs for the party in power, that is up to the party out of power to stop but one of the inescapable advantages of being an "in" in wartime is that you can squelch some opposition on the ground of patriotism. On the other hand, there was never an administration yet that wasn't thrown out after a war so there is some compensation—furthermore, the party of the opposition doesn't share the blame for the mistakes.

Now that Governor Bricker has announced that he expects the Ohio delegation will support him as a favorite son candidate for the presidency, politics will be raising its lovely head in every headline.

Speaking of Sports

by Bob McHane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE day of power baseball, symbolized in recent years by the New York Yankees, seems to be passed. The old fashioned game, with a revival of run-scoring strategy, is coming back. And for two reasons:

(1) The topnotch home run hitters are going to be missing.

(2) The rabbit baseball is gone—at least for the duration.

With the real power hitters like Hank Greenberg, Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio in the armed services, the long hits will be considerably fewer. Other muscle men are in a retiring mood, and still others figure they can get their best licks in by working in a defense job.

Remaining Hitters

There will be some good hitters on deck. Mel Ott has led his league in home runs. Dolph Camilli, Charley Keller, Bill Nicholson, Ernie Lombardi and Rudy York get distance, but they never managed to get up there with the leaders.

Even if the power hitters were back it's far from certain they would be getting distance-as-usual. The dead ball is re-appearing. It's an ersatz number of unusual construction. As you know, (or do you?) golf balls are covered with a gummy, resistant substance called balata. This material is being reprocessed and used in baseballs for purposes of elasticity. Early experiments left much to be desired and the manufacturer is still experimenting.

The importance of the rabbit ball is beyond question. The records show that nobody came close to the 20 home run mark until Babe Ruth totaled 29 in 1919—when the lively ball is said to have made its first appearance. In 1927 Ruth racked up 60 circuit blows.

Double Threat

Only twice has Ruth's home run record been in danger. Jimmy Foxx threatened with 58 in 1932 and Hank Greenberg with 58 in 1938. If conditions had been the same as when Ruth set his record, both might have broken his mark. Immediately after Ruth boosted the total, several parks started adding barriers which brought new obstacles into the paths of the heavy hitters. St. Louis, for instance, erected a right field screen which interfered with the home run production of Foxx and Greenberg. They both dented it with hits that earlier would have been home runs.

When the Bambino set the record a ball that hit fair and bounced into the stands was a home run. When Foxx threatened in 1932 that same ball was good for only a two-base hit.

From now on it is likely that one run will have an importance that it has lacked for at least 20 years. Teams tried for clusters of runs. They won ball games. Hitters figured there was little use in trying to steal a base and risking the chance of being thrown out. Why try a hit-and-run or squeeze play when there was a good chance of the batter socking the ball out of the park?

Chop Hitters

With the appearance of the dead ball the chop hitter will be the most valuable. It will be up to him to "hit 'em where they ain't." They'll play for the single runs because single runs are going to mean more. More emphasis will be placed on coaching. Players will have to be taught how to bunt and how to run bases. Extra base hits will come through speed and agility. Sliding will be important. Ty Cobb used seven different slides. The modern player uses one. Speed and deception will play important parts in this year's game.

Power baseball will give way to a more scientific game. It shouldn't hurt baseball in any way.

SPORTS SHORTS

¶ More favorites won races at Chicago's Sportsman's Park last season than at any other race track in the land.

¶ Luke Appling of the White Sox will be working for his 1,000th run and 2,000th hit this season. He has 962 American league runs, 1,868 American league hits.

¶ Joe DiMaggio didn't hesitate when asked who he thought was the best center fielder in baseball. "The best," he said, "is Dominic—even if he is my kid brother."

TO YOUR Good Health

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

PHYSICAL CHECK-UPS

One of the gratifying things about this war, as compared with the last, is the diligent search made by medical officers to make sure that men entering the army are fit not only physically but mentally and emotionally also. This was not as well or as completely done in the last war, partly because there was not a full history of the man available and X-rays of chest and blood tests were not generally done.

Dr. Barton

I have personal knowledge of how we passed men as physically fit because heart, lungs and other organs were normal who later developed disturbances of various organs during war service. Had we had a knowledge of their emotional makeup, which we could have gained to some extent by further questioning, there would not have been so many cases of disordered heart action, stomach and intestinal disturbances, and some behavior symptoms during and after the war.

In the Proceedings of the Royal Society of Medicine Drs. W. Sargent and E. Slater draw attention to the commonness of loss of memory as a symptom among soldiers in wartime, and suggest that in civil life this same symptom is more easily overlooked. Among a thousand military patients admitted to a neurosis center they found 144 in whom loss of memory was an outstanding symptom aside from those whose loss of memory was due to some real damage to the brain. Loss of memory was more common and more severe in those who had undergone severe stress on active service. Many of these same individuals would have little lapses in memory in civil life because of the instability or unsteadiness of their emotional makeup. These men are as brave as their comrades, but are more high strung or emotional and their nervous system is more readily affected.

Aside from behavior or emotional symptoms stress of war affects the body organs also and as mentioned above disordered heart action, stomach ulcer and colitis—inflammation of the lower bowel—often result among soldiers for which they are rightly granted a pension.

Other improvements over our physical examinations in the last war are blood tests for disease, tests of the blood group to which the soldier belongs, and X-rays of lungs.

Overcoming Pin Worms

One of the distressing ailments of children, and often of adults also, is pin worms, also called seatworms and thread-worms. The pin worm is a small worm which looks like a small piece of white thread, found mostly in lowest part of the bowel.

The symptoms are itchings, usually worse at night disturbing the sleep, burning pain, feeling that bowels want to move, frequent desire to urinate, and loss of appetite.

For many years the treatment was by the use of small pills or tablets containing santonin and calomel. However, as the worms are situated in rectum—injections of an infusion of quassia chips has been the routine treatment for years in many children's hospitals. Two ounces of quassia chips are placed in a quart of water and the water allowed to boil down to a pint. The quassia chips are strained off and the pint of water is used as an enema. This is repeated every morning for six days by which time the pin worms have been destroyed.

An easier method of treatment for child and mother, or nurse, has been the recent use of gentian violet in tablet form, the amount being in proportion to the age of the child. The tablets have a heavy covering or coating which prevents them being dissolved until they reach the lower part of small intestine and upper part of large intestine. Gentian violet is usually given every day for five days, then a rest of one day and then every day for another five days.

In the Canadian Medical Association Journal, Drs. Max J. Miller and Della Allen, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Quebec, report their findings with still another treatment, phenothiazine, the dosage being in proportion to the age of the child. In one experiment, 50 children were given one gram of the drug every day for six, seven and eight days according to age; 64 per cent were cleared of the pin worm infection.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What foods contain mineral salts?

A.—Foods containing mineral salts are meat and green vegetables.

Q.—Are lemons effective in the reduction of weight? Have they a good effect on the eyes?

A.—Lemons should be good for any overweight individual, as there is often an acidosis present. As to reducing weight, if water and sugar are used, it would not be of help. Would not help eyesight in any way.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Seed-bearing pods high up in rubber trees when ripe go off with an audible pop. The pods, about the size of a goose egg, contain formations of gas which explode when ripe and throw the seed as far as 100 feet.

The French call rubber caoutchouc from an Indian term meaning "weeping tree."

Ninety per cent of roadside flats that plague car owners can be avoided. Checking air pressures while tires are cool, before inflating will show up tubes that are losing an abnormal amount of pressure due to slow leaks.

Temperatures, topography and types of roads as well as driving habit of owners account for wide variations in mileages from identical tires. These factors may account for a tire turning in from twenty to twenty-five thousand miles of service in Chicago whereas from seven to eight thousand miles may be the mileage it will render in Texas.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Continual opening of the gas or electric oven door changes the temperature and is said to be one of the most common causes of baking disappointments.

• • •

Much of the difficulty in growing house plants comes from keeping them too warm. Try putting your plants in a cool corner of the room and watch them perk up.

House plants grow toward the sun. Turn them frequently so that they will not grow one-sided.

Keep the broiling pan in your oven as clean as any of your other kitchen utensils. After using it wash it in plenty of hot water and soapsuds. Dry it perfectly before returning to the oven. Any moisture left on the pan may cause rust in the oven.

Our Navy Launched 159 Fighting Ships in Year

During the 12 months following Pearl Harbor, the United States navy launched 159 fighting ships, or four times as many as the corresponding types sunk by enemy action, says Collier's. Among these new vessels were three battleships, six aircraft carriers, ten cruisers, 107 destroyers and 33 submarines, having a total estimated tonnage of 558,000.

Free Picture Show of Power Machinery In War

Two free motion picture shows will be given in Boone County on this Monday, April 5, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The pictures sponsored by one of the nations leading oil compaines will demonstrate methods of getting most from our machinery under war conditions.

One of the pictures is entitled "War on Wear", another "Power at the Draw Bar". The program is sponsored jointly by the oil company and the Engineering Department of the College of Agriculture. The shows will be of interest to all farmers and their families.

The schedule of the shows is as follows: Hebron school, Monday afternoon at 4:00 P. M., E. W. T. Hamilton school, Monday night at 8:00 P. M., C. W. T. Everyone is invited to attend.

Awards Suggested for Farmers Who Exceed Food Goal.

A local farmer the past week has written a letter recommending that the government award recognition similar to the Army-Navy E award to farmers who increase food production. This recommendation is worthy of consideration according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

The farmer is faced with greatly reduced machinery, feed and labor suplies yet he has been called upon for marked increases in food production. He is as a whole, one of the most patriotic groups in America today. It is hoped some worthy recognition for farmers can be worked out. Similar recognition has been recommended for the fine group of farm neighborhood leaders that have so nobly served in the Inflation Controal, Fats, Nylon Hoisery, Tin Can Salvage, Fire Prevention, 4-H Club Victory Project Enlistment and the present 75% goal on Home Food Production Programs.

IN LOVING REMEMBRANCE

In sad but loving remembrance of Anna Sams, the dear little daughter of Adus and Ora Sams, who lived in this world for six weeks was called home by her Dear Loving Father. It was a baby that was loved by all who knew it, and it will be missed not only by its parents, brother and sister but everyone who has been in and around the home.

May God's hand rest upon the mother, father and the other children and may they strive to meet it beyond the veil where parting will come no more. The parents and doctors did all that loving hands could do but God said, "little one come home," we all will miss each loving action and her smiling face.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Sams wish to express their heartfelt thanks to all their neighbors and friends for the kindness and sympathy shown them in their sorrow and sad bereavement in the loss of their darling baby girl. Anna Sams. They want to especially thank Mary Grubbs for the kindness she showed them in time of sorrow.

A Very Close Friend.

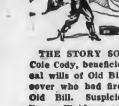
Joe has a bigger job now... helping to defeat Hitler, Hirohito & Co. He's one of the 100 employees of this company now serving in the armed forces.

Joe will be back some day, we hope soon. But meanwhile we must carry on without him and his fellow employees in uniform. A few of them we have been able to replace with men of equal experience. Others we are having to train. Some we have not been able to replace at all. In wartime there are simply not enough skilled men like Joe to go around.



As time goes on, the manpower shortage will become more acute. So will shortages of material and equipment. As a result there may be times when our service is not quite as good as you expect it to be—or as good as we would like to make it—but this is unavoidable in wartime and is true of all lines of business.

We're going to continue to do our best to keep your service at a high standard despite the difficulties of wartime operations. You can help by keeping your electrical equipment in good condition, by learning to replace your own fuses and by giving us time to answer your service calls on regular trips. Your cooperation and understanding will be appreciated and will help us serve you more efficiently.

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Ann Lee and Cole Cody, beneficiaries under two identical wills of Old Bill Cole, sought to discover who had fired the fatal bullet at Old Bill. Suspicion centered around Rance Waldron, who was living at the ranch when Ann and Cody arrived. Doc Joe and the Judge, commissioned by Old Bill to carry out his last wishes, were returning to town from the ranch (each with a will for safekeeping) when they were held up by a masked bandit whom they recognized as Rance Waldron. To divert suspicion Rance then killed his accomplice, Tom Gough. Cal Roundtree, foreman of the ranch, learned meanwhile that Doc Joe still lived.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XVII

Doc Joe pulled up the chair close to the bed and spoke softly, throttling his voice down to a near-whisper.

"For one thing, I ain't dead now, never was and don't intend to be for a spell yet," he said. "Get that in your head, Cal. Don't go thinking ghosts."

"You don't look anything like what I might suppose a ghost would look," Cal said curtly. "Now, let's get after this: What in the name of blazes you been playing dead for?"

"For a spell, I had to," said Doc Joe. "If I hadn't, Rance Waldron would have killed me sure, like he did the Judge and Tom Gough. He nicked me side of the head." He put his finger gingerly to a bit of taped gauze over his temple. "It sort of dazed me. I lay on my side and saw him step over to the Judge. He shot the Judge between the horns before I could wiggle a finger. Then he looked at me. Maybe I sort of fainted a minute; I don't quite know or rec'lect. I was scared enough to faint anyhow. He came back dragging Tom Gough. He shot Gough twice and rode away. I tried to get up. I got dizzy and sure did faint for good. When I woke up and the boys hauled us into town, I was out cold. They thought I was dead. Me, I got to thinking. I let 'em keep on thinking so. Nobody knows but Doc Evans; you and him, now, Cal. And you're both going to keep your mouths shut until I give the word."

"Rance Waldron is downstairs right now," said Cal, stubborn and eager. "He killed the Judge, you say. And you saw him? And it's almost a dead certainty that either him or his hired hand, Tom Gough, potted old Early Bill!"

"Shut up and sit down and keep your shirt tail tucked in! Now, listen. The Judge and me, we had those two wills that old jackass Bill Cole drawed up. And Mr. Rance Waldron's got 'em now."

And now Cal Roundtree, telling this to Cole Cody as the two jogged along, came to a halt. Then he began to swear explosively. And in the end, grown quiet after his struggle with himself, he muttered disgustedly.

"Cody, I don't know which end I'm standing on. There's something I know that I got to keep under my hat, like I been doing; I almost blew my top off and let the cat jump with old Doc Joe; I'm near doing the same thing with you."

"Why not, Cal?" said Cody quietly. "You and I haven't known each other all summer, but—what's on your mind, 'tid timer?"

"No," Cal growled. "Let me be. Let me go on now and tell you the rest that I can; what old Doc Joe has got in his mind. He says Rance Waldron is smart like a whole herd of foxes; he says, no, Waldron won't destroy those wills right off; he says Waldron will play safe, and hide 'em darn good, where the devil himself can't find 'em, until he sees for sure which way the wind blows. What he says, is this: Waldron will try to gobble the King Cole Ranch and anything else left hanging. If he makes a go of it, he'll burn the papers. If there's any slip-up along the trail, well then, with the two wills in his war bag, he can dicker."

After a long while Cody asked, "What does Doc Joe plan? How long is he going to play dead?"

That started Cal Roundtree off again. But he got himself in hand ultimately and explained some part of Doc Joe's plan.

"Late tonight the other doc, Parke Evans, will find a paper in Doc's room, signed by Doc Joe himself, dated a couple of years ago, saying when he's dead he yearns to be packed up and shipped back to his boyhood's home which is in dear old Tennessee!" Cal spat far into space. "So Doc Evans will pack him in a box, and haul him off with him tomorrow, going back to Rim Rock, and to the railroad at Christmas Forks. They'll ship some sort of a bundle and Doc Joe will hide out for a spell with Doc Evans. Later he'll get a chance to creep back this-away by the dark of the moon. Meantime we're to watch and wait for Rance Waldron to he making his play."

Arrived at the ranch they unsaddled, cared for their horses and said good-night, Cal to turn in at the bunk house and no doubt tilt his bottle to a long gurgle, Cole Cody hastening up the slope to the ranch house.

In the starlit patio he came upon Porfirio lounging on a bench, waiting for him. Porfirio's glowing cigarette described a quick, small arc in the gloom as Porfirio came to his feet.

"I'll see you in the morning, Porfirio—"

"But wait!" exclaimed Porfirio excitedly.

"What the deuce is it?" muttered Cody, stooping to see better. "Not a dead cat, is it? Somebody's old black tom—A hat!"

Cody led the way into the living room; while he was lighting a lamp Porfirio explained how his persistence had brought him to his discovery. From the place where the man had hidden when he shot Early Bill, Porfirio on horseback had ridden a score of times, following each time a slightly different path, thinking, Now if it was me, and I was riding like the wind, I'd go this way; thinking, And I would get rid of that hat muy pronto. And he had looked at all the possible hiding places, had looked even for signs of a small hot fire. And then at last his keen eyes had seen a stick, a small dead pine limb, its end sticking out from under a sizable boulder!

Aha! He had it! For how could a stick get itself shoved under a rock like that? If a man had moved that rock now, and had been in a hurry setting it back, and in a hurry to ride on, he might with a careless boot have kicked that stick where it got caught under the stone! Porfirio sweated over the boulder, moving it—and found the hat.

Yes, there was a bullet hole drilled through it. There was more. There was everything; Cole Cody could only regret that its message came too late. In the sweat band were the initials, tooled through the leather, "T.G."

He put his hands on hers; she permitted the contact for a long moment.

"Tom Gough, that's who it was, Porfirio," he said as he tossed the hat, now of no interest, to the table. "But Rance Waldron—Look, Porfirio, Tom Gough is dead already. He's the stick-up gent that fought it out with the Judge and Doc Joe."

Porfirio began cursing softly in the tongue of the south. He started to the door; he said good night sullenly—Then of a sudden he whirled and cried out "Dead, the cabrone! And so he gets away from me like that, does he, Don Codito?" He laughed, and it was an evil sound when Porfirio Lopez laughed that way.

Cody, not yet of any mind for bed and sleep, started a quick blaze in the fireplace and dragged a big comfortable chair in front of it. Sunk deep into Early Bill's pet chair, rolling what he thought was to be a good night cigarette, he did not hear a door open and close softly, nor did he hear light oncoming steps. What he heard first was a subdued voice saying,

"Hello, Cole Cody. Mind if I join you and the fire a minute? I can't sleep—can you?"

He rose and drew up a companion chair; the young firelight, catching at a stick of pitch-pine, flared up and shone brightly on his face and little Ann Lee's as they stood a moment looking seriously at each other; it shone in their eyes and made them bright.

"Ann Lee," he said after a while. "What is it, Cole?" she asked. Both their voices were quiet, hers hushed.

"You realize by this time, don't you, that there's not a chance in the world of either you or me ever coming to own any part of the King Cole Ranch?"

"Yes." She spoke very simply, not seeming or sounding in the least concerned; scarcely interested. He heard her long, quivering sigh before she added, "Maybe it's funny, but I don't seem to care any more. After what has just happened—those two dear old men—"

Darn your hide, Doc Joe! It was hard for Bill Cole Cody to keep from violating Cal's confidence, just as it had been a man's job for Cal to keep from blurting out something else he knew, something he felt bound to keep to himself.

Little by little, out of these drifting silences, they fell to talking briefly and sketchily about each other, about themselves.

They laughed a little together, and came closer each other than ever before, when they started to speak at the same instant and with the same thought:

"Why, your father and mine, too, must have been great friends!"

Cody made himself another cigarette and, instead of smoking it or even remembering that he had made it to smoke, sat rolling and rolling it with his lean, strong fingers. He said without looking up, "I could almost be glad—in a way, I would be glad if it wasn't that Rance Waldron might come to profit by it—that those two wills are, anyhow for the present and maybe for good, out of the picture. All we've done, maybe all we'd ever do, is fight like cat and dog over the darned place! Maybe now—well, maybe we can get along without fighting! It might be fun for a change, Ann Lee?"

"I'm a beast most of the time, I'm afraid," she said contritely. "And I try so hard not to be! Honestly, Bill Cole Cody, I try terribly hard."

He put his hand on hers; she permitted the contact for a long moment, then gently slid her fingers out from under his and, palm upward, let them curl again on her lap.

"I guess I shouldn't have spanked you—so hard, anyhow!"

"I deserved every bit of it—and harder!" But he saw that the hot color in her cheeks now was not altogether the affair of the fire.

"And I guess I oughtn't to have kissed you on the stage—the way I did!"

"Let's not quarrel any more, ever," she said hurriedly. She lifted her eyes to his. "We have been friends, in a way, haven't we? We do like each other, even after all that's happened; I know we do."

He said soberly, "You're being mighty sweet, Ann Lee. I never knew a girl like you!"

"I love fireplaces! One like this; look how the coals are forming now! Do you like to find pictures in them? Of course, everybody does. The fireplace is one of the things that makes me love this room." She stirred slightly and sighed; she moved her arms, crossing them, her hands on her shoulders, giving herself a little hug; she said, "Dear old Early Bill, did try, didn't he? Tried so hard to 'have him his fun' and at the same time to do something splendid for you and me, for his old friends' son and daughter. Well, I've a tiny fireplace all my own at home, and when I go back to teaching—"

"Ann! What are you talking about? You haven't forgotten, have you, the money he left for us in the bank, fifty-fifty? We know that Buck-tooth Jenkins got that ten thousand into the pot; you heard the Judge say there was a whole lot more! And you talking about teaching!"

"Honestly, cross my heart and hope to die," she exclaimed, "I had forgotten all about that part of it! Why, there are thousands and thousands there, all yours and mine!"

Aunt Jenifer cleared her throat considerately in the far, dim end of the long room.

"Mind if I come in, you two?" she asked, and came straight ahead. "I'm close to getting the jim-jams, all alone in my room. And I got to thinking about a pot of coffee and—you two fighting again?"

Cody gave her his chair, squatted on the corner of the hearth and started a fresh cigarette. Ann Lee began to laugh.

And thus began on the King Cole Ranch a short period of time into which entered many a pleasant moment, with moments of quiet peace, moments of spontaneous happiness, flitting all too swiftly because always the shadow came back, moments when Ann Lee surprised a look in Bill Cole Cody's which he did not know was there, which no other girl had ever put there; and times when he, trying to read what lay in her mind, what she felt deep down in her heart even, dreamed his dreams.

They rode together hours on end, memorizing the lovely details of the vast King Cole Ranch. Once Ann Lee, as they came to the crest of a rise of land from which they could look for miles across a glory of undulating panorama, exclaimed breathlessly, "Oh, Cole! If this really could be ours!" And he repeated within himself, not looking at her but into the furthest blue distance, his jaw hard and his eyes narrowed, "Ours!"

And his thoughts switched swiftly, as so often they did, to the vanished Rance Waldron. For since that night in Bald Eagle, none at the ranch had seen or heard of him. Rance Waldron had simply faded out of the picture, leaving no inkling of where he had gone or why or for how long.

And so the days drifted by, with summer ripening, and Cole Cody and Ann Lee with Aunt Jenifer lingered on.

LESSON

Lesson for April 4

PETER AND JOHN BECOME DISCIPLES OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—John 1:29-42; Mark 1:16-20.

GOLDEN TEXT—And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men.—Mark 1:17.

Personal faith in Christ is the heart of Christian experience. Since persons are won by other persons it was vitally important that the Lord choose the right disciples at the very beginning of the Church. Outstanding among the twelve disciples were Peter and John, whose lives and letters we study during the next three months.

The manner in which they became disciples is of unusual interest—and is instructive as well. We will observe that our Lord is working in much the same way on the Peters and Johns of our own day. They came to Him by way of

I. Testimony—They Heard About Jesus (John 1:29-34, 41).

John, who modestly refrains from naming himself (v. 40), heard about Jesus from John the Baptist. His testimony is notable for its pointed presentation of Christ, and its unmistakable desire that they follow Him. John was an important man with a vigorous message, but he recognized that his only real business for God was to point men to Christ. He enjoyed having men follow him, but only that he might lead them to Jesus.

In doing Christian work we should learn so to bear our testimony that we may magnify Christ, and not ourselves. We must be careful to win men to Christ, and not to ourselves or our cause or church.

Peter was brought to Jesus by his brother Andrew. Andrew was a quiet, modest man of whom we do not read that he preached a single sermon. But he did do personal work (see John 6:8, 9; 12:21, 22). He has been called "Andrew the finder." May this tribe increase. We need more like him.

Hearing about Jesus is not enough. There must be the next step, the indispensable personal meeting with the Lord.

II. Experience—They Saw Jesus (John 1:35-39, 42).

The necessity of a personal experience with Christ is so clearly stated in Scripture that one can only marvel that it is so neglected in many churches today.

Neither John the Baptist nor, later, Andrew was content to tell about Jesus. They brought John and Peter to the Lord. John said, "Behold the Lamb of God" (v. 36); and Andrew "brought him to Jesus" (v. 42). These sum up the soul-winner's duty. We must bring our family, our friends, yes, the stranger with whom we deal, into the presence of Jesus.

He will look into their eyes and into their souls and see in them all the gifts and graces which may make them useful to Him (v. 42). John was the brother of James and Peter the brother of Andrew—just two humble fishermen in the sight of men. But Jesus saw in them two of the most useful men who have ever lived. Let us give Him a chance to deal with our friends and acquaintances.

Hearing and seeing are both excellent, but they lack one final step—and here it is—

III. Action—They Followed Jesus (John 1:40; Mark 1:16-20).

First of all they followed Jesus in becoming believers on Him as the Messiah. That experience of John's we find in John 1:40, and of Peter's (by inference) in verse 42. There is no salvation apart from that act of the will which follows a knowledge of Christ.

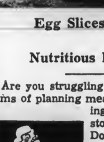
In the passage in Mark we find Him calling them to leave their secular calling as fishers of fish to follow Him and become fishers of men. Before they could become what He wanted them to be, they had to do something—rise up and follow Him.

Their unquestioning response indicated their faith, but, more than that, it showed that they were the kind of obedient men who could be used of the Lord. Jesus might have called His disciples from the learned and the mighty. But one wonders whether they would have been willing to respond without argument, and to learn of Him without prejudice or preconceived ideas of theology.

God must often pass the mighty and the noble of this world, and call those who are foolish enough to believe Him and obey (read I Cor. 1:17-29). The reason is given there—"That no flesh should glory in his presence." The glory belongs to the Lord, not to His servants.

Because they did obey they became "fishers of men." He led them, trained them, encouraged them, blessed them, and used them.

A disciple is a "learner," but he is learning for a purpose. Learning for its own sake, as an ornament or a selfish pleasure, is always a sad thing, but with the disciple of Christ it cannot be that if he rightly knows Christ.



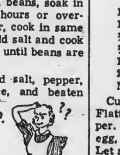
The disciple is to win other disciples. That is the very heart of Christian witness.

Egg Slices Ring Around Lima Bean Casserole
(See Recipes Below)

Nutritious Dishes

Are you struggling with the problems of planning meals with rationing or depleted stocks of food? Do you get late to market some days and find you can't find what you wanted? Then, today's recipes and suggestions will be of real help to you—for these times are real problems for every homemaker.

Now that you are shopping not only with a budget but also with a point budget, you must plan carefully so as not to use all the precious points before your month is up. Use as many unrationed foods as possible, and budget those points carefully which you have to use. Never lose sight of nutrition qualities however, for your body must be properly fed to do its work.



Lima beans, rich source of vegetable protein, thiamin and riboflavin make an excellent meat extender. With three eggs and careful seasoning, it will have an unmistakable appeal—and plenty of hearty satisfaction:

Lima Beans California.
(Serves 6)

2 cups dried limas
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup hot water
2 hard-cooked eggs
½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon parsley, chopped
1 egg beaten
1 tablespoon lemon juice

To cook dried lima beans, soak in cold water 4 to 5 hours or overnight. Before dinner, cook in same water 20 minutes, add salt and cook 20 minutes longer or until beans are tender.

Cream butter, add salt, pepper, parsley, lemon juice, and beaten egg. Mix well, add hot water, then pour over limas and cook in double boiler until creamy. Turn into a hot vegetable dish and arrange hard-cooked eggs over top and sprinkle finely chopped parsley in a border around dish.

Plump limas combined with another good protein food, cheese, in this dish, meet the requirements of a good main dish:

Lima Bean Cheese Loaf.
(Serves 6)

2 cups cooked, dried lima beans, pureed
1 cup cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons melted butter
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
¼ cup onion, minced
¼ cup ham, ground
2 tablespoons parsley, minced
½ cup American cheese, shredded
¼ cup milk

This Week's Menu

Lima Bean Cheese Loaf
Orange-Apple Salad
Oatmeal Refrigerator Rolls
Snow Pudding Custard Sauce
Beverage
Recipe Given

2 tablespoons chili sauce
½ cup meat stock

One cup of dried lima beans makes about 3 cups when cooked. Soak them overnight in cold water, then cook for 20 minutes, add salt and cook 10 to 20 minutes more until tender. To puree lima beans, put through a sieve.

Brown onion and green pepper in butter. Blend all ingredients except stock together thoroughly. Pack into a well-greased loaf tin. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 50 minutes. Baste frequently with stock.

An excellent tomato sauce to serve with this loaf can be made by sauteeing 2 tablespoons minced onion and 2 tablespoons chopped celery in 2 tablespoons butter.

Add to this 2 bay leaves, 1 teaspoon whole cloves, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 can tomato soup. Simmer 10 minutes, strain, and serve with loaf.

Several times recently when I have visited the butcher, he has offered me pork tenderloin. This is an excellent tasting meat—very rich in vitamin B1 or thiamin, which prevents nervousness, restlessness, listlessness and tiredness.

Breaded Pork Tenderloin.
(Serves 4)

1 pound pork tenderloin
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ cup fine bread crumbs
1 egg
2 tablespoons water or milk
Meat drippings

Cut tenderloin into 2-inch sections. Flatten. Season with salt and pepper. Dip in crumbs, slightly beaten egg, diluted, and again in crumbs. Let stand in refrigerator 15 minutes. Brown on both sides on hot drippings. Cover and cook slowly for 30 minutes.

An unrestricted meat is tongue—you don't have to carry a ration book to get it at your butcher's. Learn how to cook it, and you will really discover a culinary delight for your family:

Tongue With Carrots in Spinach Nests.

1 fresh beef tongue
Water
2 teaspoons salt
3½ cups cooked spinach
2 cups cooked, diced carrots

Cover tongue with water and add salt. Cover. Allow to simmer 1 hour to each pound of tongue, or until tongue is tender. Remove from water and skin. Serve hot, sliced. Arrange nests of spinach and carrots on platter around tongue.

Smothered Chicken.
(Serves 4)

2 pounds chicken
1 pound mushrooms
⅔ cup milk
2 tablespoons butter or fat
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon flour

Cut chicken in serving pieces and brown in fat. Slice and fry mushrooms until browned. Place chicken in baking dish, cover with mushrooms. Thicken remaining fat with flour, add salt and pepper, then milk and cook until thickened. Pour sauce over mushrooms and chicken. Cover baking dish and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 45 minutes.

Lynn Says:

The Soore Card: When you plan meals these days, do it with ration book in hand. Remember, you're spending not only money but points and that requires extra keeping of accounts.

Plan meals in advance keeping in mind what you need and what points you can use to best advantage with it. Don't squander points. If, for example, you have an eight-point coupon, and need something valued at six points, try not to use the eight-point coupon except with anything which corresponds with it.

Since canned and packaged goods will be at a premium, plan those menus carefully. Don't do without fruits and vegetables if the coupons are used up—have plenty of fresh, unrationed ones on hand.

Telling time in the Navy is on the 24-hour system. Morning hours are from one to twelve, but afternoon hours are from 1300 to 2400 (midnight). So if you ask a sailor the time and he says "seventeen," subtract 12 and you get five o'clock in the afternoon. It's simpler if you ask him what cigarette he smokes. Chances are he'll say: "Camel." For Camel is the favorite cigarette among Navy men as well as among men in the Army, Marines, Coast Guard. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

CHATTERER'S LAST CHANCE

CHATTERER THE RED SQUIRREL, running for his life and without the least hope, suddenly saw a last chance to escape from Shadow the Weasel. That is, he saw something that might offer him a chance. He couldn't be sure until he had tried, and even then he might escape from one danger only to run right into another equally great. What Chatterer saw was a big brown bunch near the top of a tall chestnut tree, and he headed for that tree as fast as ever he could go. What was that big brown bunch? Why it was Redtail the Hawk, who was dozing there with his head drawn down between his shoulders dreaming of the warm southland.

Now, old Redtail is one of Chatterer's deadliest enemies. He is quite as fond of Red Squirrel as is Shadow the Weasel, though he doesn't often try to catch one, because there are other things to eat much easier to get. Chatterer had had more than one narrow escape from old Redtail, and was very much afraid of him yet here he was running up the very tree in which Redtail was sitting. You see, a very daring idea had come into his head. He had seen at once that Redtail would just as soon have Shadow the Weasel for dinner as himself, and a very daring plan had popped into his head.

"I may as well be caught by Redtail as Shadow," he thought as he ran up the tree, "but if my plan works out right I won't be caught by either. Anyway, it is my very last chance."

Up the tree he scrambled, and after him went Shadow the Weasel. Shadow had been so intent on catching Chatterer that he had not noticed old Redtail, which was just as Chatterer had hoped. Up, up, he scrambled, straight past old Redtail, but as he passed he pulled one of Redtail's long tail feathers, then ran on to the top of the tree and with the last bit of strength he had left leaped to a neighboring spruce tree, where, hidden by the thick branches, he stopped to rest and see what would happen.

Of course, when he felt his tail pulled old Redtail was wide awake in a flash and, of course, he looked down to see who had dared to pull his tail. There just below him was Shadow the Weasel, who had just that minute discovered who was sitting there.

Shadow the Weasel stopped short. Then like a flash he dodged around to the other side of the tree. He had no thought of Chatterer now. Things were changed all in a flash—quite changed. Instead of the hunter he was now the hunted. Old Redtail circled in the air just overhead, and every time he caught sight of Shadow he swooped at him with great cruel claws spread to clutch him. Shadow dodged around the trunk of the tree. He was more angry than frightened, for his sharp eyes had spied a little hollow in a branch of the chestnut tree, and he knew that once inside of that he would have nothing to fear. But he was angry clear through to think that he should be cheated out of that dinner he had been so sure of only a few minutes before. So he screamed angrily at old Redtail, and then, watching his chance, scampered out to the hollow and whisked inside just in the nick of time.

Chatterer, watching from the spruce tree, gave a great sigh of relief. He saw Redtail the Hawk post himself on the top of a tall tree where he could keep watch of that hollow in which Shadow had disappeared, and he knew that it would be a long time before Shadow would dare poke even his nose outside. Then as he was rested Chatterer stole softly, oh, so softly, away through the tree tops until he was sure that Redtail could not see him. Then he hurried. Yes, indeed, he hurried then. He wanted to get just as far away from Shadow the Weasel as he could.

French 'Reunion' Isle Has Interesting History

Reunion's history is as varied as its topography. Discovered in 1545 by a Portuguese, Mascarenhas, the island bore his name until 1643 when it was claimed for France and renamed Bourbon Island. Colonization began in 1664 at St. Paul bay under the direction of the French East India company. In 1764 the island reverted to the French government. When the Revolutionists came to power in France they called the island "Reunion," an idea that endured only to the rise of Napoleon.

"Ile Bonaparte" then became the fashion. The English seized the island in 1810, and gave it back five years later. "Reunion" again emerged as the island's official name.

Reunion has been administered as a department of France through a resident governor and consul general. Three delegates, one to the French senate, two to the house of deputies, traveled the 7,500 miles to Paris to represent the island's interests in the French parliament. Their constituents are, for the most part, Frenchmen, British, Indians, Chinese, Africans, and natives of Madagascar. To Reunion, France has sometimes sent political exiles, notably Abd el Krim, famed Riff leader, in 1926.

Cassowaries Largest of Borneo's Odd Birds

Largest of the many strange birds of Borneo are the cassowaries, relatives of the ostrich and emu. Characteristic features are possession of horny casques and neck wattles. Some six species of these flightless birds of the genus Casuarius occur in Australia, Borneo and neighboring islands. They inhabit the forests and, while preferring a fruit, vegetable and rodent diet, have strong digestions, for, in common with the ostrich, they will eat almost anything.

All are about five feet high, with a black, horny-plated casque on the head, writes Edith M. Laing in Nature Magazine. Stout gray legs, capable of high speed, can deliver a bone-breaking kick and the long, horny, spiked claw of the inner toe can mortally lacerate an enemy. Would-be molesters had better beware, too, of the spine-like quills with which the rudimentary wings are equipped.

U. S. Steel Reports 1942 Production 28 Per Cent Greater Than World War I Peak

United States Steel Corporation's Annual Report for 1942, reporting attainment of a steel ingot tonnage production 28 per cent greater than in the peak year of World War I, has just been released as "a production story—and a financial story—of a great war effort."

Production by U. S. Steel in 1942 of more than 20,000,000 net tons of ingots as well as the manufacture of a steady flow of products entering into thousands of items used in prosecuting the war were described by Irving S. Olds, Chairman of the Board of Directors, in his review of the year contained in the Corporation's forty-first annual report.

The victory parade of steel ingots was listed as only one of several principal contributions of U. S. Steel to the war effort. These contributions were enumerated as follows: "First, a record volume of steel and other materials needed not only for the fabrication of essential war products but also for the creation of new facilities to make such war products has been produced. Second, the technical ability representing many decades of accumulated research and experience has been made available for the requirements of the Government. Third, the construction and operation of vast new facilities for the Government in connection with the war effort have been undertaken. Fourth, millions of dollars of U. S. Steel's funds have been expended for various facilities contributory to the war effort."

A one-page condensation of the financial record of the Corporation for the year describes in simple language what disposition was made of the $1,865,851,592 received by the Corporation from sales of its products and services during 1942. Employment costs of $783 million in 1942 were 25% greater than for the previous year; 1942 taxes of $394 million were 21% more than in the preceding year; while dividends to stockholders remained unchanged. "The amount carried forward for future needs of the Corporation was 76% less than in 1941."

Among achievements cited is the development of the airplane landing mat. The serious problem of landing planes on hastily built air fields was solved with the war-time invention by Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, a U. S. Steel subsidiary, of a landing mat, consisting of portable interlocking steel sections. It was pronounced the outstanding development of the year in the field of aviation by the Chief of the Army Air Force. As mass production methods were evolved, other companies were licensed to use the process, and thirty smaller manufacturers are now producing these landing mat sections in quantity.

The report reveals that in 1942 one subsidiary, Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, completed more destroyers for the Navy Department in shorter building time than any other shipyard in the country. A new shipyard built by this subsidiary for the Navy Department began operations five months after ground was broken. A fully equipped shipyard for the production of the latest type of tank landing craft was constructed and is being operated for the Navy Department by American Bridge Company, another subsidiary.

An interesting comparison of the use of U. S. Steel's own resources and of Government funds for the expansion of emergency facilities undertaken by U. S. Steel from June, 1940, to the end of 1942, shows that the ratio of U. S. Steel's investment to the use of Government funds was 65c of its own money to every dollar of Government funds used. This compares with a ratio for all industry of 27c of private funds to one dollar of Government funds. In this expansion program, U. S. Steel's private investment was $262,000,000, as compared with $436,000,000 of Government funds expended, making a total of $718,000,000 expended in the program.—Ads.

Pyramid Priests of Egypt

The most obvious means to measure the length of the sun-indicated year was to build pyramids sloped to an angle of the sun's elevation at noon, on the first day of the Egyptian spring season (our March 1). The pyramid's pointed shadow on the meridian floor line indicated the moment at noon, when the shortest shadow ended 365-day years on February 28, and their three hundred and sixty-sixth day as leap day on February 29, in then secretly kept leap years.

Homemakers to Study "Emergency Meals"

Boone County Homemakers will study "Emergency Meals" in their regular meetings during April. This lesson will stress the need for emergencies and suggest dishes suitable for this purpose. The luncheon will feature "soybeans" which are the only complete vegetable protein and substitute for meat in the diet.

The business sessions will be devoted to a study of problems of the Homemaker and from this study, the selection of desired project lessons for the coming year. Every member is urged to be present and contribute to this discussion. The county-wide project study is based on majority vote of individual members.

Plans will also be discussed for the annual spring flower show—scheduled for last week in April, and the District Federation meeting Tuesday, April 27, to be held in Lexington.

Members are urged to attend, visitors are welcome, according to Mary Scott Moore, Home Demonstration Agent. The schedule ie as follows:

Date Community Place E. W. T. April 1—Burlington Courthouse, 1:00; April 2—Verona, Dorothy Dance, 11:30; April 7—Constance, Mrs. John Hempfling, 10:30; April 8—Petersburg, Mrs. W. O. Rector, 11:30; April 9—Walton, Mrs. J. C. Bedinger, 11:00; April 13—New Haven, to be announced, 11:00; April 14—Hebron, Masonic Hall, 10:30; April 15—Bullittsville, Mrs. M. M. CONTROL CAN DO WHAT PROHIBITION CAN'T!

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"I was just tellin' my brother Fred this morning, Judge...there's never been a time in our lives when we got to live up to the old sayin' 'United we stand, divided we fall' more than we have to today."

"How true that is, Herb. And for the life of me, I can't figure out why, at a time like this, some folks insist on raising a question like prohibition. I can't imagine anything that would tickle our enemies more than to get us folks over here taking sides against each other, arguing about an issue like that. We've got a he-man's job on our hands to win this war and we can't be wasting our minds, our money and our strength fighting about something we tried for nearly 14 years and found couldn't work.

"I say there's a time and a place for everything, and this is no time or place to be doing any fightin' except the kind that's going to win the war."

Walton Boy Bags Zero In Air Battle

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wolfe, of Walton Route 2, received word Monday that their 28-year-old son, already a veteran Air Corps warrior, had bagged a Jap Zero fighter plane and returned to Henderson Field on Guadalcanal, although his Flying Fortress was riddled with bullets, two of its engines out, and the steering mechanism damaged badly.

War Department dispatches from Washington said today that Sergt. Wolfe was one of three members of the crew of a B-17, which along with two other Flying Fortresses scored three bomb hits on Japanese transports.

The Walton soldier is a gunner on the plane which fought its way back home after the other two Flying Fortresses were forced down in enemy territory.

One of the attacking planes was downed by another Kentuckian, Corp Charles W. Ward, of Slaughters, Webster county, while Second Lieut Kenneth W. Howat, of Verona, N. J., the bombardier, bagged a third Japanese fighter with his last nine rounds of ammunition, and then, even though wounded, dragged himself to another gun.

Corp. Phillip J. Murphey, of Columbia Fall, Mont., radio operator, apportioned the rapidly dwindling ammunition to other members of the plane's crew, although he had suffered a leg fracture and was forced to lie on his back. Capt. Jay P. Thomas, Salt Lake City, brought the plane back to Henderson Field despite its damaged condition.

Sergt. Wolfe was citied for bravery in the Battle of Midway. His assignments have included duty at Hickman Field, Honolulu, and he was present for the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

Enlisting in the Air Corps Feb. 12, 1941, the Walton flyer has not been home for two years. His first station of training following enlistment was at Ft. Slocum, New York.

He has been in the Solomons since last September. A former resident of Covington, Sergt. Wolfe attended Holmes High School and was graduated from Florence Hight School. He was employed by the Harris Construction Co. before entering the service.

4-H Club Presents Double-Feature Program.

New Haven 4-H Club will sponsor a double feature program of dramatics at the school on Friday evening, April 9. The one-act plays "Thanks Awfully", and "Alice's Blue Gown", will be presented by casts from the Florence and Burlington 4-H Clubs respectively. Proceeds will go into the 4-H Fair Ground Building Fund. The curtain goes up at 8:30 P. M., E. W. T.

Everyone will enjoy seeing James Bonar, as the smart young man, 90 through an exciting evening on his promise to say only "Thanks Awfully". He really gets a marriage proposal for his smoothness.

Louise McArthur, as Alice in the latter drama does a lot of worrying over her blue gown, while Martha Lizer, as her sister Patty, tries hard to get a word in to save a situation.

Both performances promise chuckles and out-loud laughs from the audience. The speciality numbers by the New Haven Club will add interest to the program.

The 4-H Club leaders will be recognized by Mrs. Mary Scott Moore, Home Demonstration Agent and H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Attend and enjoy the program while encouraging the young people in a commendable activity.

Mrs. Sallie R. Miller and Miss Emma Jane Miller went on Sunday to Carrollton, Ky., for a short visit with Mrs. Miller's son, Mr. Fred R. Miller and family, returning home on Monday.

County Service Roll Under Construction

The Boone County Service Roll, now under construction, will be placed on the courthouse lawn about the middle of April. Date for the unveiling and dedication will be announced soon.

Contribution to the fund are now being received by members of the committee. Many have said "When you are ready for the money I want to contribute." Now is the time. It is the desire of the committee to have the board completely paid for at the time of it's erection.

The committee is requesting from the citizens of Boone County the names of persons who are seeing, or have seen service in the Armed Services during this war. Lists have been secured from the Selective Service office, but many persons enlisted before this order was effective. Please turn in any names—duplicates can be checked—but omissions are unfortunate.

Members of the committee are: Mrs. Sam Sleet, Mrs. R. C. Garrison, Mrs. Albert Willis, Mrs. George Kottmyer, Mrs. John Boyer, Mrs. Alan Gaines. Local chairmen are Mrs. John Hempfling, Mrs. Essie Goodridge, Mrs. Sterling Dickey, Mrs. J. B. Berkshire, Mrs. Robert Clore, Mrs. George Morith, Mrs. Raymond Reneker, Mrs. John Lewis Faegan, and Mrs. Jonas Stephens. Mrs. Mary Scott Moore, Home Demonstration Agent, will received any contributions or names for the committee.

Farmers Urged Not to Burn Brush During April and May.

Frankfort, Ky., March—In an announcement today, E. G. McConnell, Director of the Division of Forestry, urged landowners throughout the state to refrain from burning brush during April and May, pointing out that the practice is not only dangerous but wasteful.

Officials said that this so-called Spring house-cleaning of our land owners where fires are started under the impression that they improve woodlots and pastures, kill weed seeds, and remove trash from the land, actually is of little benefit to the farmer.

MConnell pointed out that the practice of burning trash carefully raked into several piles and burned under control, or dumped in an old gully where it can provide cover for wildlife and help stop erosion, is most practical.

Experience and research, McConnell stated, have proved that pastures aren't improved by fire. The grass may look a little greener during the first couple of days in the Spring, but think of the cost. All the organic matter on top of the soil and the partly decomposed leaves, grass, etc., with which the soil is enriched is destroyed by fire. Young tree seedlings and the mulch floor of woodlots are destroyed by fire. This destruction of mulch, plus the loss of the trees, causes soil erosion, especially if there is any slope to the land.

But, this is not all, McConnell pointed out. The woodlot fires, the grass fires aren't always the stopping places. Fires get out of control, sometimes outbuildings, even homes go; sometimes other people's homes, not their own. Fires in fienls near mountain areas may assume tremendous proportions and result in staggering losses of timber, wildlife, homes and even human lives. We can't afford to sacrifice any of these resources in this all-out war effort, he concluded.

Fence Rationing Discontinued

A discontinuance of fence rationing was announced today by M. D. Royse, Chairman of the Kentucky USDA War Board upon the receipt of a telegram from M. Clifford Townsend, Director, Food Distribution Administration.

"The discontinuance of fence rationing comes at a time when all farmers have been wondering how they were going to replace farm fences which had become unusable and impractical for an all out effort of cattle production", explained Royse. Farmers desiring fencing need not apply at any agency for priority or written release but should contact their dealer for the purchase.

Pvt. Lloyd K. Howard Taking Parachute Training.

New River, N. C., Accepted for training as Paramarine, Pvt. Lloyd K. Howard, Walton, Kentucky, R. R. 2, is undergoing a rigorous course of instruction at the Parachute Training School of the Marine Training Center here.

Rugged, fast-moving and highly coordinated, the Paramarine is representative of the Marine Corps technique of individual training. Men are eligible for the Parachute School only after completing all phases of recruit training and must pass the same physical examination which is given to Naval Pre-flight men. They must make at least six jumps from an airplane before they are considered Paramarines.

Prominent Young Farmer Passes

J. O. Griffith the son of Mrs. Mattie Griffith and the late J. O. Griffith, was born March 13, 1919 and died April 5, 1943 at Good Samaritan Hospital following a short illness.

He was a life long resident of Boone County and a graduate of New Haven High School.

J. O. was one of Boone County's most promising young farmers, having been an active member in the 4-H Club for a number of years prior to his work with the Boone County Utopia Club of which he was president at the time of his death.

He was always active in the affairs of his community and will be missed by a host of friends and relatives.

Funeral services are to be conducted today (Thursday) at 1:30 at the home on Richwood Road, with burial in Highland Cemetery.

Chambers & Grubbs were in cragre of funeral arrangements.

The Convention Theme is "Our Living Faith".

Woman's Literary Club Entertained

On Wednesday afternoon the Walton Woman's Literary Club enjoyed a most pleasant afternoon in the home of Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Alford, with the president, Mrs. Clayton Jones presiding.

Mrs. Pearl Johnson of Lexington was present and gave the "Thought for the Day", reading the first eight verses of the third chapter of Ecclesiastes.

The annual election of officers was conducted; Mrs C F Blankenbeker of Florence was honored with the Presidency, Mrs. Sam B. Sleet of Beaver Lick with the vice-presidency and Mrs. Cloyd Johnson of Big Bone Road and Mrs. R. G. Moore of Walton-Nicholson Highway with Secretary and Treasury, respectively.

At the close of the business session Mrs. C. F. Blankenbecker, chairman of the program committee introduced the guest entertainers, Marjorie Saal Martin of Florence, and Margaret West Davis of Erlanger who entertained with instrumental and vocal selections as follows, "Trees" Poem by Joyce Kilmer, music by Oscar Rashach. "Spring Showers", Wilhelm Fink, Marjorie Saal Martin; "British Children Prayer", Wolf; "Down in The Forest", Ronald, Margaret West Davis; "I'll Pray For You", "We'll Meet Again", popular medley, Marjorie Saal Martin; "Make Believe", Showboat; "My Buddy", popular medley, Margaret West Davis; "Liebestraum", "Over The Steppes", Schutte; Keep 'Em Flying", Marjorie Saal Martin.

Mrs. E. E. Fry concluded the program with a message of Easter.

Following adjournment the hostess, Mrs. Alford assisted by her mother, Mrs. Minnie Davis and Mrs. B. W. Franks served a tasty desert plate to members and guests, Mrs. Marjorie Eaal Martin of Florence; Mrs. Margaret West Davis of Erlanger; Mrs. James Brick of Cincinnati, O., Mrs. C. W. Thompson, Mrs. Minnie Davis, Mrs. John Myers, Mrs. Grover Ransom of Verona, Mrs. Sam B. Sleet and Mrs. Cloyd Johnson of Beaver Lick, Mrs. Pearl Johnson of Lexington, Mrs. C. F. Blankenbecker of Florence, Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Mrs. J. R. Conrad, Mrs. B. W. Franks, Mrs. J. C. Bedinger, Mrs. C. S. Chambers, Mrs. Lotta Powers, Mrs. John L. Vest, Mrs. Clayton Jones, Mrs. A. P. Stephens, Mrs. Alan H. Gaines, Mrs. E. Bruce Wallace, Mrs. D. L. Lusby and Miss Emma Jane Miller.

Mr. A. M. Edwards who has been in Booth Hospital for the past month is improving and able to sit up. His many friends here wish him a speedy recovery.

Boone County Wool Pool Elect Officers

The Boone County Wool Pool members elected officers for 1943 in a county meeting held at Burlington Monday. Officers elected were: H. E. White, president, Lillard Scott, secretary-treasure. Directors are B. W. Franks, Walton; Mrs. Alma Riley, Union; J. W. Conley, Beaver; C. F. Blankenbeker, Florence; C. S. Riddell, Hebron; L. C. McGlasson, Constance; Charles Stevens, Petersburg; W. H. Presser, Carlton; Walter Johnson, Verona; H. E. White, Burlington; and Lillard Scott, Grant.

Plans were made to purchase wool sacks and have them available to all pool members at convenient points in the county.

Reports of the secretary showed the pool handled last year 63,931 pounds of wool which brought members a net total of $31,281. The Boone County pool has served local sheepmen for forty years. It has rendered a valuable marketing service to the sheep industry, selling more than 90% of the county wool clip in recent years.

The pool extends a hearty invitation for all sheep raisers to join in with their fellow farmers in selling the 1943 clip. The clip is pooled and sold as a whole under sealed bids. The buyer receives and pays for each member's wool at one of three convenient places in the county.

All farmers may pool their wool without cost by signing up with one of their local directors or solicitors. It's your pool. Give it your support by signing up before May 1.

Mrs. George Caroland and Miss Helen Ruth Gardner spent Saturday in Louisville shopping and also visited the Christians Widows and Orphans Home there.

NOTICE TO THE TAXPAYERS OF THE TOWN OF WALTON

This is to certify that I, J. B. Doan have audited the town books of R. E. Brugh of the town of Walton to July 10th, 1942 as satisfactory.

Cropper Candidate For County Judge

Judge C. L. Cropper who was appointed County Judge of Boone County on September 8, 1942 by Governor Johnson to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Judge N. E. Riddell, now makes his formal announcement as a candidate for County Judge for the unexpired term beginning January 1, 1944, subject to the Democratic Primary election to be held August 7, 1943.

Judge Cropper served as Acting Judge under Judge Riddell for twelve years and is thoroughly acquainted with the affairs of the office of County Judge and the Fiscal affairs of Boone County. He is well qualified to advise and help manage the financial affairs of the County due to his eighteen years banking experience. He is forty-five years of age, was born in Boone County and attended the public schools of this County, and graduated from the Burlington High School in 1916, he then entered the University of Kentucky where he studied until April 1918 when he enlisted in the United States Army in World War I, after the war he returned to Boone County and farmed with his father for four years. In 1925 he was made Assistant Cashier of the old Boone County Deposit Bank and in 1927 when the two Banks of Burlington merged he was transferred to the present Peoples Deposit Bank as Assistant Cashier and he is now connected with this Bank as Vice President.

In 1934 he was elected to the State Legislature to represent Boone and Grant Counties and served in this capacity for two years, for the past seven years he has been Chairman of the Boone County Democratic Executive Committee, is a member of Boone Post No. 4, American Legion, Treasurer of the Boone County Chapter American Red Cross, member Burlington Masonic Lodge and the Burlington Baptist Church.

Judge Cropper makes the following statement;

That Boone County has the reputation of being one of the best governed Counties in the State and that it will retain this reputation as long as he serves as County Judge, that the financial affairs of the County are in splendid condition due to the efficient and business management of the late Judge Riddell and the Fiscal Court, and that he intends to carry on this efficient management with the cooperation of the Fiscal Court, that the affairs of the County will be operated within the budget and to the best interest of all people in the County, that it is a privilege and pleasure to serve the people of Boone County and their support and influence will be greatly appreciated in the August election.

Mrs. Mary Kelly

Mrs. Mary Kelly, 77, grandmother of Robert Beaman, assistant principal of Holmes High School in Covington, died Thursday night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Blanche Beemon, Dorothea Avenue, Florence, Ky. She was a member of the Petersburg Christian Church, Petersburg, Ky.

Besides her daughter and grandson she leaves four sisters, Mrs. Charles Kelly, Mrs. Myrtle Sebree, Mrs. William Huey and Mrs. Stanley Cloré; a brother, Leslie Sullivan, and one great-granddaughter,

Clinic Held At Burlington School

Under the auspices of the school and Perent-Teacher Association Dr. M. A. Yelton, assisted by Mrs. J. K. Cropper, Mrs. W. L. McBee and the Red Cross Nurse conducted a clinic for the prevention of diphtheria at Burlington School Monday, April 5th.

All mothers in the community were invited to bring babies from 6 months up as well as school children. Some came but we wish there had been more babies as babies are much more apt to have diphtheria than older children; however we had a good clinic.

There will be a clinic of the same type conducted at Hamilton School, Friday, April 9th at 10 A. M., also New Haven April 8, at 10 A. M.

Allied Forces Continue Tunisian Drive; Pressure for Tough Labor Legislation Halted by Continuation of Coal Parley; Soggy Terrain Hampers Red Offensive

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

TUNISIA:
'Fox' Seeks Cover

When Marshal Rommel threw back the British eighth army in the narrow coastal corridor of Tunisia, it looked like the great struggle of the Mareth line might resolve into a bloody battle of attrition. But then Gen. Bernard Montgomery sent a strong armored column around the southern anchor of the Mareth line and it succeeded in swinging back and trapping the Axis forces from the rear.

Thus faced with heavy pressure from his front and rear, Rommel pulled out his army from the Mareth line. As the British took over Gabes and El Hamma, Rommel was withdrawing northward toward the marshes and salt flats strung out along the coastal plain. Here Rommel is expected to concentrate his army of 80,000 men in the few passable trails.

Threatening Rommel's flank for almost 100 miles up the coastal plain to the north, were two American columns. One was polsed at Maknassy and the other at Fondouk. Both overlook roads leading to the main path of Rommel's retreat. Should either of these forces break through the Allies would cut the Axis armies in the south off from those in the north.

BASE:
For Offensive?

When Herbert Morrison, British home security minister, announced that the entire east and south coast of Great Britain to a depth of ten miles was to become a "restricted area," military experts began speeding up their predictions regarding the Allied invasion of Europe.

In fact, the official British announcement declared that there was a possibility that this area might be used as "a base for offensive operations."

Meanwhile, London sources were busy issuing bits of information leading friend and foe alike to believe that as soon as the fighting was over in Tunisia, the invasion of the continent would begin. British, U. S. and Canadian land forces were massed together with air and sea power for this action, these reports indicated, and practically every mile of coastline was said to be the first objective of the United Nations' drive.

BERLIN:
Blocks Busted

One thousand tons of bombs were showered on Berlin by 400 British bombers in the 60th air raid of the war on the German capital. Twenty-one ships failed to return.

The raid on Berlin followed an equally heavy assault on the Nazi submarine base of St. Nazaire. Here, 1,000 tons of bombs also were reported dropped on docks, hangars and warehouses. One-quarter of the city was aflame and seven huge fires raged.

Continuing to pound Germany's vital industrial valley of the Ruhr, RAF bombers pounded the iron, steel and coal center of Bochum, which stands 10 miles east of the great Krupp steel works of Essen. Bombs also were dropped on the engine manufacturing center of Duisberg.

RUSSIA:
New General

All eyes are turned now on General Spring in Russia.

Spring thaws along the entire 2,000-mile Russian front are not expected to be severe because of the relatively mild winter. The degree of bogginess depends upon the intensity of the spring rains.

Soggy terrain has been hampering the Red push on Smolensk. One column bearing down on the Nazi base from the north is reported to have knifed through defensive positions below Bely. Two other columns moving in from the east have encountered stiff resistance. Rains have turned the swampy country into almost impassable quagmires.

Following the Nazi's successful counterattack in the Kharkov and Belgorod areas along the southern front, fighting in this sector has abated. Russian troops are said to hold some positions on the western bank of the Donets river, gained during their recent winter offensive.

LABOR:
Tough Legislation

Extension of the negotiations between the Appalachian soft coal operators and the United Mine Workers union for a 30-day period stalled temporarily the pressure for some of the toughest labor legislation to be given consideration in congress in recent years.

Had the agreement not been reached it had been freely predicted around Capitol Hill that stern steps to curb union activities would have been taken in both house and senate. One such measure which had been reported ready for a quick vote was the Hobbs anti-racketeering bill. Also the senate judiciary committee gave a unanimous indorsement to a measure intended to empower the President to seize and operate any mine or factory whenever a labor dispute halted production. This was the anti-strike law first introduced in November, 1941.

This measure had once been allowed to die because the White House had asked the pressure be taken off.

SKIP-YEAR TAX:
First Defeat

In an action reflecting on both Democratic and Republican leadership the house of representatives rejected the Rumi skip-a-year tax plan and the administration's collection-at-the-source plans.

Excited representatives directed the ways and means committee to draw up a new bill that would put the income taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Representative Martin, Republican leader, had expressed confidence that Republicans would get across the Rumi plan to skip 1942 taxes and let them apply on 1943 income taxes.

Representative McCormack, Democratic leader, failed to keep majority members in line for the administration's collection-at-the-source bills. He was in charge while Speaker Sam Rayburn was absent.

The chamber's defeat of the Rumi plan tossed the controversy back into the lap of the committee. Leaders predicted there will be no effort to revive it until increased tax rates are considered later in the year.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

SMALL FAMILIES: Out of the 35 million families in the U. S. in 1940, 85 per cent had two children or less. The birth rate of 1942 also fell below the World War I standard despite the recent record level.

TAXES: Nearly 40 million income tax returns have been filed, the treasury reported, and income tax payments for March approximated $4,500,000,000.

BUMS RUSHED: On a recent night, only 629 vagrants applied for shelter in British institutions. This was the lowest figure in 100 years. 16,911 were housed during the peak of the depression of 1932.

DRAFT: Only employment in essential industry is now considered grounds for draft deferment. Dependency is no longer regarded as a factor.

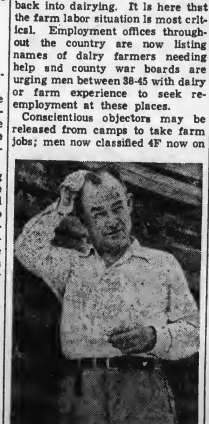
CONGRESSMEN:
And Garden Seeds

Out of the nation's capital came this message to the country's ambitious 1943 Victory Gardeners:

Don't ask your congressman, whoever he is, for garden seeds. He'll be glad to get you all the informational booklets obtainable (from the department of agriculture) but he hasn't been giving away seeds since 1923.

The practice of giving away seeds was stopped at that time because the packets were cluttering up the Capitol and encouraging great srmies of rats to invade the offices of the lawmakers.

Requests are still coming in, say the congressmen, and cannot be filled for no seeds are available.



The fact that such requests have been addressed to congressmen indicates the widespread interest in the Victory Garden program.

FARM LABOR:
New Plans

Shortly after he had been summoned to Washington as the nation's new food administrator, Chester C. Davis conferred with President Roosevelt, Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard and farm leaders to discuss means of handling the mounting crisis in farm labor. Later, President Roosevelt declared that while Davis was not yet to make known his plans, it was rather definite that a strongly persuasive program to get draft-age men in nonessential pursuits to shift to war jobs, including agriculture.

First objective would now be to get former experienced workers back into dairying. It is here that the farm labor situation is most critical. Employment offices throughout the country are now listing names of dairy farmers needing help and county war boards are urging men between 38-45 with dairy or farm experience to seek re-employment at these places.

Conscientious objectors may be released from camps to take farm jobs; men now classified 4F now on

CLAUDE WICKARD
The mounting crisis in farm labor

nonessential jobs will be urged to get into essential work; selective service registrants over 45 having dairy experience will be urged to get back into that line of work; and if these methods do not work county war boards will obtain the names of experienced dairy workers who have left the farm and these workers will be urged to return.

It is predicted that these general methods will be used in solving the labor problem in all other lines of farming in addition to dairying.

Also in the offing is the organization of a "land army" to help harvest the nation's food crops this year. English-speaking workers from the Bahama islands and Jamaica may be brought in for work in the East and Mexicans may be used in the Southwest.

LONE FORTRESS

A single American Flying Fortress wrote its own page of history in the South Pacific when it forced a Japanese convoy of four fast destroyers to turn tail as it attempted to reinforce New Guinea garrisons.

The Fortress spotted the convoy in the same Bismark sea area where a Jap convoy of 22 ships was sunk in March. Although the weather was so bad the bombardier had to drop flares to illuminate the target, he scored a direct hit on the stern of the largest destroyer.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND
DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

PRESIDENT LISTENS

The President did the listening, instead of the talking, when he conferred on farm manpower and food with three prominent farm leaders —Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange, H. E. Babcock, vice president of the National Council of Farmer Co-operatives, and Ezra T. Nelson, its executive secretary.

The farm spokesmen spent about 30 minutes of the 37-minute conference expounding their views on what caused the food shortage now facing the country and what has to be done to remedy it. The President confined his remarks chiefly to asking questions.

He began by telling his visitors that the food situation was "extremely serious."

"That's why I invited you gentlemen here today—to get your opinions on what has to be done," the President said. "Go ahead and be as frank as you like."

The farm leaders accepted the challenge. They charged the administration with "shortsightedness" in dealing with farm labor deferments and contended that government price policies also had contributed to the farm manpower shortage.

Local Draft Problem.

"If you want my views, I'll give them to you, Mr. President," spoke up Ezra Nelson. "Two things have to be done and done immediately. First of all, someone in authority here in Washington must tell these local draft boards where to head in.

"They must be told that they have almost as much responsibility to see to it that we have sufficient manpower to produce food for the war effort as they have to provide men for the fighting forces. Food is just as important as munitions in my opinion. We can't fight the war without it, and we can't let our civilians starve.

"A lot of these local draft boards still feel that they must fill their induction quotas," Nelson continued. "The boards have been assigned quotas, but they don't have to meet them, at least not in sections where there is a crying farm labor shortage. You, or someone else should tell them this."

The President pointed out that many young farmers don't want to be deferred.

"This isn't the fault of the draft boards," he said. "The young men themselves are so patriotic that they do not want to remain on the farm while a war is going on."

It was agreed that steps would have to be taken to convince selectees that they could serve their country as well on the farm as in the army. Goss suggested that one "way out" would be to induct farm hands and then "furlough" them back to the farm at prevailing farm wages, instead of army pay. This would require legislation, but the President said it was an idea worth considering.

Stop Selling Cows.

"The second thing that has to be done is for the government to step in and stop the widespread selling of dairy cows and other stock and farm equipment by farmers who are unable to continue in business at present farm price levels," Nelson continued.

"I'm as much opposed to inflation as you are, Mr. President," he added, "but we have got to make it possible for farmers to operate at a fair profit if we are to lick this threatened food shortage. They have got to be assured fair prices in order to pay wages that will keep their help from migrating to jobs in industry."

The co-operative official contended that farms had lost two-thirds of their manpower to war industries because of low farm wages.

The President said that he, too, was deeply concerned about this factor, suggested to his callers that they get together with Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and map out a program embracing their recommendations.

"Then come back and see me again," urged the President. "I want to continue these discussions."

CAPITAL CHAFF

The super-cabinet's careful consideration of how big our armed forces should be was actually a sham battle. FDR has the "old dutch up" over the size of the armed forces and wouldn't take anybody's say-so on this point, except the army's own plan, conceived way back in 1938 . . . The army in 1938 had no idea whether we would have the ships in 1943 to transport troops abroad, but is sticking to its original plan just the same. And FDR is 100 per cent behind it.

John McClintock, assistant co-ordinator of inter-American affairs, is off to the Amazon, to inspect food and health programs for rubber tappers.

When General Marshall turned down the rank of "Field Marshal" he also knocked over a carefully laid plan whereby Admiral King would become "Admiral of the Fleet" . . . To date only three men have won the title "Admiral of the Fleet"—Dewey, Farragut and Porter . . . Tipoff on the proposal to make King Admiral of the Fleet was so he could outrank Admiral Leahy.

Little Evidence Seen of Farm Land Speculation

Rural America Seen as Bulwark Against Post-War Depression; 'Nervous Gentlemen' Admit Possibilities of Speculative Wave.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

If you see a cheerful glow along the horizon of rural America these evenings, you'll know what it is—not a prairie fire or the neighbor's barn, but the happy light of burning mortgages.

The farmers of America have had their lesson. They aren't throwing their money around this time. They are paying their debts. They are becoming the solid citizens of the nation. They are building a bulwark against a post-war depression that can save the nation financially, unless . . .

Right now, the financial health of rural America is better than it has been in many a long decade. But certain nervous gentlemen are beginning to worry. Will the farmer keep to the straight and narrow or will he be tempted to put down an option on distant hills which are beginning to turn an alluring green?

Listen to what one of those cautious gentlemen in Washington, Frank Wilson of the department of commerce, has to say. Why, you may ask, does the department of commerce, whose job it is to look after the welfare of the city man, worry about the farmer? Well, when the farmer goes broke, the city man closes up shop. But, a word from Mr. Wilson:

"While the level of farm values throughout most parts of the Middle West has increased 10 to 15 per cent in the last year, and the transfer of farm properties has been greatly accelerated, there is, as yet, no evidence of the recurrence of the destructive speculation in farm lands which followed the First World war."

So far so good. But here is Mr. Wilson's postscript:

"Farm lending authorities throughout that area, however, admit that conditions are in the making from which a speculative wave might result unless price control measures can be effective in holding farm prices at or only moderately above present levels."

Mortgage Survey

The department of commerce made a survey of the farm mortgage situation in 19 states where the bulk of the food production for war is being made.

The federal land banks and the Farm Credit administration which has been watching this situation like a hawk has plenty of data. One out of every ten—or more than 100,000 —farmer-borrowers from the 12 federal land banks and land bank commissioner repaid his loan in full in 1942.

In the 19 states the department of commerce studied, according to the 1940 census, there were more than three million farms, more than half of all the farms in the country. Their total value is well over half the total value of farm lands in the country.

The survey of this territory, just made public, shows that in 1940, '41 and '42, indebtedness of farmers to the Farm Credit administration dropped a quarter of a billion dollars. This includes the drouth area in Kansas, one of the states hit hardest by the drouth, 10,000 farmers got out of debt and Kansas borrowers kept right on paying until they had deposited a million dollars in the "future payment fund" to anticipate labor installments. Similar statistics could be reeled off for other areas.

One thing that has helped the debt payment is the inability to get into further debt—for automobiles and other commodities which just aren't for sale.

Will that memory fade? Will the farmer's money begin to burn a hole in his pocket? Will those green pastures just over the hill begin to lure him beyond his means?

As I said, the cautious folk in Washington are a little worried. These are some of the danger signals they see:

A possible rise in values which cannot be exactly predicted or explained. But which is always a possibility, if not now, after the war. Then there will be an accumulation of cash; there will be a lot of war bonds in the safe deposit box or in the old sock. There will be a lot of husky young sons returning from the war for whom fathers will want to buy farms, there will be perhaps an increased demand for farm products as new foreign markets are opened or the United States begins to help feed a starving world.

In some places, there is evidence of the tendency toward speculation now. Lenders in Iowa are offering money against Iowa farm land as low as 2½ per cent. Speculation in livestock is going on in some places. But there is no trend now toward the wild buying of World War I.

"And," says Mr. Wilson, "if the tremendous gains in the farm indebtedness situation can be held, the capacity of the great agricultural areas of the nation to absorb the flood of products that will come to all markets after the war will be tremendous."

The financial fate of post-war America is pretty much in the hands of the farmers. Let's hope he won't let it (and his spare cash) slip through his fingers.

Two-Way Attack On 'Beveridge Plan'

When the administration's "Beveridge plan" for increased social security and post-war adjustment was made public, congress proceeded to make it plain that they intended to pigeon-hole it. The general impression was that it was laid away because it was too "socialistic" to suit the right wingers or even some of the middle-of-the-roaders.

But do not think that all the opposition came from one direction. The first adventure of the new social security program was, in reality, very much like the "Charge of the Light Brigade" for there were "cannons to right of them" and also "cannons to left of them" which volleyed and thundered. As I said, the offensive from the right was taken for granted. But the attack of the left wing, while not as vocal, seems to be just as vehement. There is proof in a press release which probably was released by very few papers. It comes from the "People's Lobby" in Washington, an institution which believes in "public ownership of natural resources, basic industries and essential processing and distributive agencies."

But the "People's Lobby" thinks the President's plan is nowhere near socialistic enough. In fact, it is just "another trick . . . to try to lull the people into a sense of false security while economic royalists continue, through ownership, to dictate the standards of living of the American people."

Washington— Geometric City

The other day, I heard on a radio broadcast the statement that Washington was a geometric city. We have so many squares and circles and other geometric figures—Dupont circle that I pass every day, Lafayette square with its historic memories (not to mention its squirrels) where I spend my extra seconds; the Octagon house, built by a wealthy friend of George Washington, where society was lavishly entertained in the early 1800s, now preserved by the American Institute of Architects which bought it to preserve its stately beauty as well as to house their offices; the sprawling Pentagon building of the army, "a city with a roof over it."

With this in mind, I was suddenly impressed with the new patterns imposed on Washington since the war, the human figures, two of which I watched over my lunch in a restaurant the other day. At the next table were, not circles nor squares but human loops and bulges.

One was a slim man in eyeglasses. His nose was a loop, his smooth hair was looped back over his forehead. His gestures were looped, the back of the wrist bent and higher than his fingertips as he dangled his cigarette—I could only think of the paws of a lackadaisical pup begging for a sweet.

His partner was Mr. Bulge. The bulge began below the wrinkle in his vest and it was the only thing that kept him far enough away from the table to save his bulging nose from reaching the soup I could hear him inhaling. His hands bulged like the padded arms of an overstuffed chair in a hotel lobby. His cheeks were pink and bulging hams.

Washington is learning new lessons in human geometry.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

The personnel section of the Japanese ministry of commerce has prepared a set of "laws of etiquette" which is to be distributed to Japanese officialdom throughout occupied Manchuria. The "laws" cover such details as "posture, attitude, salute, honorific address and address to subordinates." The manner of one's demeanor at meals and the manner of telephoning are detailed.

By removing unnecessary frills from scores of articles, ranging from hairpins to industrial power trucks, WPB last year saved 800,000 tons of steel, 17,000 tons of copper, 180,000,000 yards of cloth, 30,000 tons of leather, 450,000,000 feet of lumber, 227,000 tons of pulp, 35,000 tons of solder, 8,000 pounds of tungsten and enough man hours to build 22 Liberty ships.

I LICKED MY CONSTIPATION

Of course, it wasn't due to anything organically wrong with me. It was just ordinary constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet.

A dose of some medicinal laxative gives only temporary relief for such constipation. You got to find something that gets at the cause and corrects it. I found just that—in KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN.

ALL-BRAN is a wonderful-tasting breakfast cereal and a swell way to start the morning. Eat it regularly, drink plenty of water and —if your constipation's like mine—you'll "Join the Regulars," too! ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek, Michigan.

The 2nd War Loan Starts April 12

13 billion dollars must be raised!

THE GOVERNMENT of the United States is asking us to lend it 13 billion dollars in the next few weeks. We can do it. And we must do it. Every American must realize the truth:

In this, our toughest war, we've made a good start. We've trained a lot of men—made a lot of weapons—built a lot of ships.

But it's only a start. No man or woman among us would contend for a single instant that we're doing enough now to win this war!

We've Got to Build More!

We broke all records building 8 million tons of shipping last year. But grim-faced Army and Navy men will tell you that the 18 MILLION tons we're building this year still won't be enough!

We've Got to Fight More!

From now till this war is won, America must be on the offensive. In ever-increasing numbers, your sons, brothers, husbands must go into actual battle. Our losses have already begun to mount—and they will not grow less.

And We've Got to Buy More War Bonds!

Sure we're all buying War Bonds now. But we've got to help pay for our increased fighting and building . . . We've got to match, as best we can, the sacrifice of those Americans who are toiling and sweating on a dozen battle-fronts—with the bloodiest yet to come. The blunt fact is this: to keep our war machine going, we've got to dig up 13 billion extra dollars this month. 13 billion dollars over and above our regular War Bond buying!

In the next few weeks you may be visited by one of the thousands of volunteers who are contributing their time and effort to this Drive. But don't wait for him. Make up your mind now that before this drive is over, you're going to march right down to your nearest bank, Post Office, or place where they sell War Bonds, and do your duty. And don't ever forget this: in doing your duty, you're doing yourself one of the biggest favors of your life!

For United States War Bonds are the greatest investment in the world—bar none. They're investments tailored to fit your particular situation. And they give you the chance of a lifetime to order and get the kind of world you want to live in after this war. Every cent you put in War Bonds now will help to guarantee plenty of peacetime jobs making peace-living for every one of us.

For your Country's sake—for your own sake—invest all you can!

There Are 7 Different Types of U. S. Government Securities—Choose The Ones Best Suited For You:

United States War Savings Bonds—Series E: The perfect investment for individual and family savings. Gives you back $4 for every $3 when the Bond matures. Designed especially for the smaller investor. Dated 1st day of month in which payment is received. Interest: 2.9% a year if held to maturity. Denominations: $25, $50, $100, $500, $1000. Redemption: any time 60 days after issue date. Price: 75% of maturity value.

2½% Treasury Bonds of 1964-1969: Readily marketable, acceptable as bank collateral, these Bonds are ideal investments for trust funds, estates and individuals. A special feature provides that they may be redeemed at par and accrued interest for the purpose of satisfying Federal estate taxes. Dated April 15, 1943; due June 15, 1969. Denominations: $500, $1000, $5000, $10,000, $100,000—also $1,000,000 if registered. Redemption: Not callable till June 15, 1964; thereafter at par and accrued interest on any interest date at 4 months' notice. Subject to Federal taxes only. Price: par and accrued interest.

Other Securities: Series "C" Tax Notes; 7/8% Certificates of Indebtedness; 2% Treasury Bonds of 1950-1952; United States Savings Bonds Series "F"; United States Savings Bonds Series "G."

LETTER FROM AFRICA

The following letter was received by Mrs. Tom Percival from her son, Dr. C. L. Baker who is stationed somewhere in Africa.

January 18, 1943

Dear Mother and all the family;

After your letter of December 15th, which I received yesterday I feel "sorta" important since I am now "foreign correspondent to the Walton Advertiser, maybe I'll amount to something after all, don't you think? ha. All kidding aside I was glad my letter sounded interesting enough to put in the paper. I know that often my letters don't say much, however since I've been over here there are so many things to see and so little else to do that I have tried very hard to make them interesting. I've tried to be your eyes and ears.

No your questions are not "out of bounds" and I'll try to answer them, or rather those I don't forget as I am writing at the dispensary. First a bit of history and geography, we are on the North Coast of Africa and until I got over here I did not realize what an enormous continent this is.

The Northern belt of Algeria is about 1000 to 1500 miles long East West and still neither touches Egypt or the Atlantic ocean. Thats quite a lot of land, don't you think? Algeria extends south about 320 miles, then comes the wide belt of the Sahara Desert. I don't know for sure how wide the Sahara is but its like a belt across the middle of the Continent south of it comes the jungle where its hot and rainy and there is where the Negries are found. From the Mediteranian coast there are two ranges of the Atlas Mts. This leaves the Coastal plain, then the Mts., then the high platean, more Mts., then the Sahara.

Strictly speaking these people are not pure Arab, in fact the wildest conglomerate mass you can imagine but they are united under the Mohammed religion and for this reason they are called Arabs. These people are made up of almost all races that ever inhabited the Mediteranean shores.

The Berber is the true native here, he is found on the high platean and the desert. They say they are a superior race to these but so far I have not seen them.

These Arabs are decendents of the Ancient Phonecians who came from the coasts of Palestine long before Christ, and built the City of Carthage, close to present day Tunis. The Phonecians pushed back the natives and made slaves of them—then came the Romans then came the Mohammedian invasion, about 700 A. D. then the Turkish invasion and finally the French in 1881. In addition there are French, Italian and Spanish, all mixed up—the native Mohammidian is the one we call Arab, all these centuries these people have been the under dog so as you guess they are not very far advanced in our sense of civilzation, however I have seen some few really handsome Arabian men and one extremely beautiful Arab woman—the later go veiled usually, but this one (and I suppose her mother) walked pass our porch ine day in 10 ft. of us, without veils.

Now food—it got pretty bad in England at times, chiefly because we don't like English food and all of us are willing to agree they don't know how to cook. Here it is much better. When we landed we carried 2 days of "c" rations—two tins of dry biscuits, soluble coffee, sugar cubes, candy and a can of hash or pork and beans, etc. which is very satisfactory food. In addition we had 2 days of "d" rations which are chocolate bars with vitamins etc. added, they are too sweet for me. We ate "C" rations about a week or 10 days then others started coming in. Meat is extremely rare. we have had some fresh frozen meat 3 days and how we loved it. Most of our meat is canned, corn beef, spam, venna sausage, canned hash, canned vegetables, fruits, dried eggs (no good) bacon, dried potatoes (fair) dried onions (good), peanut butter and all kinds of preserves. We now get light bread and occasionally graham crackers, occasionally hot cakes for breakfast (how would you like to cook for 150 men at once?) Now and then we get fresh eggs from the natives, every 2 or 3 days fresh butter, adequate coffee and tea, only canned milk for our cereal, all the sugar we can use and beleive it or not salt is a bit scarce at the moment.

We can get candy at the commissary and fresh fruits to our hearts content, so you see we eat pretty well to be so far from home, but it still isn's like mother used to cook.

As to my location before you get this I think you will know especially if you caught my code, we are 26 miles from the place you said Rod Hughes told about.

Now hospitals, I work thru Army Hospitals only, although some I mentioned were at that time set up in civilian buildings. I do not work in one but often when I send a patient to one for one reason or another I go along for the ride and a change of scenery. Most Army hospitals carry tents to set up for every thing from patients to X-Ray equipment and they certainly have wonderful field equipment, one near us has just moved in and they will soon be equipped to make glasses, and false teeth in addition to all other type of work. Usually the doctors and nurses live in tents and some places I've seen they have had worse quarters than I've had since leaving Scotland, they have been in mud, shoe top deep and one day after a cloud burst I walked through water up to my knees to get into one, don't worry I had on hip boots, they were issued me in Scotland.

Our trucks are the wonder of all who see them, the 2½ toners with front wheel drive have 10 wheels pulling at once and very few things slide them, everyone of us are as proud of them as a Kentuckian is of a pure bred horse.

Even better, are those "Peeps" they will go where a horse can't go. I've seen them plough through mud 2½ to 3 ft. deep with out a pause and thats not any exaggeration—We all swear by them.

Well I've written quite a book, you too are writing interesting letters, so keep it up. Tell the girls I am receiving mail from them and to keep it up. Everything helps.

Love Layle

NICHOLSON

Jim was a lineman and a good one. But Uncle Sam needed men of his calibre in the Army, so now he's in North Africa.

Jim is only one of 100 employees of this company who are serving in the armed forces. Their departure leaves a gap in our ranks that is hard to fill. Men who have spent years learning the know-how of the electric business aren't easy to replace in times like these.

Already the pinch of the manpower shortage is making itself felt in certain phases of our operations. Despite the fact that we are constantly training new men, we are being forced to operate shorthanded in some localities. Wartime restrictions on the use of automotive equipment and shortages of materials, repair parts and supplies are also complicating the problem of rendering first-class service, but like other concerns in all lines of business, we're doing the best we can with what we have.

While things may not be quite the same with so many of our men away — and more going all the time — we intend to safeguard the adequacy of your electric supply and see that you get the best service possible under the prevailing conditions. You can help by keeping your electrical equipment in good condition, by learning to replace your own fuses and by avoiding rush calls and requests for special trips except in cases of genuine emergency.

Your cooperation will help conserve manpower, materials and rubber and will enable us to serve you better.

A TROPICAL PARADISE

Somewhere in the Pacific where the sun is like a curse,
And each long day is followed by another slightly worse,
Where the coral dust blows thicker than the shifting desert sands,
And the white men dreams and wishes for the greener fairer land.

Somewhere in the Pacific where a girl is never seen,
Where the sky is never cloudy and the grass is always green
Where the bats nightly howling robs a man of blessed sleep,
Where there isn't any whiskey and the beer is never cheap.

Somewhere in the Pacific where the nights were made for love,
Where the moon is like a searchlight and the Southern Cross Above,
Sparkles like a diamond in a balmy tropic night,
It's a shameless waste of beauty when there's not a girl in sight.

Somewhere in the Pacific where the mail is always late,
And a Christmas card in April is considered up to date,
Where we never have a pay-day and never get a cent,
But we never miss the money cause we'd never get it spent.

Somewhere in the Pacific where the ants and Lizzards play,
And a hundred fresh mosquitoes replace each one you slay.
So take me back to Frisco; let me hear the mission bell.

©GREGORY W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Ann Lee and Cole Cody, beneficiaries under two identical wills of Old Bill Cole, sought to discover who had fired the fatal bullet at Old Bill. Suspicion centered around Rance Waldron, who posed as Old Bill's nephew, and was living at the ranch when Ann and Cody arrived. Doc Joe and the Judge were returning to town from the ranch (each with a will in his pocket for safekeeping) when they were waylaid and shot by a masked bandit whom they recognized as Rance Waldron. To divert suspicion, Rance killed his accomplice, Tom Gough. Meanwhile, Cal Roundtree had discovered Old Doc Joe still lived.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XVIII

Those were the days when Ann Lee remained in the big, still old house. She moved softly through the dim rooms, the shades drawn against the glowing outside heat. She trailed her fingertips along table tops, along the backs of chairs; she smoothed the time-darkened walls with a palm of her hand. "I love you, Old House," she sometimes whispered when quite alone. "You've got your secrets, haven't you, Old House? All sorts of memories; heaps of 'em. Good ones, and bad ones, too, I bet! Dear old Early Bill was young once here, wasn't he? What was he like then, Old House? Why can't you tell me? And who was 'Sylvia'? Did something happen to her, did she die, long and long ago? When she was just a young girl like me? And did young Billy Cole, before he got to be old Early Bill, love her terribly? Did she love him, too, and was she, oh, so faithful and true to him?"

Dear, dead, faded rose leaves of romance, these were what she was finding everywhere. Folks thought that they knew old Early Bill from the crown of his ragged old Stetson to his spurred boot heels—but they didn't know him the way she did—the way "Sylvia" had known him when both were young.

"I love you, Early Bill! You're an old darling, that's what you are!"

And sometimes, alone in an early morning hour or in a hushed twilight, she would stand or sit very still, and would whisper,

"I know you are what folks call 'dead,' Early Bill—but I don't believe you've really gone away, not for one minute! I can feel you right here somewhere. Why, you're even near enough for me to reach out and touch—if only I could see you! And is Sylvia with you, too? You're laughing, Early Bill, you old scamp! I know you are!—Oh, why couldn't I have come sooner? Why couldn't I have known you?"

And it was in the patio of early mornings and in the summer magic of the long, lingering twilights that Ann Lee and Bill Cole Cody grew into the pleasant habit of meeting, to speak little, to dwell in a warm awareness of each other that was a glow like that lying about them over the hills and valleys; sometimes they looked at each other, each seeking what lay deep down in the other's eyes, a little searching their own hearts. Aunt Jenifer spied on them at times from a safe, secret distance, then went her quiet way smiling.

Thus they had been sitting on a particular evening, with even fewer words and with longer glances between them than ever before, when three occurrences burst upon them with the effect of sudden, unrelated and unexpected explosions. They had heard no sound of footsteps, so enwrapped were they in the concerns of their world which at the moment was far away from their immediate surroundings as was the star from which the girl's eyes came now so swiftly to try to read through the shadowy half-light what was written on his face, when of a sudden Porfirio stood before them.

"Don Codito!" he burst out in some tremendous excitement. "Come quick! For the love of God, Senor, come as fast as lightning! No, no, no! Not the senorita! You are to come alone. You won't believe it—I cannot tell you—it is a miracle, Don Codito!"

"Are you drunk, Porfirio?" snapped Cody.

Porfirio caught him by the sleeve and fairly heaved him up from his place at the girl's side and willy-nilly, short of a fight, Cody had to accompany him some few steps. Then Porfirio began whispering in his ear; and then Cody understood and went willingly enough, hurrying long-strides, eager and glad that one sequence of a tragi-comedy, a farcical one at that, was at an end. At the darkest corner of the house where a great live oak almost swept the ground with its lower branches, Porfirio brought him to Doc Joe.

When almost immediately Cole Cody came rushing back to Ann Lee, all but breathless, he found her standing in the patio, her slight body rigidly held, her hands at her sides, her chin lifted, her eyes on the stars. She hadn't known that he was really coming back at all; Porfirio's abrupt appearance had startled her, she was vaguely frightened—and for some reason her heart was pounding.

"Ann! Something wonderful! Listen, Ann—don't let it bowl you over. Come into the house; quick. And get Aunt Jenifer. There's something I want to tell both of you; it's just about the most wonderful news—you won't be able to believe it."

Aunt Jenifer's appearance must have smacked of magic; there she was as they came, hand in hand, into the lamp-lighted living room.

He released one of Ann's hands then and took one of Aunt Jenifer's. She saw how earnest and eager he was; she said quietly,

"All right, Cole. It's something to surprise us, but we won't be silly about it, especially since it's good news. We can take heaps of that, Ann and I."

When he told them, Aunt Jenifer sat down right in the middle of the floor; Ann reached out and clung tight to him and didn't seem to note that he had an arm about her.

Then Doc Joe came in.

Jenifer scrambled to her feet and kissed him. Ann Lee deserted Cole Cody and put both arms about Doc Joe and gave him a mighty hug.

"Oh, Doc Joe! Doc Joe!" she kept saying over and over.

Doc Joe beamed all over. He made them each a bow; he kissed first Jenifer's hand, then Ann Lee's.

"Ladies!" he exclaimed throatily, his face red. "I never thought anything could make a man so happy! It would have been worth it to be dead for sure, just to know that you cared like you do! I'm powerful happy and proud. Proud, ladies—shucks, that's no name for it."

"Aunt Jenny!" cried Ann Lee.

"Listen!" cut in Cody. "Doc Joe wants us to hide him a little longer; for only a few minutes or a few hours, I don't know. He knows a lot about Rance Waldron; he'll tell you what it is. And while we didn't know where Waldron had gone, he knew and was having him watched all the time. And he knows that Waldron is on his way right now to the ranch and ought to be here any minute. So it's up to us to get Doc Joe under cover in a hurry, then be ready for Waldron's coming."

"That's it, my boy, that's it!" said Doc Joe hurriedly. "I don't want any beans spilled until I do the spilling. Get me out of sight, can you, ladies? I'll try to do a mite of explaining to you while we wait. And that Waldron dog will be showing up in a jiffy. He's not to know I'm alive until I can up and tell him he's as good as dead. Where'll we go?"

"Into our rooms!" said Aunt Jenifer, and started leading the way. "That's the safest place." Then she said, "Shush!" and all stood at attention, straining their ears. Through the silence which shut down about them they heard distinctly the thud of hoofbeats not too far away.

"Hurry along," said Cole Cody. "I'll be in the main room. If it's Rance Waldron, I'll find out what he wants."

Rance Waldron wanted the ranch and meant to have it and already counted it as good as his to have and to hold or to coin into good hard money and toss where he liked, the way the wind tosses dead leaves.

He didn't knock; why should he, coming home, returning to his own place? He shoved the door open and strode in; his thumbs were cocked into his belt, his hat was far back on his thatch of hair, his eyes were bright and arrogant as they condescended to traffic with Bill Cole Cody's.

He was wearing riding gauntlets, new, ornate and expensive ones. His hands looked white and well cared for, the hands of a gambler whose fingers knew each card in the deck. He drew his gauntlets off, whipped them against his leg, tossed them along with his hat to the big table and sat down in the old comfortable chair before the fireplace. "Still hanging around, eh, Cody?"

The sight of a reptile, of a tarantula, say, of a rattlesnake, of any spider or snake—with some men it's a naked knife—can move a man tremendously, shooting into his blood a turbulence which may be compounded of abhorrence, of fear, of hate, of sheer animalism, of a tangle of complex instincts. Right now, looking at Rance Waldron's not unhandsome face, Bill Cole Cody's bloodstream was ruffled all but beyond endurance; it ran cold and it ran hot, and queer, blazing streaks of fire, like miniature stabs of lightning, shot through him.

"So you're still here, Cody, are you?" he said curtly. "You know, you're a fool, Cody, for sticking around in any hope of catching any few drops that might spill out over the top of the bucket. Because, if you listen to me, there won't be any drops spilled over. It might be a good time if you tucked your tail between your legs and got out of here. You haven't any claim here. It's common knowledge, told in every saloon, that you had some sort of a trumped up 'will,' a faked thing—and that you haven't even got that now. So you can get out in a hurry, Mr. Cody. Am I right?"

Cody swallowed. He answered very quietly, very slowly.

"Waldron, if I'm taking a big dose of you now, you'll know why later on. Suppose, until time comes, that you keep your mouth shut? I'm not asking a lot; the breath of the thoughts you think—stinks! Shut up!"

Waldron chose to laugh, and never was there a man who could put a nastier sneer into laughter which should be a pleasant thing and which can be detestable beyond most sounds.

"It's hard to swallow, huh, Cody?" he jeered: "Thought you had an edge on the situation, didn't you? Thought I'd take it the way you dished it out! Thought that if you couldn't take it any other way," he said, and jeered, "you'd gobble it along with that nifty piece of girl-meat, that little cuddly, pink-and-white female thing Ann Lee, that a man can buy a dozen of in town for—"

Cody struck the way lightning strikes. Leaping yards across the floor, Bill Cole Cody swung with his left hand and struck a blow for any hard-striking man to be proud of. Only—Rance Waldron wasn't there, wasn't at the end of that perfect short arc. He was three or four quick leaps behind it, jerking out his guns. And he was in high heaven, with full provocation to burn his man down. Attacked without warning, he had every right to go for his guns, to kill his man. And it would be so easy! If there were only a witness to his predicament, that of a man defending himself against a murderous attack.

That witness he had, but he knew that only later. It was Ann Lee who had stolen a-tip-toe from the room in which Doc Joe and Aunt Jenifer, two sentimental old fools, were explaining and talking two-at-a-time, and blinking against fat tear drops; a tremulous Ann Lee who was wondering where a certain William Cole Cody—"William," she thought; "that must be his real name; the name his mama and papa gave him"—had betaken himself. She heard and she saw, and she nearly dropped dead, hearing and seeing.

Now as Bill Cole Cody had leaped forward and the watchful Rance Waldron had leaped back to be out of his reach, Waldron fired and Cody struck again—and little Ann tried to scream and tried to shut her eyes, and could do neither. In a sort of trance she saw how it was that Bill Cody struck: Not with his fist this time, since that would have been too late; but as a bullet clipped through a loose fold of his sleeve, he struck with his whole body, launching himself like a long lean catapult with bullets ripping the air where he had been a split second before. And as his feet left the floor and he became a sort of giant's arrow in horizontal flight, and his head struck Rance Waldron in the middle, his long arms with those tremendously gripping hands of his grappled with the man he went toppling and crashing to the floor.

Now, Bill Cole Cody didn't miss all the bullets which swarmed about him like angry bees. Two of them scraped him, barely laid the skin back, and their effect was to cause him to lose all temper which he hadn't had time to lose already. There was a scratch along the top of his head, and blood ran down into his left eye; there was a twin scratch six or eight inches long down the back of his left shoulder. Ann Lee saw the blood and thought he was surely dead, and came running; she'd grab Rance Waldron's guns and shoot him all to pieces!

But no intereession was needed. As Waldron spilled back on the floor one of his guns flew out of his hands; Bill Cody, though with one eye dimmed, could see that. The other gun swung in its brief arc to blow his brains out, but Cody's hand swung quicker. He caught Waldron's wrist; he all but broke it in the power of his grip; slowly he twisted it so that the muzzle of Waldron's gun was against Waldron's temple. And then Bill Cody spoke his little speech:

"Pull the trigger now, Waldron, if you like. Or drop the gun—and drop it quick!"

MENTAL AILMENTS

There are ailments in which the patient recovers more rapidly in a hospital than in the home and others in which the home surroundings are best suited for rapid recovery. This means in some cases that there is something about the change to hospital life from home life that begets contentment and relaxation, and in other cases the "naturalness" of the home life reduces feelings of fear, anxiety or misgivings about outcome of ailment.

Dr. Barton

What about slight mental ailments?

At first thought it would seem that a patient suffering with mental depression, obsessions, anxiety, should recover more rapidly amid home surroundings. On second thought, however, the very nature of the home life with its deadly daily routine, quiet or noisy, the overanxiety of the family about the patient or on the other hand the feeling that there is nothing wrong with him (or her) and that kindness would be a mistake, interferes with recovery.

Trying to prevent neighbors knowing or guessing that the patient is a "mental" case also puts a strain on family and patient.

Doctors D. M. Hamilton and J. H. Wall in the American Journal of Psychiatry report the results in the treatment of 100 patients in hospital instead of the home. Treatment was given at the Westchester division of the New York hospital.

As with the majority of this type of mental ailments most of these patients were above the average in intelligence, the majority had graduated from college and some were engaged in professions. The outstanding symptoms in the order in which they occurred were tenseness, depression, anxiety, obsessions and compulsions, hypochondriasis (persisting in believing he has ailments despite evidence that he has not), weakness and fear of insanity.

The hospital treatment consisted mainly of interviews with the patient and supervision of his daily activities to fit his needs and abilities. The average length of hospital stay was 8½ months. A follow-up study, four to 14 years after this hospital treatment, showed 46 completely recovered, five much improved, 17 improved, making a total of 68 of the 100 who had benefited by the treatment. These were not insane patients, but patients who were not properly balanced.

Symptoms of Angina Pectoris

When a pain occurs in the region of the heart, it is only natural for the individual to fear heart disease, because heart disease does cause pain in and near the heart region, especially under the breast bone.

What is called angina pectoris—wiselike gripping pain in the chest—may or may not be a symptom of real or organic heart disease, but the patient should know what angina pectoris is and learn not to be afraid of "sudden death."

In the Canadian Medical Association Journal, Prof. John A. Oille, Toronto, points out some of the outstanding characteristics of angina.

For instance, angina lasts from about one to 30 minutes, averaging about three minutes. The pain is continuous and is not a little stab lasting only a second, which comes and goes for about 15 minutes. Pains lasting for hours or days are too long for angina.

Pains that have been coming daily for months or years are coming too often for coronary thrombosis (coronary occlusion) and are likely due to arthritis in joints of spine.

"Angina is a 'wave' of pain and is never a shoot, a stab or a prick. Angina is always the same kind of pain in the same patient; that is, it is never a sharp stab followed by a dull ache."

In heart disease, such as coronary thrombosis, the pain may and often does come on while at rest or during sleep, whereas in angina the most frequent cause is exercise or excitement. "One must find out exactly what the patient is doing at the instant the pain occurs; frequently patients will state that they get a pain under the breast bone only after eating, when in reality the pain comes on only in 'walking' after eating. Angina comes during exertion, not afterwards."

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Is cancer contagious?

A.—Fortunately cancer is not contagious; there is no need to worry.

Q.—What are the symptoms and what is the treatment for a fallen stomach?

A.—Your best plan would be to have a barium meal and X-ray examination. This will trace the food not only as to the position of the stomach, etc., but give other valuable information. A supporting belt helps most cases.

PETER AND JOHN WITNESS CHRIST'S GLORY

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:2-8; II Peter 1:16-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—A voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him.—Mark 9:7.

Christ is God! The one who comes to know that truth is ready to follow Christ, and to make Him known to others. The want of such a true conception of the Son of God weakens our convictions and hinders our usefulness.

"Where there is no vision, the people perish," said the wise man (Prov. 29:18). For want of a true vision of Christ as God, and the God-given constraint which makes men give themselves in sacrificial service, the people perish in their sins.

Peter and John saw our Lord in His transfiguration, and the glow of that experience lighted their entire life and ministry. The touch of the supernatural was on these men and their message—for they had seen the glory of Christ.

I. The Amazing Glory of the Son (Mark 9:2-6).

The transfiguration of Christ is one of those wonderfully beautiful and deeply spiritual experiences which defy analysis or satisfactory description. Poetry and art have vainly tried to depict it only to become "in fact a confession of the impotence of the loftiest art to rise to the level of the divine" (Van Dyke).

Peter was so dazzled that he could only suggest that they remain there, forgetting for the moment that down in the valley was demon-ridden humanity waiting for the divine deliverance of the Son of God (see Luke 9:37-42).

What took place on the mount can possibly best be explained as the outshining of the inner glory of the Christ. He had laid aside His glory when He became flesh, but not His divine attributes as very God. There in the presence of God and the heavenly visitors that glory shone through His humanity and His appearance became dazzling in its whiteness.

II. The Approving Word of the Father (Mark 9:7, 8).

A cloud, like the cloud which filled the Temple of old (I Kings 8:10,11), covered them, and the Father spoke out of it words of approval of His Son.

These words carry "both judgment and command; judgment concerning Jesus, 'This is my beloved Son,' and command to the disciples, 'Hear ye him'—that is, 'Listen to him'" (Lesson Commentary).

John and Peter came to a fuller conviction that He was the Son of God as they saw Him transfigured and heard the words of the Father. They learned more plainly the fact that He was God manifest in the flesh for the redemption of man. They saw in the indescribable beauty of that moment a foregleam of His coming glory. What important truths—His deity, His redemption, His coming kingdom. Have we learned them as we have beheld His glory?

III. The Assured Faith of the Disciples (II Pet. 1:16-18).

These words were written by Peter when he was nearly eighty years of age—about thirty-five years after the transfiguration. John wrote sixty years after the event and said, "We beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father" (John 1:14).

The one who follows these eyewitnesses in believing in Christ may share their assurance expressed by Peter that we do not "follow cunningly devised fables" in making known to the world the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Our faith is built on God's Word, and upon such testimony as this by eyewitnesses. Here is real ground for assured belief in Christ.

Great experiences of spiritual renewing and power lead to effective life and testimony for Christ. They may not be in outward manifestations, in fact they are most often in the inner recesses of man's soul; but they do transform men and send them forth to magnificent living for God. One wonders if much of the dearth of power in the Christian Church is not to be attributed directly to the lack of such experiences with God.

The disciples had an unforgettable mountain-top experience. Even so have many others found the secret of power. It came to D. L. Moody as he walked down a New York street, praying in agony, "Deliver me from myself. Take absolute sway." The story of what happened to him and through him as a surrendered instrument in God's hand is written large on the pages of history. Others have had similar experiences.

Let us remember that such privileges are not reserved for a few, they are the birthright of every Christian. Power without knowledge is a dangerous and destructive thing, but knowledge without power is a dead thing, resulting in a stale and unfruitful orthodoxy that in turn produces a dreadful and unchristian religious system.

Gay Ensemble for Well-Dressed Tot

WHAT the well-dressed young lady of 1 to 5 years will wear this spring is right here—a gaily printed ensemble consisting of playsuit, overall and dress. Everyone's going to be the happier for these clothes—the youngster because they are so pretty and sensible and her mother because they are practically no bother at all.

Pattern No. 8363 is in sizes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. Size 2 dress takes 1⅞ yards 35-inch material, overall 1⅛ yards, playsuit ⅝ yard; 6½ yards binding.

Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers.

From an old French word "mes" derived from the Latin word "missus" meaning a course at a meal, comes the Army's name "mess" for its breakfast, dinner, and supper. Favorite meal with the soldier is chicken dinner—his favorite cigarette, Camel. (Based on actual sales records from Post Exchanges.) A carton of Camels, by the way, is the gift he prefers first of all from the folks back home. He's said so. Local tobacco dealers are featuring Camel cartons to send anywhere to men in the armed forces. —Adv.

BEDTIME STORY

by THORNTON W. BURGESS

CHATTERER TELLS SAMMY JAY ABOUT SHADOW THE WEASEL

CHATTERER the Red Squirrel was hurrying through the Green Forest. He didn't know just where he was going. He had but one thought, and that was to get as far away from Shadow the Weasel as he could. It made him have cold shivers all over every time he thought of Shadow.

"Seems to me you are in a great hurry," said a voice from a pine tree he was passing.

Chatterer knew that voice without looking to see who was speaking. Everybody in the Green Forest knows that voice. It was the voice of Sammy Jay.

"I—I—am," he said.

"What's that?" Sammy asked sharply. "I always knew you to be a coward, but this is the first time I have ever known you to admit it. Who are you running away from?"

"Shadow the Weasel," replied Chatterer, still in a very low voice, as if he were afraid of being overheard. "Shadow the Weasel is back in the Green Forest, and I have just had such a narrow escape!"

"Ho!" cried Sammy, "this is important. I thought Shadow was up in the Old Pasture. If he has come back to the Green Forest folks ought to know it. Where is he now?"

Chatterer stopped and told Sammy all about his narrow escape and how he had left Shadow the Weasel in a hollow of a chestnut tree with Redtail the Hawk watching for him to come out. Sammy's eyes sparkled when Chatterer told how he had pulled the tail of old Redtail. "And he doesn't know now who did it; he thinks it was Shadow," concluded Chatterer with a weak little grin.

"Ho, ho, ho! Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Sammy Jay. "I wish I had been there to see it."

Then he suddenly grew grave. "Other folks certainly ought to know that Shadow is back in the Green Forest," said he, "so that they can be on their guard. Then if they get caught it is their own fault. I think I'll go spread the news." You see, for all his mean ways Sammy Jay does have some good in him, just as everybody does, and he dearly loves to tell important news.

"I—I wish you would go first of all and tell my cousin, Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel," said Chatterer, speaking in a hesitating way.

Sammy Jay leaned over and looked at Chatterer sharply. "I thought you and Happy Jack were not friends," said he. "You always seem to be quarreling."

Chatterer looked a little confused, but he is very quick with his tongue, is Chatterer. "That's just it," he replied quickly. "That's just it! If anything should happen to Happy Jack I wouldn't have him to quarrel with, and it is such fun to see him get mad!"

Now, of course, the real reason why Chatterer wanted Happy Jack warned was because down inside he was ashamed of that dreadful thought that had come to him of leading Shadow the Weasel to Happy Jack's house so that he himself might escape. It had been a dreadful thought, a cowardly thought, and Chatterer had been really ashamed that he should have ever had such a thought. He thought now that if he could do something for Happy Jack he would feel better about it.

Sammy Jay promised to go straight to Happy Jack and warn him that Shadow the Weasel was back in the Green Forest, and off he started, screaming the news as he flew, so that all the little people in the Green Forest might know. Chatterer listened a few minutes and then started on.

"Where shall I go?" he muttered. "Where shall I go? I don't dare stay in the Green Forest, for now Shadow will never rest until he catches me."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Laboratory tests demonstrate that rubber can be made to stretch from 60 to 1000 percent or to have no stretch at all, as in hard rubber.

A cubical piece of about half an inch of the substance we now know as rubber was selling for three shillings in London art shops in 1770. It was then called rubber because it could erase pencil marks.

The first articles of rubber to be manufactured were clothing and shoes.

American seamen are now equipped with rubber life-saving suits weighing slightly over 14 pounds. This new buoyant suit features a whistle, flashlight, knife and yellow hood and gloves to attract rescuers. Weighted shoes keep the wearer upright in the water.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acids and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

THE GARDEN

White Potatoes

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics

Although this will reach its readers after March 15, the traditional potato planting date, still it comes not tool late, as the weather has everywhere delayed planting. Thus, a few hints may be in order, to overcome the handicap of late planting, even as late as April 25. Everyone who can should have his own potatoes to take the place of those commercially raised, needed by the armed forces and for dehydrating.

As everybody knows, potatoes should be planted deep, and no matter when planting time comes around, even as late as April 25, the furrows should be made 5 inches below the level. The covering of the seed, however, should be gauged by the time of planting, in this way.

Potatoes planted early should be covered the whole 5 inches as insurance against the cold penetrating to the seed pieces and chilling them or actually freezing them. After March 25 the furrows still should be 5 inches, but the covering of the seed only 4 inches, and potatoes planted after that progressively more lightly covered, until April 15, when the cover is only 1 inch, just enough to put them in darkness. The furrow soil should be dragged in, to make the soil level, when the tops of the plants have grown above the garden level.

Potato ground should be prepared as deep as possible, 10 iches, for example. It should be filled with rotted material, stable manure or green cover crop. The fertility should be high, and even though rotted stable manure is used, Victory garden fertilizer (3-8-7) should be used in the furrow, up to pound for pound, fertilizer and seed. It should be used in the furrow, up to pound for pound, fertilizer and seed. It should be worked into the soil so no "raw" fertilizer touches the seed pieces, but kept near the furrow's bottom, to keep potato's roots in deep, cool soil.

The seed pieces should have at least one eye, and be the size of a pullet's egg, to weigh about 1½ ounce. One piece should be dropped at a place, spaced 15 inches in the row, and the rows should be about 30 inches apart. The varieties are Irish Cobbler, Bliss Triumph and Green Mountain, in that order.

CONTROL CAN DO WHAT PROHIBITION CAN'T!

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS:

"Judge, there's been quite a bit of talk going around about prohibiting liquor in various spots around the country . . . around the Army camps for one thing. What do you make of it?"

"Well, Henry, I size it up about like this. It looks to me like the folks who are doing the talking are shooting a little bit higher than most people seem to realize. Sort of like the salesman who gets his foot in the door and before you know it he's sold you a bill of goods. Wouldn't surprise me a bit if what they're really aiming for is to take in the whole country again. We all know it didn't work the last time. All we got was bootleg liquor instead of legal liquor...plus racketeers, gangsters and the worst crime wave the country ever saw.

Individuals Must Subscribe $474,000.00 If Boone County Reaches Its Goal

At a meeting of the bankers of Boone County last Saturday night at Burlington, the quota of $183,000.00 allotted to banks for their own accounts was overscribed in the Second War Loan Drive for Thirteen Billion Dollars in the United States.

Besides the banks' quota which is now subscribed, the individual citizens are expected to subscribe for $474,000.00 if Boone County reaches its goal.

This may look like a large sum to raise in Boone County but it can be done if every one will do their duty and subscribe to the limit of their ability, even resorting to borrowing on anticipated income, if necessary.

Go to your precinct Chairman and volunteer your services to work in this drive and you will be provided with an official pin for your lapel showing that you are a volunteer worker. Go to your bank and make a subscription for all you can possibly take. Do not wait for a solicitor to call on you as these workers are undertaking a big task and they need your help and encouragement. Quite a number of public spirited citizens have already volunteered to form a "Five Thousand Club" which means that they will subscribe at least $5000.00 each, even if they have to resort to borrowing from the banks temporarily. The banks have agreed to lend subscribers money at the same rate the bond bears for a period of not exceeding six months, where a subscriber may not have the available cash on hand but will have in within six months. The plan is to have as many subscribers as possible and the man with only $18.75 is just as much appreciated as the man who subscribes for $5000.00. We want every one to have a part in raising the quota for Boone County this time. Our boys in the air, under the seas and in the fox holes in the front lines are risking their lives for the protection of our homes and our freedom. Lets back them up and show them that Boone County and the rest of the United States are behind them with our money and credit to the limit of their needs and requirements in order to bring this horrible war to a speedy end and let those brave boys return to their families and business at the earliest possible moment. The sooner this war is won the sooner they will return and the less money we will have to raise in future drives. They will give their lives in many instances and are taking risks every day, we are only asked to lend our money on the best security on earth. Will we who are at home with our families and carrying on our business fail to do our part? We must not fail to raise our quota. Do not subscribe for $18.75 bond if you can take $100.00 or a hundred dollars if you can take $1000.00 or $1000.00 if you can take $5000.00. Act at once.

On Friday, April 9, four pupils from Simon Kenton entered the speech events at the University of Kentucky. Elizabeth Moore gave a phase literature reading, and she was selected as one from a group of twenty high school pupils to compete in the final contest Saturday. Elizabeth final rating was one of excellence. Mary Jo Elliott gave a dramatic interpertation, and was selected to go into the finals in which she also received a rating of excellence. Ila Gaskins, an eight grader at Simon Kenton entered the Kentucky Educational Association contest in junior discussion. Ila had quite a bit of competition but she was selected to complete in the finals. Ila won first place in the finals, and this entitled her to a cash award of $50.00 and a gold pin. Mary Jo Elliott and Elizabeth Moore received silver pins, Lois Spauton also competed in poetry reading. Ben Stawbaugh, a senior at Simon Kenton, was in the junior legislature Thursday night. The group was taken to Lexington by Miss Helen Ruth Gardener, one of the teachers of the Simon Kenton faculty.

Mrs. Harold Weaver, Pres.

To Hasten Victory

No American wants this war to go one minute beyond the time we can bring it to a victorious end. To hasten that victory—to save possibly the lives of millions of our boys on our far flung fronts—it is imperative that every American do his part in the Second War Loan. There is an investment to fit every purse. The most you can do is little enough compared with the sacrifice offered by our boys in service. They give their lives—you lend your money.

"They Give Their Lives—You Lend Your Money"

Annual Flower Show.

Boone County women may look forward to the annual Flower Show which will be held at the Town Hall in Florence about May 1 according to a dicision made by the Homemakers Advisory Council at a meeting last week.

Mrs. Garnet Tolin, Chairman of the Homemakers committee will announce the details as soon as they are determined. The exhibit, which is open to everyone will include tulips, iris, flowering schrubs potted plants, and miniature bouquets. Ribbons and prizes will be awarded winners.

Whether a member of a Homemakers organizations or a non-member flower lover, plan now to participate in this flower show.

661 Boys, Girls Enroll In War Projects.

Six Hundred sixty one boys and girls have enrolled in agricultural and Home Economic war projects according to H. R Forkner, County Agent. The record enrollment is increasing at each community club meeting.

Rural boys and girls will not only play an important part in food and fiber production on their own farms but many will work on neighbors farms. Special certificates will be awarded those boys and girls who complete one hundred fifty or more hours labor in food or fiber production.

Car Owners Must Form Car Clubs

The new program now being set up by the OPA and the OCD to help the nation's car owners form CAR CLUBS to save rubber. This new program of car-sharing will be necessary to obtain supplemental rations of gasoline for occupational travel. Applicants must arange to carry three or more persons to work regularly or show why it is impossible to do so.

OPA is working with plant transportation committees in big industrial plants to assist in forming CAR CLUBS at the factory or shop end. From the standpoint of rubber conservation car-sharing is good common sense, and when neighbors or fellow workers rode to work together less rubber is worn off tires than if each man drove his car alone.

Passenger cars can be operated on recapped tires while buses require tires made with much larger quantities of crude rubber, therefore all passenger cars that are filled to capacity, and used efficiently as they are in CAR CLUBS, will provide economical war transportation.

Car sharing has rightly been a requirement which applicants needing additional gasoline for occupational mileage have been asked to fulfill under mileage rationing program.

SHARE-THE-RIDE clubs are being organized by churches, lodges, labor unions and other groups. It is suggested by your Public Relation Officer of Boone County and through the local newspapers that the heads of all community groups such as above give this message to your attendance at your next meeting. Mrs. Dils, plans to have these groups act as agents or intermediaries. Workable pick-up plans are the use of windshield stickers or placecards which show the destination of the driver, such as Burlington to Cincinnati, Walton through Covington to Newport etc. This plan is now being used in a great number of the cities and is considered a success as the driver will be able to form his own CAR CLUB.

By: Mrs. Della B. Dils, Public Relation Officer, for Ration Board No. 8.

Names Wanted For County Service Board

Are you sure that the County Service Roll Committee has the name of your boy, or your friend? The listing of these Service men and women will be printed on the board during the coming week and the Committee is most anxious that no name shall be omitted from this first alphabetical list. Your help is needed to assure the completion of the list.

Turn in any names to members of the Committee listed below Please observe the following suggestions: (There is no charge for including names).

1. Only names of Boone Countians are desired.

2. Submit the name by which the person is called, include the other initial and the last name. Please check for correct spelling.

3. Turn names in immediately that they may be listed in the correct order.

Contributions are still being received. There will be no solicitations made to finance the project. The entire fund will be made of free will contributions. Persons desiring to have a part in this effort to honor those who are Serving in the Armed Forces should hand donations to members of committee or drop in collection boxes found in stores in some localities.

Committee members are: Mrs. S. B. Sleet, Mrs. R. C. Garrison, Mrs. Geo. Kottmyer, Mrs. Albert Willis, Mrs. Robert Clore. Mrs. Jonas Stephens, Mrs. Geo. Morith, Mrs. John Hempfling, Mrs. Raymond Renaker, Mrs. Ora Pry, Mrs. J. B. Berkshire, Mrs. Kathryn Feagan, Mrs. Sterling Dickey, Mrs. Essie Goodridge, and Mrs. Alan Gaines. Miss Ida Pruett and Mrs. Chas. Possett of Latonia are spending a few days with their brother, T. C. Pruett.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U-Boat Warfare Takes Turn for Worse; New Wedge Driven Into Rommel Lines As Allies Continue Furious Air Attack; Outline International Currency Plan

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Map shows Allied progress in the campaign to oust Axis forces from North Africa. Hard on the heels of Marshal Rommel, "The Fox," was the British Eighth army, under Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery. After a week's pause, during which Montgomery brought up troops and supplies, the Eighth army stormed Rommel's improvised defenses at the Wada el Akarit. The chief passes to the coast, where the Americans fought hot engagements, are in the areas of El Guettar, Maknassy and Fondouk.

TUNISIA:
Fight to Meet

Action in Tunisia continued with Lieut. Gen. George Patton's Second American Army corps fighting for a junction with British forces at Gabes.

Thousands of mines blocked the American advance. Sappers kept busy clearing the fields and later American tanks rumbled into action.

In their bid to prevent an American and British junction, the Axis tanks thrust at the American armored columns. Americans brought up artillery to heaviiy shell Axis troop and motor concentrations.

Slowly but surely Patton's men advanced along the Gafsa road. Awaiting them at Gabes were the British, who brought up their heavy guns to shell Marshal Rommel's entrenched Afrika Korps along a narrow line in the El Akarit gulch, 15 miles north of Gabes.

At Akarit, "The Fox" was expected to put up another short, stiff fight before falling back toward Sfax. His strategy calls for a series of delaying actions while the Axis completes coastal defenses in Italy.

In northern Tunisia, Nazi troops fell back toward the coastal bastion of Bizerte under the pressure of British troops. Native Arabian Ghouims, armed with knives, have been helping the British with guerrilla activity.

Fighting Before Talk

Gen. Charles DeGaulle's scheduled meeting with Gen. Henri Giraud in North Africa for the purpose of consolidating all anti-Axis French in the war has been postponed by request of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower.

General Eisenhower felt that political discussion in the midst of critical fighting in Tunisia could only have a disturbing effect. Prime Minister Churchill is supposed to have persuaded DeGaulle to await Anthony Eden's report of American reaction to the complicated North African problem.

U-BOAT WARFARE:
Turn for the Worse

Indications that the battle of the Atlantic has taken a turn for the worse were made evident when Secretary of the Navy Knox announced that Allied ship losses were considerably worse during the past month.

Although the secretary gave no estimate of the total number of U-boats the Nazis have used in their spring offensive, he said that "just as we expected and as I said it would be, there are more German subs out there."

The subs are concentrating in the middle Atlantic, along the shipping routes from the United States to England and the Mediterranean. It is predicted that the submarine campaign will become worse before it gets better. Naval experts estimate the Axis will have 700 submarines operating in packs along supply routes this spring.

To counter the U-boat offensive the United States is rushing construction of a fleet of destroyer-escort vessels, smaller than destroyers.

PROMISE:
More Farm Tools

Following a review of the legislative situation with Democratic congressional leaders, President Roosevelt has indicated that, in view of the improved war outlook, he will give more attention to domestic problems. Speaker Rayburn, following the conference, said the "President is going to give his personal attention to the question of having more iron and steel allotted to the manufacture of farm machinery."

RUSSIA:
Sparring for Knockout

In Russia, the two giants continue to spar for positions.

Sloughing through marshy swampland, hardy Russ engaged German infantry in hand to hand grappling near Novorossisk, gaining ground. Here the Nazis are backed against the Black sea coast.

In the Smolensk region, Russian troops consolidated positions encircling this vital Nazi supply base.

The Germans remain active in the Kharkov district. Two hundred miles to the north, Nazis claimed advances at Orel. Seventy miles to the southeast, German attacks against Red lines on the western bank of the Donets river met stiff resistance, the Russ say.

BOLIVIA:
'Essential Move'

Even before the Bolivian congress had a chance to formally declare war on the Axis, the nation was told that such a move was essential to American solidarity and that the country's productive facilities must be immediately expanded.

When President Enrique Penaranda and his cabinet held a conference with United States Vice President Wallace to discuss a war decree, Brazil was the only South American country at war with Germany and Italy. Bolivia had broken off diplomatic relations with the Axis a year ago.

MONEY:
Stabilized Currency?

Secretary Morgenthau called it "tentative" and John Q. Public thought it looked complicated but everybody realized that it was mighty important — "it" being a comprehensive plan to stabilize postwar world currencies and fix their values in terms of gold.

Actually involved in the program were these major points for working out a system to maintain the monetary solidarity of all the nations of the world at the end of the war:

1. Creation of an international stabilization fund (five billion dollars). This would be set up by the United Nations and associates.

2. Value of currency in each country would be "fixed" in terms of gold.

3. An agreement between all nations to the effect that none would devalue their currencies without consulting the others.

BURMA:
New Air Blows

Strengthened British and American air forces continued to demonstrate their superiority in Burma, raining bombs on Japanese supply lines with emphasis on the important railway from Rangoon to Mandalay.

The RAF dropped 1,000-pound bombs on the Rangoon railway station. Photographs showed destruction of an oil refinery, fires from which were visible for 60 miles. A power house, oil tanks and a distillation building were hit. American fliers scored hits at Mandalay.

NETHERLANDS:
Invasion Spadework?

Reports that "scores of British agents" have been landed on the Netherlands coast and are preparing the way for an Allied invasion have made their way to Dutch circles in London. The reports added that a wave of optimism, accompanied by new outbreaks of sabotage and anti-Nazi attacks was sweeping Holland. The British were said to have been landing parties of two and three bound for the interior.

BANKHEAD BILL:
And Parity

After President Roosevelt had vetoed the Bankhead farm bill (because he believed it "inflationary") supporters of the measure attempted to override this action by a two-thirds vote in congress. First scene of action in this connection was the senate floor where a day-long lively debate resulted in farm bloc members realizing that they could not muster sufficient support to bring this to pass.

These senators then became content to force the bill back to the agricultural committee from whence it could be resurrected whenever the farm bloc feit it had enough votes handy to defeat the President's action.

White House opposition to the measure on the grounds of inflation presented itself because it would prohibit deductions of benefit payments from parity in setting farm price ceilings.

FLYING FORTRESSES:
New Offensive

The American air offensive in Europe has gotten under way.

Fleets of powerful Flying Fortresses have pounded the Renault motor works near Paris, with heavy hits causing great damage among the main buildings and auxiliary plants.

Coming right back, Flying Fortresses flew over Antwerp, bombing the Erla airplane works. These works have been repairing engines for the Nazi luftwaffe. Buildings were shattered and large fires started.

Swinging at Europe's underbelly, 100 Flying Fortresses dumped their bombs on Naples, splattering 24 ships in the harbor. RAF bombers followed up the attack with another heavy raid. Wharves and the industrial area were left flaming.

Eight bombers and eight fighter planes were lost in the operations.

RUBBER:
Self Sufficiency

Self sufficiency in rubber production for the United States was predicted by William M. Jeffers, rubber director, who expressed belief that the nation will develop a synthetic rubber industry that will free the country from dependency on outside sources in the future.

"There is one very definite forecast I want to make—we'll never again be caught the way we were at the outbreak of war," Jeffers said.

He added that he envisioned a postwar rubber economy independent of any sources outside the United States. He said he viewed the huge natural rubber development in South America as "insurance" against possible shortcomings of synthetic rubber plants in this country.

LOADED DICE:
In Axis' Favor?

In the opinion of Adm. William James, British chief of naval information, the "dice are loaded heavily" in favor of the Axis in any Allied attempt to land on the continent of Europe. But, said Admiral James, ways and means could be found "when the time comes."

"We saw at Dieppe, which was a most carefully planned enterprise, how a few well-situated guns on shore can wreck an amphibious operation."

Predicting that there will be no new startling invention to deal with the U-boat problem, he said the submarine menace eventually would be beaten "by the hard unremitting work of all those engaged in protecting our trade."

NATIONAL APATHY:
General Speaks

Army day this year was passed over with little official celebration for the nation's fighting men were too hard at work to stop for festivities. However, one commanding general—Ben Lear of the Second army—took the occasion to score national apathy and lack of aggressiveness in many phases of American life. He called for the end of internal bickering and urged that Americans apply themselves to crushing the enemy. Speaking of the popular dislike of "absenteeism" General Lear declared that this situation is not confined to industry. By this he meant that unless every citizen did his or her part, whatever the job, they were defeating the war effort and were therefore—absentees.

BRIEFS

CUBAN DRAFT: Eight thousand Cubans between the ages of 20 and 25 will shortly be drafted for army service.

TRADE COMPROMISE: Bi-partisan support was seen for a compromise reciprocal trade treaty act which would allow American producers the right to seek modification of any agreement with a foreign country.

AIR LINER: Henry J. Kaiser, the shipbuilding wizard, proposes to build a metal plane that will fly 17,000 miles without stopping.

DAD'S DRAFT: Drafting of dads might be delayed if public opinion forces unmarried youths between 18 and 25 years out of deferred war jobs, Selective Service Director Hershey says.

FIRE OIL: Allied bombers hit the Japanese oil refinery below Rangoon in continuing attacks upon enemy installations in Burma. The Mytinge bridge area of the Burma Road also was raided.

Army Clarifies Policies Regarding Farm Labor

Military Units May Be Employed on Crops During 'Emergency Situations'; Individual Furloughs Not Contemplated.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

"Home on a furlough."

I wonder how many of my readers remember that very popular print of two (or maybe more) generations ago. Well, never mind if you don't (though I would appreciate a letter from any who do); "home on a furlough" is going to mean something quite different now.

I remember the original picture only vaguely. I didn't know what the word "furlough" meant. But I know there was a tousle-headed blond boy in the middle of an admiring farm family, telling his adventures.

Today, the farm boy with a conscience, and the farm family with a farm, are looking forward to the "furlough" that will bring the boy home for work, not the telling of his tales of adventure.

It isn't going to be quite that way.

The President, when the farm bloc was riding the administration its hardest last month, went into considerable detail as to what was to be done to solve the farm labor question. Since then some concrete steps have been taken but not the ones the farmers, or some of them, would have liked. They would have liked their own sons, or their own hands, who enlisted because they simply couldn't stay "out of the show," back doing the old chores they used to do. But this is what the army said:

"The army does not contemplate furloughing individual soldiers to work on farms," the war department announced in a statement clarifying policies and procedures by which soldiers may be used to alleviate the farm labor shortage.

"World War I experience demonstrated that such temporary releases of individual soldiers were of little assistance to the agriculture industry and disrupted the organization and training of the army. If furloughs were granted for this purpose, neither agriculture nor the army could be assured that the soldiers thus furloughed actually would be engaged in agricultural activities.

"Certain emergency situations may develop in which vital crops may be endangered because of critical shortages in local agricultural labor. In such cases, military units may be employed under command of their own officers to supplement the local farm labor until the crisis is over.

"Troops so employed will be housed and fed by the army and will be subject to military control at all times.

"Requests for use of military units for emergency farm duty must be transmitted to the war department by the chairman of the War Manpower commission."

Another Loophole

However, there is another loophole which all of the farmers or the farm men in service may not know about. A soldier over 38 years of age who is on active duty in the continental United States can get his discharge right now if he can get a statement from his local farm agent to the effect that he is needed.

But the application has to get in by May 1. The same thing applies to men overseas and they have until June. (Better tell them by V-Mail.)

The President explained to us twice, why a batch of young men couldn't be pulled out of a division and sent home.

You can take 10 or 20 soldiers out of an outfit that has just started training and it doesn't make much difference. But you can't take that many men out of an outfit already trained and booked for overseas. Not without crippling the outfit so badly that it really interferes with battle plans.

That's his explanation and he made it to us the other day, leaning back in his chair and obviously trying hard to get over an idea that he believes is right.

There is going to be a "land army." He said he didn't like the term because it made the farmers think they were going to have a lot of green city folks descend on them. He knows what the farmers think about folks who will scare the horses, sprain their ankles, try to milk a cow and when she doesn't give, say: "The valves are stuck."

One farmer wrote me he'd rather have grasshoppers than city folks on his place.

England's Method

The President said to us that in England they have increased food production 60 per cent. And they did it with the help of a land army, mostly women with no previous training. They got the training. A lot depends on the training.

I talked with a farmer near here who took on a city boy, green as grass. The boy probably thought shorts were something you wore and probably would have looked in the toolbox for a boar.

Maybe you heard him talk on the Farm and Home Hour. Well, I met him and the farmer, too. The kid is crazy to get back this summer and the farmer told me he was sick when he had to let him go back to school. City folks are dumb in a lot of ways. But so are farmers. It's true you can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink. Also, a lot of horses have got the sense to drink if you've got sense to lead them to the water.

In spite of dumb help or none at all, in spite of lack of machines and a lot of red tape, the farmers of the country have signed up to raise a bigger crop than they've ever raised. I believe with a little horse sense and patience, they are going to pull through.

No team pulled together until they were in harness.

If they don't, God help us and the army at meal time.

The Weather—A Dead Topic

As you know, mention of the weather on the radio these days is forbidden. The newspapers can describe a snow storm or a hot spell but the radio commentators cannot.

There is a good reason for this.

A lurking submarine could pick up a newscast, and if enough facts concerning the weather were revealed by stations in enough widely separated localities, even an amateur meteorologist—and the Germans are no amateurs—could make a pretty good weather forecast by putting two and two together.

But being unable to describe the manifestations of nature that I see on my way to work in the morning is a terrible handicap to me. Recently I've gotten around the difficulty by talking about last week's weather, and before going on the air, reading what I was going to say to the censorship officials and getting their O. K. In no case did they restrict me. The other day, however, I forgot to call up the Censorship office but the Blue Network didn't forget. I got this message:

"Censorship says you have to cut out all references to weather from now on. They say that there was nothing actually censorable in what you have said or what you have written today but so many complaints have come in from other stations that you were violating the regulations and so many other stations have been using your comments on the weather as an excuse for violating the rule, that we will have to ask you to stop discussing the subject entirely."

The following is what censorship didn't let me say but what it has no objection to my printing:

"It was pretty hard the past week not to mention the swiftly changing scens which nature provided Washingtonians—one day, not so long ago a top coat was far too heavy for comfort and in the park, the dark patches were beginning to be studded with jeweled buds and the sunlight seemed to turn into solid gold on the bursting forsythia. On that balmy day I remarked—"Well, we must be due for a blizzard."

"Twenty-four hours later the fine snow began to fall and late that afternoon and the following morning, the tree limbs and trunks were wrapped in great soft blankets of down—even the high branches were wide bands of white—but when we went home from work in the evening, the streets were dry and clean again and only here and there in the shadow of a hedge or in the sheltering cups of the brown ivy leaves was a dust of snow—like a meager sprinkling of precious sugar on the rim of a doughnut."

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Governor Ellis Arnall of Georgia has joined the ranks of Victory Gardeners, planning an extensive garden on the grounds of the executive mansion. An old barn, once used to house cows, will be razed to provide additional garden space. The governor indicated that his wife and son would be the "boss gardeners" and predicted a bumper crop of vegetables.

Cotton fabrics for women's work clothing have been cut from 14 types to five.

Government purchase orders, specifying that canners pack fruits, vegetables and juices in large No. 10 size cans, instead of smaller ones, may save as much as 57,000 tons of steel, 1,000 tons of tin, 43 tons of rubber and 5,500,000 man-hours of cannery labor in 1943.

THINGS for You TO MAKE

ANIMATED cutlery, dishes, glassware, pots and pans bring their infectious gaiety to a new set of tea towels. They offer a mixing bowl parade, a knife, fork and spoon dash, the soup spoon dance, and four more equally interesting tea towel designs, with a trio of teaspoons as motif for a matching panholder. Outline embroidery does the set in a jiffy—it could even be done in running stitch.

JUST RESTING

Only He Knows

Mistress—Marie, you were entertaining a man in the kitchen last night, weren't you?

Marie—That's for him to say, ma'am. But I tried my best.

Should Know Them

There was a scream of brakes as the bus pulled to a sudden stop, to avoid a flustered-looking pedestrian who was dithering in the roadway.

Crimson with strain and rage, the driver leaned out of his cab. It was plain he was controlling himself with a great effort as he asked politely:

"May I ask what are your plans, sir?"

Not Kidding

"See that bevy of quail in the underbrush?"

"Yes."

"Well, watch me shoot a hole clear through the red barn behind 'em."

Trouble seems to be a patriotic affliction. It makes the eyes red, the hair white and the feelings blue.

Could He?

Said Mr. Henpeck, who had just overheard his wife scolding the maid: "You and I seem to be in the same unfortunate position, Mary."

"Not likely!" replied the maid. "I'm giving her a week's notice tomorrow."

Seizing Opportunity

Man at Door—Do you believe in free speech?

Housewife—Why, certainly I do.

Man—Fine. Let me use your telephone.

His Prerogative

The conversation had turned on the ways of wives.

"Well," said Brown, "when my wife and I have an argument I always have the last word."

"Oh," exclaimed someone. "You do?"

Brown nodded.

"Yes. I apologize."

National Boys and Girls Week Scheduled.

Hundreds of communities throughout the United States are preparing for the annual observance of National Boys and Girls Week scheduled this year for April 24 to May 1 inclusive.

This year the observance of Boys and Girls Week takes on greater significance than at any time since the origin of the "week" in 1920, for never during the past 23 years has the welfare of youth been in greater danger than it is today. That the war is seriously impairing the normal development of boys and girls is now quite apparent. Alarming increases in juvenile delinquency have been reported throughout the country. J. Edgar Hoover, head of the F. B. I., now estimates that juvenile delinquency has increased at least 20% since the United States entered the war.

Boys and Girls Week deserves the serious attention and active cooperation of all who are interested in safeguarding our democracy. As the American Youth Commission has stated, "if our democracy is to continue, it is the young especially who must have a true conception of democracy... To them democracy must seem to be worth every sacrifice and to offer the brightest opportunities John L. Griffith of Chicago, Chairman of the National Boys and Girls Week Committee, "are designed to carry out the theme "Learning the Ways of Democracy."

Among the "week's" activities will be the election of local junior officials on National Service Day, April 29. Suggested plans for that day also include special High School Victory Corps programs, scrap collection contests, special war bond promotion, patriotic rallies, and national service exhibitions. Other days planned for the observance are: Parade Day, April 24; Day in Churches, April 25; Day in Schools, April 26; Day in Occupation, April 27; Day of Athletis & Entertainment, April 28; Health and Safety Day, April 30; and Day Out-of-Doors and Evening at Home, May 1. Helpful suggestions for carrying out the program may be obtained free from the National Boys and Girls Week Committee, 35 E. Wacker Drive, Chicago, Illinois.

IT'S ALL IN THE STATE OF MIND

If you think you are beaten, you are,
If you think you dare not, you don't;
If you like to win, but think you can't
It's almost a cinch you won't.
If you think you'll lose, you've lost
For out in the world you'll find
Sucess begins with a fellow's will;
IT'S ALL IN THE STATE OF MIND.

Full many a race is lost
Ere ever a step is run;
And many a coward fails
Ere even his work's begun.
Think big and your deeds will grow,
Think small and you fall behind
Think that you can, and you will;
IT'S ALL IN THE STATE OF MIND.

If you think you're outclassed you are;
You've got to think big to rise;
You've got to be sure of yourself before.
You can ever win a prize.
Life's battles don't always go
To the stronger or faster man,
But sooner or later the man who wins
IS THE FELLOW WHO THINKS HE CAN.

Next to Going Home—Service Men Would Like to Go Hunting & Fishing

Frankfort, Ky., March—"Next to going home and seeing my friends, I'd like to go hunting and fishing."

This is the statement made by 75 per cent of the soldiers in a large army camp. The soldiers designated in order what they wanted to do most, in response to a recreational survey conducted by the National Wildlife Federation, S. A. Wakefield, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, announced today. No one was surprised that home and friends appealed unanimously. Similarly, the thirty million Americans who hunt and fish should not be surprised that three-fourths of the army men placed hunting and fishing next on the list.

While discussion rages as to the merit of this or that recreational activity in the maintenance of army or home-front morale, millions of Americans, in and out of uniform, have been planning a week-end of hunting or a day of fishing.

True, essential wartime restrictions are cutting down on both the numbers of sportsmen and the frequency of trips. Gasoline will be jealously guarded for that one "special" expedition and sare-therides will fill the cars. Lakes, streams, and fields near population centers will be subjected to heavy pressure. Fishing tackle and ammunition, no longer available, will be carried over from previous seasons.

But the traditional heritages of the American way of life, which has always included hunting and fishing an an out-standing recreation, will not be entirely eliminated. To the soldier on furlough, the war-worker with a free week-end; the ordinary civilian with war-time pitters; an opportunity to escape into the out-of-doors with shotgun and dog, or tackle and bait, or a desire to look again at flowing water, wooded hills, or wild creatures, will stimulate moral to the utmost.

Wakefield pointed out that this condition has been anticipated for more than a year by Game and Fish Officials and heavy stocking of fields and streams near populated areas would take care of the rationed time, gasoline and tires and still allow both hunters and fishermen to enjoy their sports.

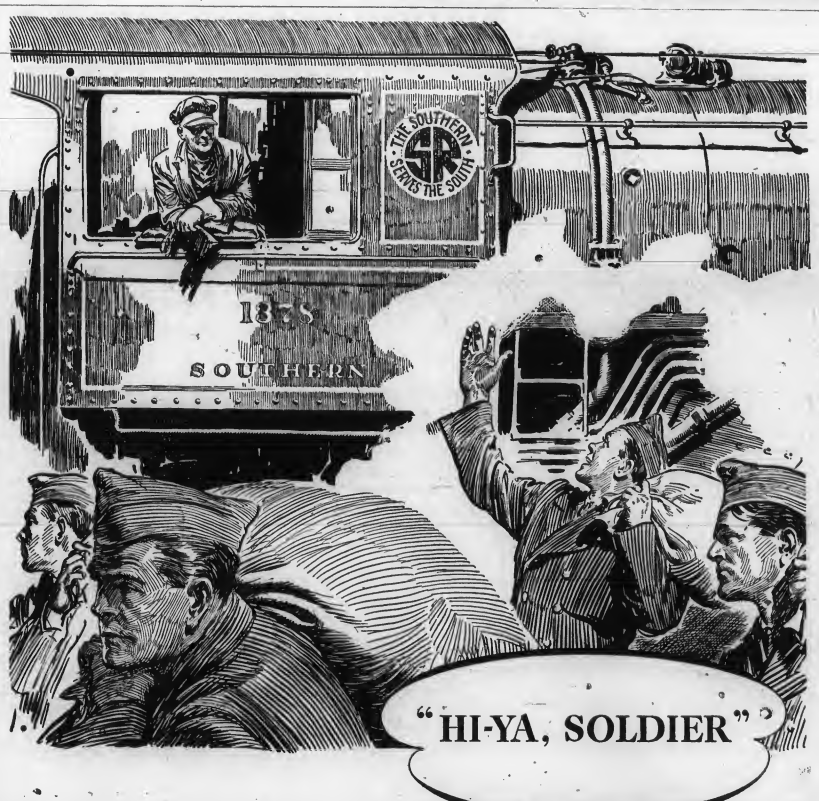
CONTROL CAN DO WHAT PROHIBITION CAN'T!



THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Looks like a pretty expensive cigar you've got there, Judge."

"Yesiree, it's a real good one, Bill. Won it from Chris down at the cigar store yesterday. He got pretty positive in a discussion we had and I had to take him up on it. Bet me three good cigars to my one that the three states that still have prohibition have less crime than the other states. Well, all I had to do was step across the street to my office where I had some recent F. B. I. figures in my desk drawer. Why, on the average, those three states have a worse crime record than the whole rest of the country. And there's a good sound reason for it, Bill. There's no such thing as a dry community. It's only a question of whether liquor is sold legally or illegally. And when it's sold illegally it means bootleggers, gangsters and more crime."

"HI-YA, SOLDIER"

IT made Jim feel mighty proud when that youngster looked up at the cab window and called out, "Hi-Ya, Soldier!"

You see, Jim fought in France in the last war... before many of the boys who are fighting this war were born.

Today, Jim's a locomotive engineer... been with the Southern Railway System ever since he came back home in 1919.

Then Pearl Harbor... and Jim began to feel uneasy. Wondered if he shouldn't get back in uniform again.

But he doesn't feel that way now. That comradely "Hi-Ya, Soldier!" cleared up a lot of things that were troubling Jim. For it made him realize that he is a soldier! In this war, too!

He remembers that tanks and ships can't be built, or guns and planes roll off the production line... without railroad transportation.

He knows that fighting men would be hungry and cold and helpless... without railroad transportation.

He knows that there would never be enough of anything, where it is wanted, when it is needed... without railroad transportation.

So Jim, and all the other men and women of the Southern Railway System, are "good soldiers"... doing their bit by keeping the wheels rolling under the heaviest transportation load in history.

Their fight is the vital Battle of Transportation... and they're keeping the tracks clear for Victory!

"TOWN AND FARM IN WARTIME"

A weekly news digest from the Rural Press Section of the OWI News Section.

Ration Reminder

Gasoline—"A" book coupons No. 5 good for four gallons each from March 22 to May 21 outside the Eastern gasoline shortage area. Good for three gallons each and must last from March 22 to July 21 inclusive in the East Coast shortage area.

Sugar—Coupon No. 12 good for 5 lbs. Must last through May 31,

Coffee—Stamp No. 26 (1 lb.) expires April 25.

Fuel Oil—Period 5 coupons now valid zones. Period 4 coupons expire April 12 in Zone B; April 17 in Zone A; expired April 6 in Zones C and D.

Shoes—No. 17 stamp in war ration book one good for one pair through June 15.

Food—Red C. stamps, valid April 11, good for 16 points worth of meat, cheese, and butter. Blue stamps D, E, and F good from March 25 through April 30, for 48 points.

"They Give Their Lives—You Lend Your Money"

The Second War Loan Drive—which began April 12—must raise the astounding sum of thirteen billion dollars to support American armies that are now attacking the enemy. An offensive army requires ammunition and materials that cost staggering sums of money. For example—one night raid of 1,000 bombers over the Rhineland takes $375,000 worth of gasoline. A million dollars worth of bombs may be dropped in that raid, and 10 or 11 million dollars worth of planes may be destroyed.

In the future, America's armies will undertake still greater attacks and these in turn will require still more money. The 13 billion dollars must be raised in addition to the regular purchase of war bonds and stamps that our people are making now. Slogan for the Second War Loan Drive is—"They give their lives—You lend your money."

Ration Books for Service Men

Service men who eat 10 or more meals per week away from the Army Post are entitled to Ration Book Two.

Army Has Victory Gardens

Some Army camps have already started their Victory Gardens and many more will soon be seen at camps where suitable soil is handy to living quarters. They'll produce whatever the men prefer, or whatever crop seems best suited to the location. Army gardens are nothing new, but now they are to be on a larger scale. However, they will not interfere with training. The men who conduct them may do so only as a voluntary off-time recreational activity. Food produced will be for the consumption of military personel only and not for sale.

Farmers Get Points For Meat

When a farmer sells a slaughtered calf direct to a retail meat market, the market operator must surrender the right number of points to the farmer, says OPA. The farmer must then turn the stamps over to the ration board.

Will Americans Be More Tender With Their Money Than Lives of Their Sons

Washington, D. C.—A blunt challenge—whether Americans will be more tender with their money than with the lives of their sons—confronts U. S. citizens as they prepare to meet the appeal of the government to put an additional 13 billion dollars into the fight in the next three weeks.

American dollars which run off to some cozy shelter to hide while American boys are dying to defend our cities and towns from destruction and invasion will face a rising demand from all classes of patriotic citizens to come out and fight.

Millions of workers who now are buying War Bonds regularly out of current income must lend extra money to their government during the Second War Loan campaign (which started April 12).

In recognition of the spirit of sacrifice which is sweeping over the land as our troops swing into offensive action in Africa and await the signal for a landing in Europe, the Treasury Department is offering a series of government bonds to fit every pocketbook.

No matter whether Americans buy the familiar Series E Bonds or 2½ per cent bonds or 2 per cent bonds or tax certificates, they will be doing their part to make the Second War Loan drive a success.

Consumer Spending Too High.

Consumer spending in 1942 was much too high to meet the war situation of 1943. Last year more than 82 billion dollars of our soaring national income went to feed the desires of Americans for clothes, recreation, foods and luxuries. As these items grow scarcer, more of our income must be diverted from such expenses into government bonds.

During 1942 millions of our fathers, sons, relatives and friends were in training here and abroad. Some were already in action. Casualties were beginning to bite into every community. War Bonds became a vital link between the home and fighting fronts.

Today sacrifice has become a way of life for America's fighting men. Civilian spending on the 1942 scale must go out the window if the home folks are to attempt to match the heroism of our boys at the front.

Not every American can take his place in a bomber or in a foxhole or on a fighting ship but he can fire away at the enemy by lending money to the government.

Return Unused Gas Coupons

Unused gasoline ration coupons and books which are no longer valid are the property of the Government and must be turned in within five days after the close of the period of validity. Holders of unused first quarter "T" gasoline coupons, which have not expired, are asked to turn in immediately to their local rationing boards.

Men Back To Dairy Farms

Local Selective Service Boards have been told to return men with experience in dairy farms. The program includes—

1. Persuading 4F men between 18 and 45 with experience to return to dairy farms if they are not in an essential activity.
2. Getting men over 45, not engaged in essential activity, to go back to dairy farming.
3. Giving men 18 to 45 thirty days to get into agriculture or another essential activity, otherwise they will be classified as available for military service.

Frozen Vegetable For All

There will be plenty of frozen vegetables in 1943 for the armed forces without cutting the supply available for civilian use, the War Department has announced. The pack of quick-frozen vegetables this year will be between 240,000 and 260,000 pounds, according to present U. S. Department of Agriculture estimates as compared with a pack of 162,000,000 last year. The supply for civilian consumption will be equal to or more than that available last year.

Fewer Points, Less Money

Butchers may no longer reduce points values of rationed meats and fats without at the same time lowering money prices, according to OPA. If the retailer lowers the point value, he must lower the price at least 25 per cent below ceiling. If he lowers the point value more than 25 per cent, the selling price must be reduced below ceiling in proportion, but in no case more than 50 per cent.

Rubber Tires For Tractors

A plan to assist farmers in their vital wartime food production will provide rubber tires and tubes for converting approximately 20,000 tractors and implements, originally equipped with steel wheels, which have been bought since May 1, 1942. Local OPA War Price and Rationing Boards will authorize conversions after certifications of farmers applications by U. S. Department of Agriculture county war boards. Reasons for certification are—1. Necessity of moving implement over the road from farm to farm—2. Soil or topography such that tractor is seriously handicapped by not having rubber tires.

Import Jamaican Workers

Ten thousand agricultural workers will be imported from Jamaica to relieve the farm labor shortage in critical areas in the U. S. through an agreement between the two governments. The Jamaican worker will not displace U. S. farm laborers nor reduce established wage rates. Health authorities will check the physical fitness and when workers contracts expire, the laborers will be returned to Jamaica. Similar agreements have been made with Mexico and the Bahama Islands.

Seed Potatoes

Retailers are now permitted to sell seed potatoes in any quantity for planting purposes only. The former requirement that they be sold only in lots of fifty pounds, or more, has been removed by OPA.

Food For Demonstrations

Schools using foods for educational purposes, and other food demonstration groups, may get allotments of rationed foods by applying to their local rationing board, the OPA has announced. Many of these groups are conducting projects directly related to the Government's food conservation program.

Fewer Trucks

The number of heavy trucks that may be manufactured for civilian use has been cut from 3,580 to 3,071 by amendment of Limitation Order L-1-H.

Reserve Peas and Beans

Fifty-five per cent of dry edible beans and 60 per cent of dry peas and split-peas are to be reserved for military needs and the use of our Allies. The average civilian will have about eight pounds of dry beans or 90 per cent of his usual supply and nearly one pound of dry peas, or about 75 per cent. For dry beans, this is about one pound more per capita than was expected for this year at the time beans and peas were added to the list of rationed foods.

To Support Wool Price

Under a price support program for wool, the Commodity Credit Corporation will buy wool from growers at prices equal to the current ceiling prices less certain allowances. The 1942 wool production, estimated at 460 million pounds, was the largest on record. Prices to producers averaged approximately 40 cents per pound, about 4½ cents higher than in 1941, and the highest since 1920.

Binder Twine Price Up

Binder twine prices will be somewhat higher this year, because of the increased cost of materials. Cordage and twine fibers, from which binder twine has been made in the past, are scarce. WPB and the U. S. Department of Agriculture have, therefore, encouraged use of part cotton yarn combined with henequin and sisal. These fibers are more expensive than materials formerly used.

More Oil For Eastern States

Initial deliveries through the newly completed 179-mile extension of the plantation pipeline between Greensboro, North Carolina, and Richmond, Virginia, will run about 15,000 barrels a day according to petroleum administrator for war, Harold L. Ickes. The column of approximately 60,000 barrels of gasoline is scheduled to reach Richmond this week. This supply will help solve the petroleum problem of eastern states. When additional pump stations at Roxboro, North Carolina, and at Clarksville and Blackstone, Virginia, go into service, pipeline deliveries will reach full capacity of 30,000 barrels a day.

More Canned Fish This Year

The amount of canned fish available to civilians from the 1943 pack should be somewhat larger than from last year's pack, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Due to a smaller carryover of canned fish in 1943, however, the per capita supply for this year may be about three-fourths of the 1942 civilian consumption.

Women On Railroads

Women employed on Class 1 railroads increased almost 60 per cent from September 15, 1942, to January 15, 1943. A survey by the Interstate Commerce Commission shows that in September 39,590 women were employed in 49 types of jobs on the nation's railroads. By January, the number had risen to 63,187 and the types of jobs to 74. State labor regulations do not prevent the employment of women in transportation industries.

New Prices For "Seconds"

New tires and tubes which have imperfections are now sold under separate maximum wholesale and retail prices set by O.P.A. The new prices are based on discounts of 20 per cent from the maximum price for perfect truck tires and tubes, and 25 per cent for other types.

Increase In Salmon Pack

This year's pack of Alaska salmon is expected to reach five million five hundred thousand cases. Last year's pack amounted to five million three hundred thousand cases.

Work absences in a Cleveland, Ohio, plant were reduced by a labor-management drive from 22,000 hours to 8,500 hours in a four-month period, in spite of increased employment.

Thirteen billion dollars—the sum the Treasury must raise in the Second War Loan drive, is only one sixth of the estimated cost of the war for the fiscal year of 1943.

EYE AID

'V' Is For Vision

Everybody has a part in the drive for VICTORY. Good eyesight is of vital importnace. Eye strain and defective vision keeps a person below normal, when it is his or her patriotic duty to feel as well and strong as possible.

Come in today and have your eyes examined.

THE 2nd WAR LOAN DRIVE IS ON!

How to invest in "fighting dollars!"

"Lend more money to help carry on the fight!" That's what our Government is asking you and all the rest of us . . . asking us to lend it 13 billion fighting dollars in the next few weeks! 13 billion extra dollars—over and above all regular War Bond buying!

We can do it . . . we must do it . . . we owe it to our boys who are fighting overseas. For their sake. . . .

We've got to build more ships! We broke all records last year when we built 8 million tons of shipping. This year, we're building 18 million tons . . . but still it is not enough!

We've got to do more fighting! More and more of our soldiers and sailors are going into actual combat . . . requiring more equipment, and more supplies. We cannot let them down!

We've got to buy more War Bonds! To help pay for the things our fighting men need . . . we've got to buy War Bonds as we never bought them before!

In the next few weeks you may be visited by one of the thousands of men and women who are giving their time and effort to the 2nd War Loan Drive. Welcome these patriotic workers if they call . . . buy from them all the War Bonds you can!

Better still, don't wait for them. Go to your nearest bank, post office, or War Bond booth, and invest more fighting dollars now! It's the least you can do to help those who are fighting and dying overseas!

Among the 7 different kinds of U. S. Government securities is one that exactly fits your own particular purse and requirements. These securities are the finest investment in the world . . . bar none! For your Country's sake . . . for your own sake . . . invest all you can!

THEY GIVE THEIR LIVES . . . YOU LEND YOUR MONEY!

Burlington 4-H Club Meets.

The community meeting of the Burlington Blue Ribbon Girls club was called to order by Mrs. Mary Scott Moore, Home Demonstration Agent at 11:00 A. M., April 6th. Mr. E. E. Fish, State 4-H club Field Agent spoke to the group on the need for 4-H Club girls taking canning and gardening projects during this year as a part in the War time food program.

The president, Rosetta Snow, resigned and Louise McArthur, the vice president became president of the club. Corrine Walton was elected vice president. Other business of the club concerned setting up goals for the years work. The membership goal was set at 40, thus leaving 10 members to be added over the present membership. All girls enrolled in clothing projects will try to participate in the exhibit and revue at Spring Rally. Each project group will be represented by a demonstration team in those contests.

Clothing and foods project groups will begin their work this week. The leaders are: Mrs. Tom Hensley, Mrs. Rosdoe Garrison, and Mrs. Vernon Pope.

There will be one more community meeting before school is out.

I fought on BATAAN!

One year ago this month the heroic men of Bataan succumbed — not to a superior enemy but to starvation, sickness, physical exhaustion, lack of arms and supplies. They're looking to us now for the help that failed to come then. Let's not fail them —

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On March 5, 1943 our community was shocked and stunned by the sudden death of J. L. Hamilton our Vice President.

The members of the Board are deeply grieved over their loss. His kindly interest and counsel will be greatly missed by the Bank as well as all who knew him.

Now therefore the following resolution is adopted:

Be it resolved that in the passing of J. L. Hamilton, the Verona Bank has lost a valuable officer, the community and County an outstanding Citizen and his family a kind and affectionate husband and father. Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be printed in the Walton Advertiser, a copy sent to the bereaved family and a copy spread on the minutes of the Verona Bank, this the 7th day of April 1943.

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.
